MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

There has not been much change in market conditions in the last week. Carnations are still plentiful and the stock is good. Roses are arriving in larger quantities, and while they are still scarce, the supply is increasing from day to day. If we have another week of sunshine it will do wonders for the rose crop. Bulbous stock is in prime condition and is selling exceptionally well.

Violets are plentiful at this time, but as the demand remains heavy, the cut is being disposed of with little difficulty. Sweet peas are in good shape and are selling exceedingly well. The Butterfly varieties are exceptionally large and fancy; in fact, are the finest the market has known for some years.

Various Notes.

M. A. McKenney & Co. report business quite good, considering the fact that Lent usually makes a hole in the sales of the florists. They have experienced almost no falling off in their trade so far.

Holton & Hunkel Co. has just issued a list of plants for the Easter trade that is quite attractive. There are a number of cuts in this catalogue which are exceptionally clear and show the fine points of the different plants to good advantage. They say the stock is exceptionally fine this year.

Adam Zender, of Chicago, was in Milwaukee from March 5 to 7. Friday he visited the enlarged plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co. at Brown Deer, Wis.

The Brunswick Lunch, a new, first-class restaurant, was opened March 7. It is one of the finest of its kind in the country and the florists received some good-sized orders for the opening banquet. These, coupled with orders for parties and dinners, more numerous than in former years during Lent, kept the sales for the week up to normal.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

BOOSTING THE BUSINESS.

Plan the Advertising Early.

Every retail florist recognizes the importance of making holiday preparations in good time, but the last detail to have attention almost invariably is the advertising. It should be attended to as promptly as any other matter of importance. It may be true that some last-minute advertising is good advertising, and successful, but it is undeniable that nothing ever was lost by making plans early; good copy isn't usually written on the back of an envelope while out to lunch, although a bright idea often is so recorded, nor is the best typesetting done, as a rule, on the ad that reaches the newspaper just as the forms are closing. Now is the time to plan the Easter publicity.

Not so many years ago retail florists trusted wholly to luck and a bright window for their Easter business. Some still do. But increased numbers each year join the ranks of the advertisers. One might almost say that it is universally recognized that it pays for a florist to advertise. The doubt is as to the method. Pretty nearly every florist among those who don't advertise is ready to do something along that line if somebody only will show him how. Showing him how is best if it takes the work off his shoulders, in addition to supplying the ideas. The florist stands ready to pay the bill if somebody will but show him results.

There are a lot of people ready to help, for a consideration, and the florist who is not prepared to give his advertising the necessary time and effort will do well to call in one of the bright young men who do such work for a fee. And do it now.

Many Ways.

There are a lot of ways to advertise. One of the oldest of sayings is that "A satisfied customer is the best advertisement." It is. Also, satisfied customers are the basis for all other advertising. If a man can not satisfy his customers it will do him no good to advertise.

An excellent way for a retail florist to advertise is by means of mailing cards, circulars or folders. He can write them himself and get them printed or he can buy extremely handsome ones that are offered, ready-to-mail, to one florist in each town. These appeal strongly to the florist who draws his support mainly from a certain class of people, or from a certain section of his town. He feels that he reaches, by the mailing-card method, just the people he wants; that his ammunition is not wasted on people with whom he has little chance of doing business. If this method is employed for Easter, no time is to be lost. In addition to preparing the literature to be mailed, a list of names must be made up. Addressing also takes time.

Some florists print a circular and make a house to house distribution. This is a good, effective and inexpensive plan for the man who makes little pretense to style, but it will not do for the florist who considers himself in the tony class; he can not enter into competition with the grocer, the butcher and the clothing renovator in stuffing the mail boxes.

But to use any variation of these methods demands early preparation. The later one lets it go the more certain he is to confine his advertising to the newspapers.

The Easiest Way.

The newspaper affords the quick and easy way to advertise. A man who has something to say, in a business way, can tell his story to more people and in shorter time by using the newspaper than by any other method. Doubtless the reason why florists do not do more advertising in the newspapers is that so many florists are located at one side of town and draw their patronage, not from the whole population of the place, but from some certain section of it;

they feel that the newspaper, with its general circulation, reaches too many people who are not apt to become buyers, the rate being high when only the effective circulation is considered. There is, of course, some fact in the theory, but florists with stores in the center of town are rapidly increasing their use of newspaper space and all will agree that for the man who has put off planning the newspaper affords the one means of getting quick action. The newspaper is organized for speed. The florist can call in the solicitor at the close of the business day and have his ad appear in the morning edition. Of course it's better to take several days to planning the ad, writing the copy and setting the type, but the newspaper gives the advertiser what he wants when he wants it. It reaches more people for less money and in quicker time than does any other medium. A florist, with the aid of the newspaper, can accept by wire an offer of stock for a special sale and have the ad in the hands of the public the next morning, by the time the stock has been delivered by the express company.

The Easter Ads.

Nobody but the store buyer can advise as to what to advertise for Easter; and nobody but the man who directs the store policy is in position to advise as to how it should be advertised. It is safe to say, however, that if no plans have yet been made it is time right now to turn to the telephone and ask the best newspaper in the town to send a man over. By the best newspaper is meant the one that reaches the most of the class of people who buy flowers. A really good newspaper has both quality and quantity of circulation. A safe guide is to select the paper that carries the most advertising aimed at the quality buyers; the florist is not interested in the people who buy cheap groceries and installment furniture.

Some florists will advertise a definite article, quoting a price on it, but others will print general ads, designed merely to remind the public that it is time to visit the florist. Either style of ad is good, the choice depending on a number of factors. If the florist can print a cut or two, describe his stock and state the prices he will have about the best combination to get direct results. If this cannot be done, then write the copy in a way to get the people in to see the flower show.

Get At It Early.

As a general rule, the retailers who have given advertising a thorough trial and careful study find that it pays best to put the money into one big, strong ad in the one best newspaper instead of splitting it up to get a smaller space in two or more papers. If the business has been developed to the point where a sufficient volume is done to warrant two ads, put them in the same paper, but on different days. Advertise plants early in the week, say Tuesday, and cut flowers later, say Thursday.

Don't put off the Easter advertising too late. Every florist has all he can do on the Saturday before Easter. Use the advertising to get early orders, ahead of the rush. Better be a little early than a little late.

Get at it now.

THE FLORISTS' SUNDAY.

A Plea for a Day of Rest.

"It's a dog's life, and there is no excuse for it except greed." The writer remembers having heard or read that remark some time ago, as coming from the lips of a florist. You and I and every other florist know the truthfulness and significance of the remark.

When I say that every man, even a florist, is entitled to one day's rest in seven, and that there is absolutely no excuse for opening a wholesale or retail store on Sunday, I expect to be contradicted. I expect that a few of my opponents will even call me a crank or a fool. We all know that the people have always been served and waited upon by florists on Sundays. We all know of the perishable character of our stock. We understand all about the churches that must have flowers, about the Sunday funerals, about the flowers worn, about the extra demand and all that. We also know that "the other fellow will sell if we don't," but all of that should not affect our convictions on the matter.

In adopting Sunday closing we may be justified in making an exception of funeral orders, which are growing fewer in most sections of the country, and of course we must make an exception of the necessary greenhouse work, but with these exceptions, I say again: It is pure greed and nothing else that keeps our stores open on Sundays.

Nature's laws know no holiday. We must watch our greenhouses, ventilate, water the plants and keep up the fires. But we all know that can be reduced to a minimum.

Excuses for Sunday Opening.

Listen now to the excuses: Your best customers demand it? Ask your best customer whether his dry goods, grocery, insurance or law business is closed, and why. He is not a fool; he will use his reason and will honor you the more. You have numerous standing orders from churches, to be delivered at 9 to 10 o'clock. Ask the church people politely whether they, above everyone else, should not encourage you and help you to close. You need not fear losing their trade.

You must be there for funeral orders, you say; then why not open regularly anyhow, at least until noon? Must a few Sunday funeral orders make slaves of you, and you in turn make slaves of your tired help? Put up those funeral orders and close. Be a man, not a slave.

I hear the florist of the country town say: "The crowds walk to the greenhouse on Sundays. They enjoy it; there can be no harm in it. Must I lose their good-will and trade by closing? Besides, I need that ready cash." Your needed rest, your self-respect and, though you may not believe it, your customer's respect, will be worth more than those few dollars gained.

Add, if you will, a score more excuses, such as fierce competition, perishable stock, attitude of the general public and fear of offending by refusal to sell. All these can be answered in the same way. Your customers are reasonable beings. Later deliveries Saturday evenings will also help somewhat.

In Other Lines of Business.

Many remember the arguments that used to be put up against Sunday meat selling. Apply the same rule to the florist and it will work out the same way—the same amount of goods sold, more rest, better clerks.

Since Uncle Sam closed his postoffice on Sundays, how does the business man get along without that necessary mail?

"The other fellow will sell if I do not," is a shallow and selfish argument. Of course, there will be those who will not agree to close if you do, but be yourself; be above the street-faker and nickel grabber.

Ask those who have practiced Sunday closing, "Would you open again?" They would say, "A business that cannot live by running six days a week is a mighty bad business and would better be closed."

Florists, you are engaged in the production and handling of flowers, the most beautiful of nature's products. By years of training, experimenting and hard work you have learned some of the secrets of nature's workings. By your patience and business ability you have placed the horticultural industries where they are. You have been gifted with an artistic nature and have made the arrangement of flowers your vocation. Think, then, of the duty you owe to yourselves and to so high a calling.

Degrading a Noble Profession.

Can you, whether grower, floral artist or merchant, afford to set aside God's and man's law in regard to the Sabbath? Henry Ward Beecher said that "flowers are the sweetest things that God made and forgot to put a soul in." Can we who grow or handle a product like that forget the Sabbath?

As we return from the national flower shows, from the national conventions of the S. A. F., or any gathering of florists, we note the rapid advance of the trade along all lines. We are glad to be in a profession that has for its business the handling of flowers.

Florists, your products and wares are admired by nearly every human being. Your skill and artistic ability are now considered necessary at almost every gathering or event. You decorate the homes and beautify the parks and landscapes. Every event in life's journey, from the cradle to the grave, needs your flowers. There is no limit to the development of our business, but let us do it during six days.

This is written in the hope of starting discussion on the florists' Sunday. Perhaps I am a crank on this subject, but I have practiced Sunday closing as nearly as possible for many years, and I know that no florist need fear losing his business in that way, as the trade at our place, starting with the products sold from three small hotbeds, has developed into a business of $20,000 per year.

Louis C. Hecock.

POT PLANTS FOR FUNERALS?

One of the florists here is trying to make it the custom for a few of those purchasing funeral flowers to send appropriate potted plants before a funeral, instead of everyone sending cut flowers for the funeral. I should like to know if anyone else has tried this and whether or not it has been a successful move.

VIRGINIA RETAILER'S STORE.

Easter, the busy season for florists, was the time at which the photograph of the store of the Hammond Co., Richmond, Va., reproduced herewith, was taken. How good the trade is at this time of year in this southern city is shown by the large quantity of all kinds of Easter stock on hand. There is so much, indeed, that the equipment and furnishings of the place are almost obscured, but enough may be seen to show how up-to-date are the details of the store.

BUSY NEW ORLEANS STORE.

One of the busiest retail stores of the city of New Orleans is the Orchid Store, owned by J. A. Newsham and Henry Scheuermann, two hustling florists. Some idea of how busy the store is may be gained from the accompanying illustration, which shows the pieces it turned out for one funeral, that of Mr. Sunseri, a prominent member of the local Italian colony.

Twenty-seven designs and a casket cover are included in this display, which was made in front of the store, and all of them were elaborately made up. Tulle and ribbon, bearing appropriate inscriptions, were used on all of the designs, with good effect. Every piece was an example of good workmanship and artistic judgment.

WHAT MESSAGE?

What message does the general appearance of your delivery outfit convey?

Does it speak of smartness, up-to-date enterprise, cleanliness, prosperity, the desire to please?

Or does it tell of indifference to public opinion, slovenliness, get-along-somehow carelessness?

Compare your delivery equipment with that of your most successful competitor, or the biggest store in town. Does the comparison show to your advantage?

If it does not, there is no excuse for it, because you can certainly afford a first-class, up-to-date delivery equipment; indeed, you cannot afford anything else.

Your delivery outfit can really be made a valuable means of advertising. It is on the city streets every day.

Make your equipment reflect your business favorably and bring new business to you.

BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

A Fine Display of Plants.

The spring exhibition, which closed in Boston March 15, was in many particulars the finest ever seen there. Never have hard-wooded plants been of greater excellence. All other pot plants were remarkably good. The showing of cut flowers, however, was not up to the mark. The rose men, as usual, made a miserable showing, there being only two entries for over $300 worth of premiums. The carnation men did better, but ought to have made a much finer showing.

Thomas Roland's wonderful group of hard-wooded plants, which was awarded a special diploma, was easily the greatest feature of the show; every plant was a specimen in perfect condition. It included some beautiful plants of acacias, Baileya, longifolia, pubescens and heterophylla among them; also such charming sorts as A. hispidissima, paradoxa, paradoxa pendula, spiralis, lineata and Drummondii. Finely flowered ericas were used for a bordering, and Cattleya Trianae third. The new hybrid phalaenopsis, leucorrhoda, and Cattleya intermedia alba were among the certified varieties.

Eric H. Wetterlow, gardener to Mrs. Lester Leland, who had the finest cyclamens in the show, and these are always well done at the Boston shows, also showed some genistas, Erica melanthera and boronias trained as baskets, chairs and tables.

Rhododendron Pink Pearl and White Pearl were featured in a number of groups and were evidently popular with the visitors. William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, and Martin Sullivan, gardener to W. Whitman, had some grand cinerarias and schizanthus. These exhibitors, with J. L. Smith, gardener to A. W. Preston, and Alex. McKay, gardener to E. A. Clarke, showed Dutch bulbs of grand quality. Among the large trumpet narcissi Van Waveren's Giant, King Alfred, Vanilla, Glory of Leiden and Trumpet maximus were noteworthy. Among tulips Pink Beauty, Duchess of Parma, Joost van Vondel, white; Flamingo, Murillo, Couronne d'Or and Queen of the Netherlands were extra good, while a few of the finest hyacinths were King of the Yellows, Kohinoor, La Victoria, Queen of the Blues, Moreno, La Grandesse, Lord Derby and King of the Blues.

The group of roses, genistas and azaleas from W. W. Edgar Co. was extra fine. The cyclamens from the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. were splendid commercial plants, being stocky and heavily flowered.

The vases of Killarney Queen and Mrs. Russell roses on 6-foot stems, from Waban Conservatories, were grand. Their new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, awarded a silver medal, is of a lovely soft pink shade. It kept fresh right through the show and was greatly admired. Hadley, from the Montgomery Co., took everyone's eye. Its delightful perfume could be detected some distance away.

A. A. Pembroke had the field almost to himself in the carnation classes. His White Wonder, White Enchantress, Benora, Pink Delight and Rosette were extra fine. In the class for 100 blooms, Albert Roper's new variety, Miss Alice Coombs, beat Pembroke's Benora. Patten & Co. had fine Princess Dagmar. Matchless, from Cottage Gardens Co., loomed up well, as did Pink Supreme from J. Leach & Son, and Improved Enchantress from R. D. Kimball. William Sim's sweet peas were as fine as ever. In the antirrhinum class, Nelrose won over Buxton's Pink. Both were well shown by Geo. E. Buxton. James Wheeler's yellow marguerites were splendid. Walter Angus had an extensive collection of camellias; these are becoming quite popular again.

S. J. Goddard had a fine honorary display of carnations, including Yellowstone, Rosette, Benora, Pink Delight, White Wonder and Gloriosa.

There were twelve entries for the best dinner table decoration, most of the large retailers competing. Society ladies officiated as judges. F. E. Palmer's first prize table had a charming and simple centerpiece of yellow daffodils and Acacia pubescens. For corsages he used daffodils and violets. Hoffman, who was second, used Azalea mollis in light shades. MacMulkin was third, with a pretty arrangement of Prunus triloba and light pink Azalea Indica.

Thomas Roland's Splendid Group of Hard-wooded Plants at the Boston Show.

melanthera, codonodes, persoluta alba and persoluta rosea being included; also boronias, chorizemas, epacris, light-colored camellias and other subjects. Mr. Roland had also three large and superbly flowered plants of Erica melanthera, which stood at intervals on the lecture hall floor. These were eight to nine feet high and six to seven feet across, probably the most wonderful specimens of this heath ever exhibited. They were awarded a gold medal.

There were splendid collections of hard-wooded plants from Larz Anderson, Duncan Finlayson, gardener; Miss C. Warren, H. Stewart, gardener; Thomas E. Proctor, James Marlborough, gardener; Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener; W. W. Edgar Co., and others.

The orchid groups by F. J. Dolansky, Edward MacMulkin and Larz Anderson were noteworthy. The last named group contained a beautiful collection of cymbidiums. Dendrobium nobile won for the best specimen orchid, Celogyne cristata alba being second,

The display of vegetables from the Boston Market Gardeners' Association was extensive and of high quality.

The attendance was good each day. Visitors from a distance were fewer than usual, and none of the New York or New Jersey growers had groups of plants.

The Awards.

The awards were as follows:

Azalea Indica, four plants, four varieties—W. W. Edgar Co., first.
 Azalea Indica, three plants, distinct varieties, private growers only—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Azalea Indica, specimen plant—Miss C. Warren, first; A. W. Preston, second.
 Palms, pair in pots—Wm. Whitman, first and second.
 Palm, specimen plant—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Acacia, specimen plant—Weld Garden, first; Mrs. C. G. Weld, second; Weld Garden, third.
 Hard-wooded greenhouse plants, six specimens other than azaleas, acacias and ericas—Weld Garden, first; W. W. Edgar Co., second.
 Hard-wooded greenhouse plants, specimen plant—W. W. Edgar Co., first.
 Rambler roses, three plants, distinct varieties—W. W. Edgar Co., second.
 Group of roses, not less than twelve plants—W. W. Edgar Co., first; Miss C. Warren, second.
 Cyclamens, twelve plants in not over 7-inch pots—Weld Garden, first; Mrs. Lester Leland, second; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, third.
 Cyclamens, six plants in not over 10-inch pots—Mrs. Lester Leland, first; Weld Garden, second; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, third.
 Cyclamen, specimen plant—Mrs. Lester Leland, first.
 Cinerarias, six plants, grandiflora type—Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first.
 Cineraria, specimen plant—Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first.
 Schizanthus, six plants—Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first; Miss C. Warren, second; Weld Garden, third.
 Hyacinths, six pans—Wm. Whitman, first; E. A. Clark, second.
 Hyacinths, single pan—E. A. Clark, first; Francis Skinner, second; E. A. Clark, third.
 Hyacinths, single pan—Wm. Whitman, first; Francis Skinner, second.
 Single early tulips, six 8-inch pans—Wm. Whitman, first and second; A. W. Preston, third.
 Joost van Vondel tulips, three 8-inch pans—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Tulips, any other white variety, three 8-inch pans—Wm. Whitman, first; A. W. Preston, second.
 Mon Tresor tulips—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Tulips, any other yellow variety—Wm. Whitman, first; A. W. Preston, second.
 Vermillion Brilliant tulips—A. W. Preston, first.
 Tulips, any other red variety—A. W. Preston, first.
 Keizerskroon tulips—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Pink Beauty tulips—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Tulips, any other pink variety—Wm. Whitman, first; A. W. Preston, second.
 Duchess of Parma tulips—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Double tulips, six 8-inch pans, in not less than three varieties—Wm. Whitman, first; A. W. Preston, second; Francis Skinner, third.
 Narcissal, collection of large trumpet varieties, twelve 8-inch pots—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Narcissal, large trumpet varieties, four 8-inch pots—Wm. Whitman, first; A. W. Preston, second; Wm. Whitman, third.
 Narcissal, collection of short trumpet varieties, ten 8-inch pots—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Narcissal, short trumpet varieties, four 8-inch pots—Wm. Whitman, first; A. W. Preston, second; Wm. Whitman, third.
 Crocus, three 8-inch pans—Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first.
 Lily of the valley, six 6-inch pots—Wm. Whitman, first.
 Amaryllis, twelve pots, distinct varieties—Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first.
 Lilium longiflorum, six pots—W. W. Edgar Co., first; Francis Skinner, second.
 General display of spring bulbous plants—Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first.
 Orchids, group of plants arranged for effect—Weld Garden, first; Edward MacMullin, second.
 Orchids, specimen plant—Miss C. Warren, first; Joshua Lawson, second; F. J. Dolansky, third.
 Roses, twenty-five blooms of Killarney or any of its pink sports—Waban Rose Conservatories, first.
 Roses, twenty-five blooms of Mrs. Charles Russell—Waban Rose Conservatories, first.
 Roses, twenty-five blooms of any new named variety not in commerce—Montgomery Co., first.
 Carnations, 100 blooms of one variety—Albert Roper, first; A. A. Pembroke, second.
 Carnations, fifty blooms any dark pink variety—A. A. Pembroke, first.
 Carnations, fifty blooms light pink—A. A. Pembroke, first.
 Carnations, fifty blooms scarlet—A. A. Pembroke, first.
 Carnations, fifty blooms white variegated—A. A. Pembroke, first; James Wheeler, second.
 Carnations, fifty blooms white—A. A. Pembroke, first and second.
 Violets, bunch of 100 blooms of any single variety—Esty Bros., first and second.
 Marguerites, 100 yellow—James Wheeler, first.
 Antirrhinums, vase of twenty-five spikes—G. E. Buxton, first and second.

One of Three Notable Erica Melanthera Shown by Thomas Roland.

Camellias, collection of twelve blooms—Walter Angus, first.

Gardenias, collection of twelve blooms—F. J. Dolansky, first.

Table decoration, laid for eight covers—Fred E. Palmer, first; Sidney Hoffman, second; Edward MacMullin, third.

Gratuities were awarded to Thomas T. Watt for four azaleas; to A. W. Preston for a display of azaleas and bulbous plants; to Edward MacMullin for bougainvillea plants; to Mrs. Lester Leland for specially trained plants; to Mrs. J. L. Gardner for six Reading Gem cinerarias; to W. W. Edgar Co. for a display of flowering plants; to Miss Cornelia Warren for a display of flowering plants; to Weld Garden for a display of flowering plants; to Wm. Whitman for a display of bulbous plants; to Francis Skinner for a display of bulbous plants; to S. J. Goddard for six vases of carnations; to Patten & Co. for a vase of Carnation Princess Dagmar; to Richard Kimball for a vase of carnations; to J. H. Leach & Son for a vase of carnations; to Walter Angus for Cherokee roses and camellia blooms; to Edward MacMullin for annual chrysanthemums; to Thomas T. Watt for a display of camellias, Statice Holfordii and Strelitzia Reginae; to G. W. Pape for three pans of Cypripedium acaule; to Mrs. E. M. Gill for a display of cut flowers.

A gold medal was awarded to Thomas Roland for three specimen Erica melanthera.

Silver medals were awarded to Waban Rose Conservatories for the new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, and to the Cottage Gardens for Carnation Matchless.

A special diploma was given to Thomas Roland for a group of Australian acacias.

A first-class certificate of merit was awarded to E. B. Dane for Cattleya intermedia alba, and to Wheeler & Co. for Phalaenopsis leucorrhoda (Schilleriana x amabilis).

Honorable mention was given to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for Chinese rhododendron No. 1324 Wilson; to Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. for a display of cyclamens; to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for a display of flowering plants; to Mrs. C. G. Weld for Antirrhinum Weld Pink; to William Sim for a vase of pansies; to Thomas E. Proctor for a display of flowering plants.

A vote of thanks was given to Walter Hunnewell for a display of ericas and for a collection of cut camellias; to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for bay trees and palms and dwarf hybrid cinerarias, and to William Sim for a vase of sweet peas.

BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

A Fine Display of Plants.

The spring exhibition, which closed in Boston March 15, was in many particulars the finest ever seen there. Never have hard-wooded plants been of greater excellence. All other pot plants were remarkably good. The showing of cut flowers, however, was not up to the mark. The rose men, as usual, made a miserable showing, there being only two entries for over $300 worth of premiums. The carnation men did better, but ought to have made a much finer showing.

Thomas Roland's wonderful group of hard-wooded plants, which was awarded a special diploma, was easily the greatest feature of the show; every plant was a specimen in perfect condition. # WORK AT ILLINOIS FLORISTS' EXPERIMENT STATION

FLORICULTURE AT ILLINOIS.

[Report made to the Illinois State Florists' Association at Danville, March 10, 1914, by H. B. Dorner, professor of floriculture of the University of Illinois.]

The work in floriculture has made considerable progress during the last year. The work has been hindered somewhat by the necessity of moving the houses from the west side of the campus to the new location on the east side. This move was made necessary by a change in the campus plans so as to provide a location for the new armory and a drill field.

The move was made during the last summer and the work is now finished except for grading about the buildings. The range as now completed consists of eight houses, covering an area of 28,000 square feet. The four houses moved from the old site are of semi-iron construction, while the four new houses, which have been added, are of iron frame construction. In addition to the glass range, a new service building was also constructed. The latter is a two-story building with basement, and provides potting rooms, laboratories, storage rooms and offices for the floricultural work.

The first experiments on roses and carnations were completed last year and two circulars are now in process of preparation. It is hoped that these will soon go to press and be ready for distribution at an early date. The delay in publication has been due to the necessity of making a careful study of the great amount of data collected. Other experiments, approved by your advisory committee, are now being carried on and the results will be published in other circulars.

Work of Students.

There are now eleven students registered in the 4-year course in floriculture, who are working for the professional degree of bachelor of science in floriculture. In addition to these there are a number from other departments taking courses offered by this division. There are now registered seventy-three students in plant propagation, eight in greenhouse management, four in floral decoration and thirty-one in amateur floriculture. During the last semester eighteen took greenhouse construction, fifteen garden flowers, three commercial crops and forty-four amateur floriculture.

Last year two students graduated from the division and are now located on commercial places. M. R. Bebb is now in charge of 30,000 square feet of glass in Muskogee, Okla. W. K. Palmer is with the F. Dorner & Sons Co., of La Fayette, Ind. One student will receive his degree this coming June.

A. H. Nehrling, who was formerly associated in the work, left at the end of the last semester to take charge of the floricultural work at Massachusetts Agricultural College, at Amherst.

It gives me great pleasure to report that work is progressing nicely, and that Illinois has not only the largest enrollment of students specializing in floriculture, but also the largest and best equipped range of glass for experimental and instructional work.

CARNATION DISEASES.

[Report of Geo. L. Peltier, floricultural pathologist, University of Illinois, Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana, Ill., prepared for presentation to the Illinois State Florists' Association, March 11, 1914.]

Most of our attention this year has been concentrated on stem rot of the carnation caused by the fungus rhizoctonia. The records from the soil sterilization experiments by steam and formalin are valuable, not only from the fact that it will practically control serious cases of stem rot in the house, but it will give us, primarily, data which will show whether sterilized soil will produce as large a quantity and as good a quality of flowers as untreated soils.

The experiments to test whether an acid or alkaline soil is more favorable to stem rot gave some interesting results and tend to show that an alkaline soil will retard the growth of the fungus to a large extent. A series of experiments which were carried on to find out if the fungus was introduced into the greenhouse through the soil or manure gave negative results, no plants dying in any of the sections. The same general experiments are being conducted at present and will be repeated next year, so that three years' data will then be available, from which it is hoped that rather conclusive results will be obtained regarding methods for the control of this most serious disease of carnations.

Temperature Affects Stem Rot.

The most striking results of our experiments of the last year was the effect of temperature on the growth and development of the fungus. The three most critical periods in the life of the plant in the house are when the plants are benched in August, when steam is turned on in the fall and finally when the steam is turned off in the spring and the temperature rises rapidly. It is clearly seen that these periods all depend to a large extent on the temperature. The death rate of the plants in the house was marked at these periods and a curve would show that the maximum death rate was reached at these points. Of course it is hard to control the temperature at these points, but with careful attention to ventilation and cultural conditions these periods may be tided over without serious injury.

Due to the protracted drought during the middle of last summer, a number of experiments in the field gave no results whatever. From observations made during the summer little or no stem rot was seen in the fields, due, no doubt, to a large extent to the long dry spell that was general throughout the state.

The same fungus that causes the stem rot of carnations was found on several species of dianthi, a number of perennials and on weeds. Experiments show that with a few exceptions they are probably all the same form and similar to the fungus causing stem rot of carnations. This condition makes it all the more difficult to devise means for controlling this disease.

Branch Rot.

Branch rot is due to a species of fusarium, which seems to work in the interior of the stem and to cause the death of the larger branches and often the main stem. The stem and branches when attacked by this fungus gradually wilt and cause the leaves to turn a yellowish green. This yellowing or dying of the branch is rapid compared with stem rot. In the branch rot the stem remains firm after death, although wilted and shriveled, and the bark does not slough off, while the tissue beneath remains firm.

The fungus may attack the plant at any time during its life. The method by which the fungus obtains entrance into the plant stem has not been definitely determined, but it doubtless gains entrance through a wound or by first establishing itself upon dead or inactive tissue and then penetrating the living tissue. At every stage in the growth of the carnation there is more or less idle tissue upon it. The outer leaves of the cutting die soon after the cutting is put in, and if these leaves are at all moist, they afford an excellent means of entrance for the fungus into the tender tissues. The plant itself may be injured in numerous ways, all of which afford an opportunity for the diseased organism to enter the plant. The fungus is not likely to cause injury to a sound plant through soil infection. However, it is undoubtedly truly parasitic at times.

Attacks Plants in Cutting Bench.

One source of the disease seems to be in the cutting bench. The fungus easily attacks the cut surfaces, causing them to lose their color and dry up, the cuttings finally yellowing and dying. The drying up of the leaves progresses downward until it reaches the stem. Here the fungus infects the stem and causes the rotting off of the cutting at the surface of the ground.

In many cases only the outer leaves are attacked, but sometimes the young leaves would dry up and die. The fungus always produces a slimy, wet rot, which is quite characteristic. Large areas four and five feet long have been seen in which all the cuttings have rotted off, due to the fungus. To pre-

FERTILIZER EXPERIMENTS.

[Report of F. W. Muncie, in charge of fertilizer experiments at the Floricultural Experiment Station, Urbana, Ill., prepared for presentation to the Illinois State Florists' Association, March 11, 1914.]

Experiments in regard to the advisability of fertilizing with acid phosphate which have been completed have shown that dried blood, supplying nitrogen to the plant, has resulted in an increase in the number of flowers without causing a deterioration in the quality in the culture of carnations and roses, in case the amount applied is not so excessive as to result in injury from overfeeding. Applications of acid phosphate and sulphate of potash have not given beneficial results when applied alone. The conclusion seems to be that nitrogen is the element most necessary to apply.

During the present year a test has been made to see whether acid phosphate, when applied together with ample amounts of a nitrogenous fertilizer, would cause a further increase in production. For this purpose the amount of nitrogenous fertilizer (sulphate of ammonia in this case) has been kept the same in all sections, but ample enough to supply the plant, eight pounds to date for carnations, ten pounds for roses. The quantities of acid phosphate have been varied from none to forty-three pounds on carnations and to 100 pounds on roses per hundred square feet; six sections, each containing successively larger quantities of acid phosphate, constituting the experiment. As would be expected from an experiment extending over only six months, the results are not yet conclusive, but results to the present date may be given.

The inconsistencies here may be due to the short duration of the experiment, or, as seems quite likely, to the fact that the soil at the experiment station is fairly rich, and does not need fertilizers until later in the year, when the stock of available food in the soil has become comparatively exhausted. An observation that sections both of roses and carnations which have received no fertilizer during the fall and winter seem to be in excellent condition would point out that the well known adage about "not feeding until the turn of the year" is worth investigating.

Topping Back Carnations.

The carnations, Rosette and White Perfection, on account of delay in erection of the new greenhouses were set in later than usual, August 12. They were topped back at this time. September 12, one-half of the house (360 plants) was topped back, while the crop of short-stemmed flowers was left on the other half. The results of these two methods of culture are as follows:

New Waban Rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey.

(1) The new growth on the topped sections began producing flowers nearly equal in number to the production from the sections not topped, about November 25. Previous to this time 761 flowers from Rosette had been secured from the sections not topped in excess of those from the topped sections. At $1 per hundred, the profit per thousand square feet of bench space would amount to $42.20. From the White Perfection sections 1,172 flowers were picked in excess of those from the topped plants. At the same rate these would net a profit of $65.20 per thousand square feet of bench space.

(2) It might be worth while to top back in order to produce a larger crop or to control the time of the large crop later, and this has been considered in the data. The data show that up to the present time the usual variation does not exceed five flowers weekly. In each variety the untopped sections have fallen below the topped sections in production, for one week, to a noticeable extent, about thirty flowers. Otherwise the production still runs parallel. Each set of plants came into maximum crop at the same time and the production dropped similarly with each. There are indications, however, that the later crop will not fall at the same time. Further study of this interesting phase of carnation growing will be made as the season progresses. A suggestion has been made to me that these results would be secured only with a variety of the "tree" type which has no great tendency to stool out, even when topped back. Probably a larger production would follow after a topping back of this type of plant.

Cloudy Weather and Split Carnations.

A record has been kept of the weekly production of flowers in the carnation house. By comparison with the weekly amounts of sunshine as recorded by the agronomy department of the Agricultural Experiment Station a method is found of determining whether any parallel increase in percentage of flowers with split calyxes and in hours of cloudy weather exists. The year is not yet far enough advanced to allow considerable data to be on hand, but the results so far indicate that a period of cloudy weather does have the effect of producing a larger percentage of splits during the following weeks. During the last three months of 1913 a period of bright weather extending from October 13 till November 10 was followed by a period of cloudy weather from that date till December 8. The percentage of splits during the period of October 27 till December 1 averaged less than five, while during the following weeks the percentage averaged more nearly twenty-five.

In the report last March, figures were given to show that commercial fertilizers applied in moderate quantities did not cause splitting. It is evident that location of the true cause of splitting will remove it from the list of things to be feared when any change of cultural methods is contemplated by the grower.

Effects of Overfeeding Carnations.

Variation in the application of large amounts of different kinds of fertilizer to carnations has brought interesting results. December 3 dried blood, ammonium sulphate, potassium sulphate, a soluble phosphate (disodium phosphate) and, for comparison and because commercial sulphate of potash contains

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

There are so many duties which crowd upon us at this season that there is always more or less danger of the little cyclamens, which are to flower next fall and winter, being neglected. The seedlings should now be either in small pots or in flats where they have ample room for leaf development. Some growers prefer flat culture; personally, I like pots better. Each method has some advantages. The plants make a stronger growth in flats than in pots, but at repotting time they do not forge ahead as well as the pot-grown ones. Still, for commercial growers the flats are in many ways the best, as they can be stood on shelves well up to the light, while the pots occupy bench space which we may like to use for some other crop for Easter or Memorial day.

Do not allow plants in pots to become potbound; give them a shift just as soon as they need it. If moved into 4-inch pots, use a little more loam and a little less leaf-mold than at the first potting. Also use a good dash of sand; this will help to prevent slime from forming on the surfaces. Young cyclamens require a fairly warm house at this season. A temperature of 52 to 55 degrees suits them nicely at night, and if they are carefully potted and tended their growth will be surprising. Plants still in flower, and which it may be desired to hold back for Easter, must be grown cool; 40 degrees at night is ample, and the glass must be well shaded from direct sunlight. Experience goes to show that as fine cyclamens can be grown in deep pans, sometimes called half-pots, as in pots. These plants do not root deeply, and growers who have tried the pans have no desire to revert to pots.

Hydrangeas for Memorial Day.

It is time hydrangeas were started. They do not require a warm house this early; 42 to 45 degrees at night will suffice. Get them under way at once, however, and then you are fairly certain they will be in on time. No matter how well your plants may look and how many heads of flowers they will carry, if none of the flowers are fully open when wanted their sales will be greatly restricted, as customers like to see at least some flowers open when buying. While it may not be necessary to repot the plants when starting them, some surface soil should at least be removed and a liberal top-dressing of rich loam and fine bone given. Once the plants start away to make growths and roots, they will quickly use up all available plant food and will need feeding regularly either with liquid manure or chemical surfacing.

Lorraine and Cincinnati Begonias.

The earliest batch of leaf-propagated begonias should now be sending up a fine lot of young growths. Some growers become discouraged at the long wait before these shoots appear, but, once they have appeared, growth is fairly rapid and it will be necessary to pot on the little plants to prevent their getting potbound. Be sure to use a light compost containing plenty of flaky leaf-mold and it is astonishing how quickly the pots will fill with roots.

While there is still time to put in leaves, the propagating bench from this time on will not be steadily warm as in winter, and, as the sun is much more powerful, the chances are against all the leaves rooting, but there will now be a good crop of cuttings on old cut-back plants, and these will root easily now and make nice plants. In fact, for small-sized plants, cuttings can go in until June. Give the young begonias a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night and a moderately close atmosphere.

Pansies in Coldframes.

The winter has been a somewhat long and severe one, but it now, happily, seems to be nearing an end. Plants in coldframes, such as pansies, daisies, myosotis, etc., should have any leaves or other covering removed. After this has been done, give the plants a soaking of water. Keep the sashes on for some time yet, as the nights will be cold, and, while the plants may look green after their winter covering has been removed, they will soon present a faded appearance if frosts and cold winds follow hot sunshine. Outdoor pansies should not have their mulch removed for some time yet.

Dutch Bulbs for Easter.

Three weeks should suffice for the flowering of any hyacinths, tulips and narcissi being kept for Easter, and, as greenhouse space is now at more or less of a premium, coldframes should be used for the bulbs. As all will now be well started into growth, no artificial heat should be necessary to flower them on time. If you have a tight frame and can lay mats over it in the event of a cold night, you have the best place possible to grow bulbs in, being certain that they will be stocky, a great desideratum with this class of stock. Spread a layer of fine coal ashes to stand the pots or pans on. Air freely on all pleasant days. In the case of tulips lay mats or board shutters over them as the flowers open, and all varieties can be kept cool by covering them in the same way when once they are open.

The varieties of tulips which sell well at Easter include Murillo, Keizerskroon, Pink Beauty, Flamingo, Queen of the Netherlands and White Hawk; and among narcissi, double Von Sion, Golden Spur, Victoria and Empress. The robust sorts, such as Emperor and Sir Watkin, are somewhat too tall and coarse.

SPRAYING AND OTHER DUTIES.

Keeping Thrips in Subjection.

Among the duties which are likely to be neglected during the rush of spring work are spraying or fumigating and disbudding. There is perhaps nothing more important than these and yet it is easy to be neglectful of them, because the plants do not seem to show any signs of suffering right away, as they would from a lack of water or ventilation.

If you follow the spraying method for combating thrips and aphids, you presumably have a certain day of each week when this operation is attended to regularly. This is as it should be, and if you attend to the matter systematically and regularly you are pretty certain to keep it up, but on many places it is done so spasmodically throughout the winter that the least rush of work is liable to cause a suspension in the spraying. Right now is perhaps the most critical time in the fight against thrips. As the warm weather approaches, these insects hatch out more rapidly than they did during the colder winter months, and even though your plants have not heretofore shown the presence of the pest in large numbers, a few weeks of neglect will give them a start that you will be unable to overcome. After warm weather sets in, they will be hatching outside and you will have to fight to keep them out. So, by all means, keep up your warfare against them and it may even be advisable to increase the number of applications.

Regularity in Disbudding.

With the disbudding it is much the same as with the spraying. It is so easy to call the boys away from the disbudding for a few days, when there is a special rush of work in other departments. Then the few days run into weeks and you are suddenly reminded of your neglect when you begin picking blooms with buds strung all along the stem. By that time the damage is done. The time to disbud, to get the maximum benefit therefrom, is just as soon as the bud is far enough advanced to be handled without injuring the remaining bud or the stem. To take off the buds after the main bud shows color will accomplish nothing in the way of improving the quality of the cut. Keep up the disbudding just as regularly as you did in the winter, when the blooms were bringing top prices. The fact that carnations are cheap during April and May is all the more reason why you should get all the quality you can during that time. When carnations are being offered at low prices on all sides, it is the man with the extra quality who gets rid of his cut.

Keeping Up the Quality.

While you are disbudding, do not forget to see that the plants are being kept growing upright. The spring growth will get away from you quickly unless you keep putting the shoots into their proper places. It is difficult to do this after they reach any length, as they are brittle and easily broken. This is one of the cases where "a stitch in time saves nine."

In a recent article of this series I spoke of the need of light shading to keep up the quality during hot weather. The last few days have been exceedingly hard on the pink varieties; bleaching the rose-pinks badly. One is almost tempted to apply a light shade to save the color, but it would be unwise to apply a shade this early, as it would have much the same effect on the plants as the dark weather of the winter. If the bright weather continues, the pink shades will gradually adapt themselves to the stronger light and the bleaching will not be so serious. There is perhaps no prettier shade of pink than the hue that Rose-pink Enchantress takes on during June. Pick your blooms a little more closely for a time, and you will avoid much of the bleaching. A. F. J. Baur.

IN "FAIRLY CLOUDY" CLIMATE.

What varieties of carnations would you consider the best to grow, for quality and size, in a fairly cloudy part of Montana? I am growing the flowers for the retail trade and am shipping them only a short distance. My stock at present consists of Winsor, Lawson, Enchantress and Beacon. A. R. S.

If your climate is so cloudy as to affect the carnations to a considerable extent, then I fear you cannot improve greatly on your present list of varieties. You will find it necessary to stick to varieties which are naturally stiff-stemmed, else you will be troubled with weak stems. The varieties you have are all of that nature except Enchantress. If that variety is not satisfactory with you on account of weak stems, then I would suggest that you grow Melody, which is a flesh-pink sport from Mrs. Lawson.

If Enchantress gives good satisfaction, then you can plant almost any of the standard sorts with good results.

Plant White Wonder and White Enchantress for white, Enchantress and Pink Delight for flesh-pink, Dorothy Gordon and Rose-pink Enchantress for medium pink, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Washington for deep pink, Beacon, St. Nicholas and The Herald for scarlet, Pocahontas for crimson and Benora for white variegated. This list does not include any of this season's introductions, but only varieties which are making good commercially.

KIRCHER'S GREENHOUSE PLANT.

Since Winfield S. Kircher purchased the Attica Floral Co., at Attica, Ind., three years ago, the plant has been steadily growing. Each of the last two summers has seen one large house added to the range, last year's house replacing a small one which was torn down. A year ago the old heating system was replaced by a complete Moninger hot water heating system, with a reserve boiler always ready for an emergency. The whole range, which is shown in one of the illustrations, consists of about 8,500 feet of glass and is still growing.

The plant produces first-class stock; a general line of cut flowers and plants is grown. A view of the interior of the carnation house is given in one of the illustrations. The business consists mostly of retail trade in the town of Attica and surrounding territory, regular shipments going as far as forty miles out to small towns in the vicinity. Some stock, also, is sent to the wholesale market at St. Louis.

LETTERING ON LAWN.

I am going to make a long bed on a lawn, and will plant the name of the place with Alternanthera aurea nana and A. brilliantissima. The word I want to plant consists of eleven letters. How big should the bed be to show up well, and how many of each of the alternantheras will be needed? I thought of having the letters and border yellow, filling up the space with red alternantheras. F. B.

The size of the bed would depend upon how far away you wish it to be read. I would suggest making it twenty feet long and five feet wide, making the letters three feet long. Use a double, zigzagged row of plants for the letters, letting them be fairly thick, so as to produce an effect as soon as possible. You could use a border of the same color as the letters, to produce a pleasing result. To plant a bed of the size indicated and get an early effect, the plants should be placed fairly close together. Allow an average of thirty-six plants per letter, and 500 plants will suffice for the letters and bordering. You will need an equal number of the other color for filling. I would suggest using A. aurea nana for the letters and edging, and brilliantissima for filling. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SINGLE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Comparatively Recent Introductions.

Single mums were known and grown to a greater or less extent as far back as twenty years ago. They were, however, largely classed as weeds and only handled by "cranks" who wanted something different.

In 1904 a collection was imported from England, where the growers had been steadily improving the type. After two years of testing, some twenty or more varieties were exhibited at the fall shows of 1906 and attracted a great deal of attention. About thirty varieties were distributed to the trade in America in the spring of 1907, and some of these varieties are still largely grown. Among the yellows are Pretoria, Kitty Bourne and Golden Star; the last named has not been beaten yet as a late yellow, for the color is extremely handsome. J. F. Angus, Ladysmith and Mrs. E. Roberts, among the pinks, are still grown extensively, while Mary Richardson is still holding its own as one of the best of the reddish-salmon colors. In 1908 there were distributed thirty-six additional imported varieties from Europe. These included Katie Covell, Gracie Lambert, Guy Westlake and Miss Irene Cragg among the best.

Exhibited at National Flower Show.

In the fall of 1908 the first National Flower Show was held in Chicago and at this exhibition the American-raised singles became popular for the first time. Alois Frey and James Livingston each staged a large collection. The type of the American single, however, was by no means fixed, as anemones and singles were all staged together without much regard for the type. The best of the anemones were sent out by Elmer D. Smith.

W. W. Kennedy, at Red Bank, N. J., had also raised a large batch of American singles, one of which, at least, Anna Spangle, is a standard in Europe today and about the best late white grown there.

In 1909 were sent out twelve novelties, the best of which, perhaps, was H. S. Bevins, a handsome crimson.

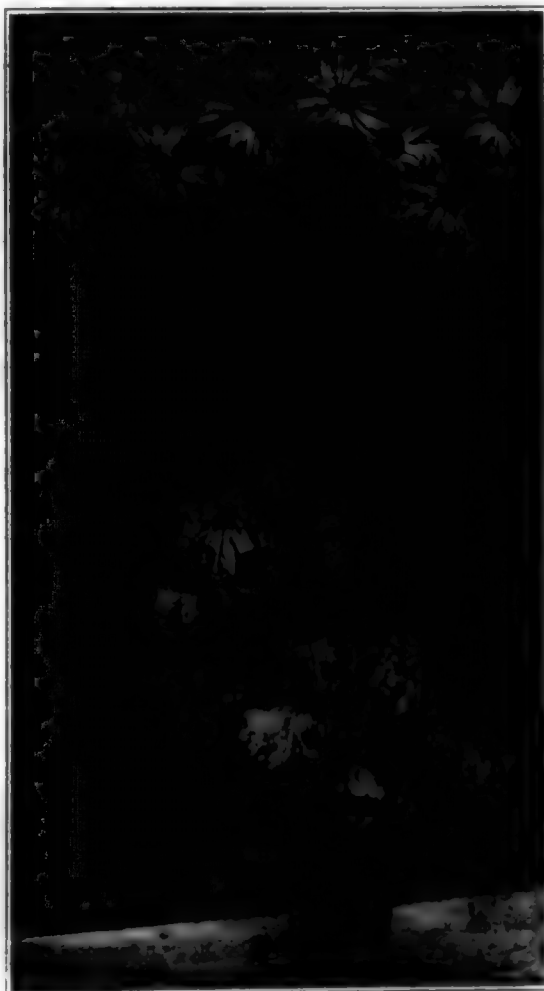

The introductions of 1910 were a great improvement over all previous varieties. This was the year of the introduction of Sylvia Slade, a lovely rose-pink, with a pure white zone around the center. It has never been beaten, so far as striking attractiveness is concerned. Laurie Hearn showed much the same color, and Merstham Jewel in its color, terra-cotta, is still the best thing we have.

The novelties for 1911 included Crimson Mary Richardson, Margaret Totty, Hilda Wells and Merstham White. It was at this time that the singles were becoming a feature in the cut flower market, and it speedily developed that the tall, weak-stemmed flowers would have to be eliminated before singles could hold their own in the cut flower market, as one of the chief characteristics of a commercial variety is, of course, a stiff stem. It was also shown that the single row of petals was not enough to give the flowers texture and stability enough to enable them to be shipped any distance without getting crushed. The singles suffered a temporary setback on this account and it was not thought they would ever take the place of pompons or even be a serious competitor to them.

The Novelties of 1912.

The 1912 list of novelties comprised, among others, W. Buckingham, which is a beautiful, stiff-petaled pink, and will be grown this year perhaps more than any other variety; Mrs. Sam Nash, Miss May Thorn, Ceddie Mason and Miss Mary Pope, all splendid additions in the set of novelty singles for that year. In the fall of 1912 varieties which had been disbudded to a certain extent in order to increase their texture and size were displayed at the exhibitions and created a sensation wherever shown. Josephine, when disbudded, produced a flower six inches across, and it was a far cry from these varieties to the introductions of eight years previous. Mensa more than bore out the promise of its youth and was exhibited at the fall shows of 1913 in better condition than any other variety.

Chrysanthemum Lorna Dando.

(A fine early variety but not enough petalage to use as a shipping flower.)

It is safe to say that the interest in singles is much greater today than it has ever been. We have developed a type that can be shipped anywhere, having three, and in many cases four, rows of petals, which give the flower substance and enable it to come out of the box in good condition; also, by practicing disbudding to a certain extent, the size of the individual flower is greatly increased and the color is much improved.

Great Improvement in Type.

At the last fall show, at Cleveland, my entries were disqualified because the flowers were not single, but semi-double. Without criticism of the judges' ideas, which, strictly and technically speaking, were right, there is no question that the single of the future must be, if not semi-double, at least a wide departure from the primitive type with a single row of petals around the disk. Again, it will be found that the singles, if planted in a bench and liberally fed, as one would feed large flowered mums, will improve so much that they will hardly be recognized with the same variety grown under less favorable conditions.

The flower garden composed of groups of singles in pots which was exhibited at the Madison, N. J., show, showed the wonderful adaptability of singles for decorative effects. R. B. Burge, which I consider the finest single that has ever been raised, was a prominent feature in this collection. Another of this year's introductions is Golden Mensa, which is having a wonderful sale on its parent's record.

Types Are Often Confused.

Many people seem to be unable to differentiate between the types of mums and class singles with hardy pompons and anemones. The ideal present-day single that will be grown extensively for commercial purposes is perfect in outline, in most cases as round as a coin. The center disk is prominent and well defined, and the flower has three or four rows of petals. Call them single, call them semi-double, call them what you will—they are the type that will predominate in the market for the next few years.

Singles should never be confused with anemones. Some catalogues include Garza in the list of singles. Garza belongs in the anemone class, and while it has had a phenomenal run as a market flower, I consider singles much better, because Garza, with its single row of stiff petals standing out from its anemone center, bruises quite easily unless carefully handled. The purity of Garza's color has been considered its attractive feature for some years, but, in my opinion, R. B. Burge has a much brighter and better color, with a beautiful yellow center.

There seems to be at the present time among up-to-date commercial growers a disposition to merge the types of singles and anemones. Two results of this crossing are Godfrey's Perfection and Snow Queen. Just what ultimate results this will have I cannot say. It is a fact that, if the singles are not to be disbudded at all, but grown in sprays naturally, the crossing with the anemone type will give stiffer stems and the sprays will, perhaps, be more attractive. Personally, I cannot concede that a flower with an anemone center can be called a single any more than the judges at Cleveland last fall would concede that my singles with three or more rows of petals could be termed singles.

The whole matter, perhaps, is open to criticism, but one solid fact remains, that the singles are enjoying a wonderful vogue and this is going to increase for the next year or two, when the commercial growers get hold of the right varieties for their purpose.

U. S. EXPRESS WILL QUIT.

It need not alarm the trade that the United States Express Co., at a meeting of the directors March 13, decided to quit business. Not even the people who are served exclusively will be inconvenienced. Operation will continue indefinitely into the future and no change will be made until arrangements are completed for some other company to carry on the work.

The success of the parcel post and the recent order of the Interstate Commerce Commission resulting in a sixteen per cent reduction in express charges are held directly responsible for the company's retirement from business after sixty years of continuous operation over some of the leading railroads of the country. The company now has a good surplus, but has not been able to make any money under new conditions, so it was thought best to wind up the company's affairs at once rather than to wait until after the surplus and capital had been eaten up, as the directors believe they would be. The resolution under which liquidation was recommended follows:

Resolved, That pursuant to the power and authority conferred upon the board of directors of the United States Express Co., by its articles of association, the board unanimously declares that it is for the best interests of the company that the company be dissolved as soon as may be without awaiting the expiration of its terms of existence, and that its business and affairs be settled up and finally adjusted as promptly as may be done. The president is directed to inform the shareholders of the company of said action of the board.

According to President Roberts, the U. S. employs 15,000 persons, is represented at from 5,000 to 6,000 stations throughout the country and its annual payroll amounts to about $6,000,000. Mr. Roberts declined to estimate the liquidation value of the company's assets to the stockholders. He said, however, that there are 1,556 stockholders, 740 of whom are women.

Naturally, the action of the U. S., while it may never go farther than this action of the directors, raises the question of what other express companies will do. It is a perfectly sure thing they will not all go out of business, or, if they do, that the government will step in. The service, which is vitally necessary in many larger trades than ours, will continue, and, no doubt, on a basis that gives the shipper better treatment than in the past.

Among the yellows are Pretoria, Kitty Bourne and Golden Star; the last named has not been beaten yet as a late yellow, for the color is extremely handsome. J. F. Angus, Ladysmith and Mrs. E. Roberts, among the pinks, are still grown extensively, while Mary Richardson is still holding its own as one of the best of the reddish-salmon colors. In 1908 there were distributed thirty-six additional imported varieties from Europe. These included Katie Covell, Gracie Lambert, Guy Westlake and Miss Irene Cragg among the best.

Exhibited at National Flower Show.

In the fall of 1908 the first National Flower Show was held in Chicago and at this exhibition the American-raised singles became popular for the first time. Alois Frey and James Livingston each staged a large collection. The type of the American single, however, was by no means fixed, as anemones and singles were all staged together without much regard for the type. The best of the anemones were sent out by Elmer D. Smith.

W. W. Kennedy, at Red Bank, N. J., had also raised a large batch of American singles, one of which, at least, Anna Spangle, is a standard in Europe today and about the best late white grown there.

In 1909 were sent out twelve novelties, the best of which, perhaps, was H. S. Bevins, a handsome crimson.

The introductions of 1910 were a great improvement over all previous varieties. This was the year of the introduction of Sylvia Slade, a lovely rose-pink, with a pure white zone around the center. It has never been beaten, so far as striking attractiveness is concerned. Laurie Hearn showed much the same color, and Merstham Jewel in its color, terra-cotta, is still the best thing we have.

The novelties for 1911 included Crimson Mary Richardson, Margaret Totty, Hilda Wells and Merstham White. It was at this time that the singles were becoming a feature in the cut flower market, and it speedily developed that the tall, weak stemmed flowers would have to be eliminated before singles could hold their own in the cut flower market, as one of the chief characteristics of a commercial variety is, of course, a stiff stem. It was also shown that the single row of petals was not enough to give the flowers texture and stability enough to enable them to be shipped any distance without getting crushed. The singles suffered a temporary setback on this account and it was not thought they would ever take the place of pompons or even be a serious competitor to them.

The Novelties of 1912.

The 1912 list of novelties comprised, among others, W. Buckingham, which is a beautiful, stiff-petaled pink, and will be grown this year perhaps more than any other variety; Mrs. Sam Nash, Miss May Thorn, Ceddie Mason and Miss Mary Pope, all splendid additions in the set of novelty singles for that year. In the fall of 1912 varieties which had been disbudded to a certain extent in order to increase their texture and size were displayed at the exhibitions and created a sensation wherever shown. Josephine, when disbudded, produced a flower six inches across, and it was a far cry from these varieties to the introductions of eight years previous. Mensa more than bore out the promise of its youth and was exhibited at the fall shows of 1913 in better condition than any other variety.

It is safe to say that the interest in singles is much greater today than it has ever been. We have developed a type that can be shipped anywhere, having three, and in many cases four, rows of petals, which give the flower substance and enable it to come out of the box in good condition; also, by practicing disbudding to a certain extent, the size of the individual flower is greatly increased and the color is much improved.

Great Improvement in Type.

At the last fall show, at Cleveland, my entries were disqualified because the flowers were not single, but semi-double. Without criticism of the judges' ideas, which, strictly and technically speaking, were right, there is no question that the single of the future must be, if not semi-double, at least a wide departure from the primitive type with a single row of petals around the disk. Again, it will be found that the singles, if planted in a bench and liberally fed, as one would feed large flowered mums, will improve so much that they will hardly be recognized with the same variety grown under less favorable conditions.

The flower garden composed of groups of singles in pots which was exhibited at the Madison, N. J., show, showed the wonderful adaptability of singles for decorative effects. R. B. Burge, which I consider the finest single that has ever been raised, was a prominent feature in this collection. Another of this year's introductions is Golden Mensa, which is having a wonderful sale on its parent's record.

Types Are Often Confused.

Many people seem to be unable to differentiate between the types of mums and class singles with hardy pompons and anemones. The ideal present-day single that will be grown extensively for commercial purposes is perfect in outline, in most cases as round as a coin. The center disk is prominent and well defined, and the flower has three or four rows of petals. Call them single, call them semi-double, call them what you will—they are the type that will predominate in the market for the next few years.

Singles should never be confused with anemones. Some catalogues include Garza in the list of singles. Garza belongs in the anemone class, and while it has had a phenomenal run as a market flower, I consider singles much better, because Garza, with its single row of stiff petals standing out from its anemone center, bruises quite easily unless carefully handled. The purity of Garza's color has been considered its attractive feature for some years, but, in my opinion, R. B. Burge has a much brighter and better color, with a beautiful yellow center.

There seems to be at the present time among up-to-date commercial growers a disposition to merge the types of singles and anemones. Two results of this crossing are Godfrey's Perfection and Snow Queen. Just what ultimate results this will have I cannot say. It is a fact that, if the singles are not to be disbudded at all, but grown in sprays naturally, the crossing with the anemone type will give stiffer stems and the sprays will, perhaps, be more attractive. Personally, I cannot concede that a flower with an anemone center can be called a single any more than the judges at Cleveland last fall would concede that my singles with three or more rows of petals could be termed singles.

The whole matter, perhaps, is open to criticism, but one solid fact remains, that the singles are enjoying a wonderful vogue and this is going to increase for the next year or two, when the commercial growers get hold of the right varieties for their purpose.

U. S. EXPRESS WILL QUIT.

It need not alarm the trade that the United States Express Co., at a meeting of the directors March 13, decided to quit business. Not even the people who are served exclusively will be inconvenienced. Operation will continue indefinitely into the future and no change will be made until arrangements are completed for some other company to carry on the work.

The success of the parcel post and the recent order of the Interstate Commerce Commission resulting in a sixteen per cent reduction in express charges are held directly responsible for the company's retirement from business after sixty years of continuous operation over some of the leading railroads of the country. The company now has a good surplus, but has not been able to make any money under new conditions, so it was thought best to wind up the company's affairs at once rather than to wait until after the surplus and capital had been eaten up, as the directors believe they would be. The resolution under which liquidation was recommended follows:

Resolved, That pursuant to the power and authority conferred upon the board of directors of the United States Express Co., by its articles of association, the board unanimously declares that it is for the best interests of the company that the company be dissolved as soon as may be without awaiting the expiration of its terms of existence, and that its business and affairs be settled up and finally adjusted as promptly as may be done. The president is directed to inform the shareholders of the company of said action of the board.

According to President Roberts, the U. S. employs 15,000 persons, is represented at from 5,000 to 6,000 stations throughout the country and its annual payroll amounts to about $6,000,000. Mr. Roberts declined to estimate the liquidation value of the company's assets to the stockholders. He said, however, that there are 1,556 stockholders, 740 of whom are women.

Naturally, the action of the U. S., while it may never go farther than this action of the directors, raises the question of what other express companies will do. It is a perfectly sure thing they will not all go out of business, or, if they do, that the government will step in. The service, which is vitally necessary in many larger trades than ours, will continue, and, no doubt, on a basis that gives the shipper better treatment than in the past.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—Trusting a stranger and cashing a check for $20 on a $2.50 order for flowers cost the Younkerman Seed Co. $17.50 in cash and the flowers, as the check was returned by the bank with the information that it was forged. The check was on the Omaha National bank and signed "J. B. Judd."

Morton, Ill.—William L. Burns has had a rush of orders from out of town and the force was kept busy to get them out on time.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

St. Patrick's day occurred last Tuesday, and everything white that could be colored green, especially carnations, felt the uplift. Last Saturday, by common consent, is recorded as a good week end, if not the best since the holidays.

Roses were in wide demand last week, especially American Beauties, which sold, when selected, as high as 60 cents each Saturday. There was an evident scarcity, but the warm, sunny weather will soon add heavily to the shipments, and the market will be fortunate if its present level can be maintained until the Easter boom appears. The shipments of tea roses increase daily, and a bottom of $10 per thousand has been reached for the older varieties. There is no overstock of the new varieties, and an increasing demand. Easter will be made especially interesting this year by the novelties in roses.

Carnations rose perceptibly the last of the week, especially the whites, and many of the retailers were busy with aniline dye in anticipation of the Hibernian demonstration. There is a surplus of valley and prices are lower. Lilies hold their average of the last two weeks. Few sweet peas, except the Spencers, are asked for, the short-stemmed being almost unsalable.

Orchids continue their low record; even the selects seldom sell at over 35 cents. Trianae and Schroederiana are the varieties now arriving in abundance. The demand for violets is so light that there has been no increase in values. The street men are their only practical outlet. Some fine callas are now arriving. Of bulbous stock there is an oversupply, especially of daffodils, the southern shipments having begun. Tulips and narcissi sell slowly and prices of all bulbous flowers are low.

The Flower Show.

Before this week's Review reaches its eastern readers the flower show will be under way. The opening Saturday, March 21, is expected to have an attendance of 25,000. Everything is ready for the greatest success ever realized in this country in flower exhibitions. Never has an outlook been brighter; never have the retail florists manifested so splendid and practical an interest; never has society been so lavish in its patronage, and never have so many hotels donated valuable silver cups for prizes. The dailies are many of them giving pages of news about the show, E. C. Vick, of the Sun, being especially liberal in commendation, as might well be expected from a son of James Vick, of Rochester. In the next issue a full report of the exhibition will be given.

Chairman Nugent says the call for tickets for the banquet already exceeds expectation. There will be over 500 present.

Among the retailers, Max Schling and George Stumpp promise some surprises. Mr. Stumpp will have a Japanese garden on exhibition, which he has personally constructed.

The National Association of Gardeners will devote one day to a bowling tournament, with a fraternal dinner in the evening.

Bowling Contest.

The bowling contest last week at the alleys in the Coogan building was well attended and resulted in victory for Messrs. Verona and Meconi over Messrs. Riedel and Anagoras. The scores were:

	1st	2nd	3rd	4th	5th	6th
Riedel .....	208	149	139	176	115	126
Anagoras .....	182	179	148	142	181	195

Total .....	390	328	287	318	296	321
-------------	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----

	1st	2nd	3rd	4th	5th	6th
Meconi .....	165	172	188	156	159	136
Verona .....	126	164	145	230	162	168

Total .....	291	336	333	386	321	304
-------------	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----

A match between Messrs. Verona and Anagoras followed and was won by Verona in three straight games. The scores were:

	1st	2nd	3rd
Anagoras .....	211	169	161
Verona .....	223	194	169

The winners of the last match, Messrs. Verona and Meconi, have challenged John Donaldson and John Miesem, or any two members of the New York Florists' Club, Joseph Manda and Joseph Fenrich preferred.

Various Notes.

John T. Withers gave an interesting lecture last week at the Country Life Permanent Exposition on "Trees and Their Care," illustrated with beautiful stereopticon views. Prof. Alvin C. Beal has also been on the list of speakers at this exposition.

Samuel Saltzberg, formerly with the H. M. Robinson Co., has formed a partnership with Gilbert, of 275 Columbus avenue, and the firm will conduct a wholesale cut flower business.

Wm. Elliott & Sons are rapidly recovering from the effects of last week's fire. The plate glass windows have been replaced and the big store is beginning to look natural again. The principal damage was from smoke and water. The auction season there is expected to open Wednesday, March 24.

The new catalogue of the MacNiff Horticultural Co. is unique and interesting. The auction department is now in full swing. Importations of fine stock of hardy roses, rhododendrons and evergreens are arriving weekly.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Mr. MacNiff in the loss of his mother.

C. C. Trepel has opened a new store at Eighty-ninth street and Broadway, with Mrs. Trepel in charge. Business to date has been quite encouraging. Mr. Trepel will have an enormous display of plants in all his stores for Easter.

Lord & Burnham Co. will hold a convention of its boiler salesmen the second week in April, lasting for three days.

L. W. C. Tuthill spoke on "The Joys of Gardening Under Glass: A Practical Presentation of the Delights of Cold-frames and Greenhouses for the Amateur," with stereopticon views, Tuesday evening, March 17, before the Philadelphia Horticultural Society.

Harry A. Bunyard lectured March 18 at the agricultural college at Amherst, Mass., on the subject of "Professional Floriculture."

Eminent visitors last week were E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and Patrick Welch, of Boston.

Robert G. Wilson, who has been ill for some weeks with scarlet fever, is convalescent and expects to be able to be on hand at the show.

G. Myer, who has been ill for several weeks with the grip, is convalescing.

There was a meeting March 16, at the rooms of the Greater New York Florists' Association, of the committee appointed to arrange for Brooklyn day at the flower show, March 24. The committee consists of D. Y. Mellis, G. W. Crawbuck, R. G. Wilson and J. V. Phillips.

J. Austin Shaw.

Louis Wagner, of 365 Tenth avenue, walked in his sleep out of a third story window March 11 and fell to the street. He was convalescing from an operation for appendicitis and his nurse was in another room at the time. He was taken to the New York hospital, but his condition was found not to be serious, although physicians were surprised he was not killed.

TOLEDO.

The Market.

The weather has been favorable the last week and trade has picked up considerably. All kinds of stock are more plentiful and of better quality. Bulbous stock is abundant, but is selling well. Sweet peas are to be had in many different shades and in large quantities. Carnations are no longer scarce and are of much better quality. Several local growers of roses report stock in fine shape. Since the weather has improved, more people are walking about, with the result that many corsages are being sold daily. This helps out sales immensely.

Club Meeting.

The semimonthly meeting of the Florists' Club was honored by the presence of genial and amusing J. B. Deamud, who is in this city representing Vaughan's Seed Store, of Chicago. The club members hardly took cognizance of his presence until a question of how to get better attendance at the meetings came up, when Mr. Deamud gave the club an illuminating talk on how the thing was worked in Chicago. He advocated serving a lunch at each meeting, which should be held at some hotel, and assured the members of a large attendance at every meeting. As a result of his talk, Frank Schramm and Arthur Kneisel were appointed a committee to look up a suitable place to hold future meetings. After the meeting an impromptu lunch was arranged.

Various Notes.

Miss Helen Patten is back after a splendid sojourn in the south, where she witnessed the Mardi Gras festival at New Orleans. Miss Patten is not enthusiastic, as she claims she got a severe attack of the grip while waiting for Rex to appear.

Paul Timm has made several changes in the interior of his houses, including many brackets, which will enable him to more efficiently handle his product.

Miss Ida Schwartz, employed by Miss Helen Patten, is visiting friends in Monroe and enjoying a well-deserved vacation.

It is not always safest to take the elevated railroad, as Louis Bessler, employed by Emil Kuhnke, found to his sorrow. Mr. Kuhnke hauls his coal to his boiler room by means of a track which is quite a few feet above the ground and when the car tipped one day last week, Mr. Bessler lost his balance and fell off, spraining both his wrists severely and bruising his face. However, last reports are that he is doing nicely and will be back on the job again in a few weeks. A. C. K.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The cut flower market was active last week. There was an immense quantity of cut stock, including everything in season, at all the local wholesale markets. On some days the supply was so large that not nearly half the consignments could be disposed of. The trade was looking for light colored stock all the week, owing to some heavy funeral orders. March 16 there was a heavy demand for white carnations, which were transformed into green ones for St. Patrick's day. Green seemed to be the principal window decoration among florists all over the city. There is a large supply of colored carnations and these have been selling at low prices, although white stock brought $4 per hundred. Roses, too, have been abundant, with Killarneys as the bulk of the supply. The supply of violets and sweet peas was so large as to keep the wholesalers in hot water all the week; the prices dropped to about $2 per thousand for violets and $3 per thousand for peas. There was also more valley than the demand called for. Easter lilies sold well. In bulbous stock, such as Paper Whites, tulips and jonquils, the supply was heavy. Asparagus was scarce all the week and common ferns are up to $3 per thousand. A good call for galax was noted.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held an interesting meeting March 12 in Odd Fellows' hall. The meeting was attended by twenty-five members, with President Pilcher in the chair. The different committees made their monthly reports. The question of holding a fall flower show then came up for discussion, and a motion was made that inasmuch as the local florists have shown so little interest in regard to holding a flower show, the matter be dropped as far as the club is concerned. The holding of a spring flower show in 1915 will be taken up sometime in the fall.

As the St. Louis pageant committee had failed to recognize the club's committee at any of the meetings or at any time except when financial aid was wanted, the club voted to withdraw its committee and support.

Adolph Jaenicke favored the meeting with one hour of interesting talk on "City Gardens." At the conclusion of his address he also answered many questions put to him by the members. A vote of thanks was extended to him.

Treasurer Smith made the members happy when he announced the balance in the treasury. For the first time the question box, always interesting, was empty. The date of the next meeting is April 9.

Various Notes.

Fred Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, called on the greenhouse men last week and Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, did the same among the retailers. Both speak well of business in their lines. Mr. Lautenschlager reports having sold three large boilers, one each to Charles Meier, Henry Meier and A. S. Cerny, who have greenhouses in St. Louis county.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, spent a few days in Chicago last week, looking up materials to be used in building his new range, on which work will begin early this spring.

W. C. Smith, J. F. Ammann, M. F. Widmer, E. W. Guy and Adolph Fehr were the club members who attended the recent meeting of the Illinois Florists' Association at Danville, Ill. They reported a fine time.

The board of education created a new office, that of supervisor of city school gardens, the first of the year, and to this office they appointed Prof. H. C. Irish, who took hold of the position March 1. Prof. Irish spent most of the winter at Ames College, Ames, Ia., as instructor in botany. Local members of the trade were much pleased to hear of his appointment.

Paddy Patton, of Smith's, has gained so much fame of late among the local trade that he is writing a new poem entitled "Fame and Fortune Are but the Ashes of Roses," which he expects to read at the Florists' Club next meeting and which he says is sure to bring out a large attendance.

C. E. De Wever, of Clayton, Mo., who grows thousands of pot roses and gladioli in season, has a fine house of crimson rambler and Tausendschon roses, which will be right for the Easter trade.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Theo. Miller, March 11, with a full attendance. A pleasant afternoon was spent. The next meeting will take place one week ahead of the regular time, April 1. This meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. J. Beneke.

Philip Goebel is now head of the parks which come under the supervision of the city water department, having succeeded Aug. Kunz, January 1. Mr. Goebel's many friends in the trade were much pleased when the announcement was made.

Vandevoort's department store had its spring opening last week. The pretty floral decorations were executed by workmen in their floral department, under the direction of David Geddes, the manager.

"Billy" Craig, of Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week, in the interest of his firm.

James Young, head of C. Young & Sons Co., says their seed and cut flower departments put in a busy week. Their mail orders were quite heavy.

W. J. Pilcher, F. Vennemann, George Madsen, Pierre Schneider, W. E. Ogle, Gust. Grossart and John Cannon were the suburban members who attended the club meeting last week.

Pierre Schneider, manager of the Oakland Floral Co., at Oakland, says he will be just right with a fine lot of fancy Butterfly sweet peas for Easter and the cut will be heavy.

H. Young & Son, at 4651 Maryland avenue, have a pretty display of blooming plants in their show house. Mr. Young says cut flower work has been slow since Lent set in, but blooming plants sell well.

Joe Witek's new store, at Euclid and McPherson avenues, looks bright and pretty. He is noted for artistic window displays and they attract a great deal of attention.

Green carnations formed the principal window displays in the downtown stores March 16.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has established new quarters at 704 North Broadway. The officers of the company say their loss is heavy, mostly by water, as all preparations had been made for the spring business. Their loss was not only in seeds, but also in birds, chickens and goldfish, of which they carried a large stock. Their insurance will not cover the loss. As soon as the fire adjusters fix the damage, they expect to resume business at the old stand. J. J. B.

OBITUARY.

Paul Volquardson.

Paul Volquardson, a well known gardener at Newport, R. I., died March 9, after an illness of about eight months. For sixteen years he was gardener for Mrs. William F. Weld, at her summer residence on Bellevue avenue. A prominent member of the Newport Horticultural Society, he had been in recent years a leading exhibitor in the shows, being especially successful in growing sweet peas. He was born in Germany, fifty-six years ago. He leaves a widow, one son and one daughter.

W. Collins.

W. Collins, store manager for Howard & Smith, of Los Angeles, Cal., died March 5, of lung trouble. He had been failing for a considerable time and his death was not unexpected. Previous to working for Howard & Smith he was with T. Wright for a number of years and before that with Morris Goldenson. He was an excellent florist and his work was always characterized by good taste. He had few relatives in the west, as most of his people live around New York, but during the last weeks of his life he was studiously attended by his employers, who did everything possible to alleviate his suffering. He was about 44 years of age.

Salem, Mass.—W. T. Walke predicts a steady increase in the sale of blooming plants. Mr. Walke, Sr., is on a visit from the old country and expresses himself as delighted with the country of the Puritan Fathers. There is much of interest here, in addition to the romantic scenery, and visitors to the convention next August will do well to make a mental note to include this place in their itinerary.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

GERANIUMS of the standard varieties are in excellent request this season; the sales made by some of the advertisers in The Review, at an expense of a few cents for Classified liners, really are remarkable.

It appears that the propagation of carnations has been less successful this year than usual. Not so many growers have surplus stock to offer. Unless the season in the field proves more favorable than usual there is likely to be another scarcity of field-grown plants such as resulted from last summer's drought.

A WHOLESALE florist recently was heard to remark that "to do business one must be ready to give credit more freely than ever before." Quite the contrary. The tendency in the trade is in the direction of less credit and more prompt collections. It has been found that the other system did not pay.

THERE always is a good place for the young florist who, in addition to knowing a little something about the business, can take hold of a job and put it through each of its details to a complete and successful finish. Men who are able to finish what they start are so rare that most of them who take up the florists' trade soon find their way into business for themselves.

WORTH THE MONEY.

One of the pleasant features of publishing The Review is that so many people comment that they pay their bills to it with pleasure—they are getting good service. Like this:

We are sold out for the present, but shall have plenty of stock a little later and will be with you again. Mail statement and we will send check promptly, as it was well worth the money.—Majestic Floral Co., Texarkana, Ark., March 14, 1914.

GARDENERS' REUNION.

The gardeners' reunion, which for the last few years has been held in New York during the fall, but which was postponed last year until the International Flower Show this spring, will occur on Tuesday, March 24, at Thum's bowling alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street, New York.

This reunion, which is not under the auspices of any one organization, but is conducted by a committee composed of members of various local societies, will assume the character of a bowling tournament throughout the day, to be followed by a dinner in the evening.

The chairman of the arrangements committee is James Stuart, of Mamaroneck, N. Y. He reports that he has already secured many prizes and that the indications are that there will be a good attendance.

The gardeners and their friends are invited to participate in this reunion. Tickets, which will include the bowling and dinner, may be purchased by addressing James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y., or by applying to him during the flower show.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The week has been one of improving demand but such overabundant supply that it has been difficult to take advantage of the increased call for flowers. On the whole, however, conditions have been considerably better than during the first seven days of Lent, especially as regards carnations.

St. Patrick's day cut a big figure. Old as is the idea of the dyed flower, greater quantities of dye were sold this year than ever before, but there were more white carnations than were called for. Growers had accumulated white, so that there was a large supply and 3 to 4 cents was the best price; only a few, even of the finest, fetched more than that, while there were quantities that were well sold at 2 cents. It again illustrated the foolishness of holding stock, as fresh white brought more money all through the week than did even the best on the eve of St. Patrick's day. Last week good white brought about one-third more money than did fancy carnations of other colors and on the medium grades the difference was much greater. March 14, however, some of the wholesalers cleaned up on carnations for the first time in over two weeks. There was a sale for even the poorest carnations at some price, where early in Lent it was impossible to clean up at any price.

The flower that was in the worst situation in the last week was the sweet pea. No matter if the new winter-blooming Spencers are the finest peas ever offered, putting the old type completely out of the running, and no matter if the seed did cost $128 per pound, the sweet pea market has been "all shot to pieces." There was a time when the supply of indoor sweet peas was in a few hands; now everybody has them and, the supply being ample, to say the least, the buyers have been in control of the situation. The selection has of course been according to the price, but the boys who only handle flowers when they can buy at a few

FANCY STOCK--FOR EASTER SHIPMENT

REALLY GOOD LILIES will not be plentiful this Easter—too many that were too early and will be in bad shape by Easter. But our lilies will be fine—none better—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even. They will run 3 to 5 flowers to the stem and will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100, for shipment without rehandling. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for.

Special long, fancy..	$15.00	$125.00
Medium length.....	12.50	100.00
Short .....	10.00	80.00

FANCY ROSES

We never have had finer roses than right now, and the supply will continue large until the end of the season. We are not heavily supplied with short roses at this time of year—our specialty is a little better grade of roses than can be had elsewhere in quantity—and long stems and fine flowers go together. We offer a full line:

MILADY	KILLARNEY	RICHMOND
WARD	SUNBURST	BULGARIE
WHITE KILLARNEY	KILLARNEY QUEEN

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We are headquarters for the fancy winter-blooming Sweet Peas of the Spencer type. Light pink, Blanche Ferry pink, dark pink and lavender. They are wonderful sellers. Now in their prime. Prices reasonable. Try them.

CARNATIONS

For years it has been recognized that we have the highest average quality of any large supply of carnations—almost all of our stock will meet the needs of the most exacting buyer. It not only is good stock when it leaves us, but it is good stock when it reaches the out-of-town retailer—and it pleases HIS customers.

VIOLETS

A large supply, home-grown singles, home-grown doubles and Hudson River doubles.

VALLEY

You always can get fine Valley here. We handle the Chicago Market brand exclusively.

FANCY CATTLEYA ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are home-grown and will give better satisfaction than the lower priced stock that is reconsigned by Eastern commission houses.

EASTER LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies every day in the year.

cents per bunch have been able to do a thriving business on what was left after the regular trade had been supplied.

There has been an abundance of all roses except American Beauties. One or two important growers who were among the earliest to come into crop after the January intermission have been cutting a little less heavily, but there has been more than enough. Average prices have been further reduced by the practice of wholesalers having a surplus of wiring special offers to the other fellows' regular customers. It is a method that gets few orders, but which results in depressing prices all around. Of course yellow roses are less abundant than red or white, and these less plentiful than pink. Really first-class Beauties continue scarce, especially the long stems, except the kind that are leafless for the lower half.

Violets have been so plentiful as to sell at as low rates as ever are quoted. Bulbous stock seems a little less abundant, but still is plentiful. There are plenty of Easter lilies and callas. Orchids are not in large supply, but the demand is light. Valley is abundant, for the call is spasmodic.

The summer day, March 15, was responsible for the market being especially heavily loaded with stock at the opening of this week.

The Charity Bazaars.

"Many lines of business are more or less affected by the sales at charity bazaars," says E. Wienhoeber, "but it seems the retail florists get considerably the worst of it." He was speaking of the annual Easter sale of flowers at the Congress hotel, conducted by wealthy ladies, for charity. "You see," added Mr. Wienhoeber, "the retail florist is asked to donate flowers and the ladies sell them to the retailer's customers, thereby cutting him out of just that much business." This is the fourth year the ladies have had this Easter flower sale. Heretofore the retailers have donated a large part of the stock the ladies sold, for no other reason than that those who asked it were valued customers. But this year practically all the retailers are refusing donations; the best they will do is to supply stock at cost. One lady to

THE BEST—THE BEST

—READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDER—

Randall's Easter crop of Lilies is famous—everybody who ever has tried them knows that there never are any finer and seldom any as good. For years and years Randall's Lilies have been the Standard by which all other Lilies have been judged. Some years one grower and some years another will claim to have Lilies "as good as Randall's," but Randall's Lilies always have been acknowledged as the leader. These are true Giganteums—the best bulbs money would buy, forced by the best grower we know. Naturally, we have the best flowers. Those who have had them before will want them again; those who use them this year for the first time will become regular customers. They will be packed at the greenhouses in wooden boxes of 100 flowers each.

Retailers Plan Exhibition.

A trade exhibition announced as the "first annual" is being planned by the Retail Florists' Association of Chicago. It is to be held on the afternoon and evening of March 23 and 24 in the hall back of J. L. Raske's flower store at 140 West Jackson boulevard. Everybody who has anything of interest to the store men is being invited to exhibit, space gratis, and a large display is expected, as "this exhibit will bring together most of the prominent retail florists of Chicago," according to the letter of H. Dieu Schiller, recording secretary, 4509 Broadway, to whom all communications should be addressed. The other officers are: President, George Stollery; vice-president, F. O. Franzen; treasurer, Louis Wittbold; financial secretary, A. Vanderpoel.

Credit Association Working.

The Wholesale Florists' Credit Association has opened an office at 117 North Dearborn street, in charge of F. S. Webb, and is busy compiling records. Thus far the membership is largely local, but the scope of the organization is national. Manager Webb states that all but three of the Chicago wholesale cut flower houses subscribed at the start.

Various Notes.

Twenty-four years is a long time to sell flowers in one place, but F. R. Weissgerber is preparing to celebrate his silver jubilee at the corner of North Hamilton and Cornelia avenues. He has a small range of glass back of the store, where he grows ferns and bedding plants, wholesaling any not needed in his local retail trade. Formerly he used considerable of his space for lilies, but he found it more profitable to buy all his cut flowers and use his glass for plants. Miss Carrie Weissgerber does much of the buying and has charge of the store. "She is my right-hand man," her father says.

The Always Reliable Wholesale Florists

Reliability, from an out-of-town buyer's point of view, calls for more than a large supply of stock—it calls for unceasing watchfulness, much personal effort, and a constant care that the customer gets his order filled in full, on the right train, and with the right grade of stock. It's easy to ship orders short—but the item not sent usually is the one the buyer most needed.

We have built up our large shipping trade—north, east, west and south—not only by having at all times a large supply of stock, but by using great care to see that every order was filled AS WANTED.

At present we have a specially large and fine supply of

Before an audience of 300 ladies, members of the Colony Club, Misses Virginia and Edna Poehlmann won much praise for their dancing Lucky Friday, March 13. Each of the young ladies played the accompaniment for the other's dancing. In costume, Miss Virginia did the toe dance, a difficult feat, not often seen in the performance of any but a professional dancer of long training. Miss Edna's dance was the waltz brillante. The wives of the Poehlmann brothers, John, Adolph and August, are active members of Illini Village and the young people are frequent entertainers at Colony Club affairs.

The Mrs. Russell rose has acquitted itself well enough at Emil Buettner's so that it will be given a second trial, 2,000 plants being used in place of the 250 now on the bench. Mr. Buettner says he hopes it may prove to be a dark weather rose, his plants having done especially well during January and February.

Sports of Killarney are everywhere.

Wietor Bros. have one that is so deep in color that a flower of it in a bunch of Killarney looks almost like a red rose among the pink. They call it Wietor's Brilliant.

With 90,000 feet of glass producing stock for the Chicago market, O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., says this has been their best season to date. Although Beauties have not turned in so much money as last year, Killarneys have done better.

The reason why galax leaves have not sold so well as usual this year, according to E. E. Pieser, is that the trade is using so many prepared magnolia leaves. If the supply of galax proves to have been reduced by the snows in North Carolina this winter, Mr. Pieser believes it will not inconvenience the trade.

Since he began advertising "Blue Ribbon Roses" in the daily papers Louis Wittbold says the entire cut of the George Wittbold Co., at Edgebrook, has been disposed of at retail. The stock has been excellent.

Led by John Zech and his son, Ollie Zech, a team of city bowlers will visit Maywood March 20, leaving on the 6:30 train, to fulfill an engagement made for them by Walter Amling, son of W. H. Amling.

When seen at the store of Kyle & Foerster March 16 Frank Schramm was taking a day off after a busy winter during which he has changed his heating system from hot water to steam. He has six houses at Arlington Heights. A 100 horse-power Freeman boiler first was installed and then new piping was installed in one house, after which the hot water pipes were torn out. The whole range was thus converted, one house at a time. During the summer another 100 horse-power Freeman boiler is to be put in and for next season the place will be planted exclusively to roses.

After having served most capably for six years, Miss Marie Ollmert has resigned her position in the office of C. W. McKellar and removed to Denver with a sister, hoping thereby to

C. Schupp says Hadley and Killarney Brilliant will be added to the list.

That neither the A. L. Randall Co. nor any of its employees has any connection with the Chicago Decorating Co. is the unequivocal statement of Frank Johnson, secretary of the Randall corporation.

The Cook County Florists' Association will hold its regular meeting at the Tavern March 19. It will be installation night. The subject of affiliation with the S. A. F. will come up.

Divided into lots according to the heat needed by each, Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg has 3,000 pots of lilies this season. He never has made lilies a specialty nor sold them in pots outside the city.

We were in the height of the Easter rush at this time last year and C. L. Washburn comments that it is not possible to compare business conditions this month with those of a year ago; not till March and April can be put together and compared with the same two months of 1913 will any conclusion be trustworthy.

The increased supply of callas is commented on by A. L. Vaughan, who says he fears the crop is too late to give the growers the usual returns.

Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, has thrown out a house of Killarneys that could not make an Easter crop and is planting it with Milady, about 6,000 plants.

Counter trade this week has begun to boom at the big Madison street store of W. W. Barnard Co.

John Michelsen says double violets are the wholesaler's most difficult proposition at present.

Things are active at the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street. A new front is being put in the store of Lubliner & Trinz and work is being rushed on fitting up the new store of the Bohannon Floral Co. to have it ready for Easter.

One of the few growers cutting stocks in quantity is S. Wiffin, of Des Plaines, according to O. A. Tonner. Mr. Wiffin's principal crops are snapdragon, sweet peas and stocks.

Returning from a western trip, R. J. Parker, with the A. L. Randall Co., says preparations are everywhere afoot for a tremendous Easter.

Passing through town March 15, President Theodore Wirth was joined by J. J. Hess, of Omaha; J. A. Evans, of Richmond; August Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, and George Asmus, chairman of the national flower show committee, for the trip to Boston to the annual meeting of the S. A. F. directors.

The Chicago delegation to the S. A. F. directors' meeting at Boston will move over to New York March 21 to take in the spring show and Victor Bergman, of O. J. Friedman's, will go east March 22 for the same purpose.

A stubborn cold has incapacitated John Sinner for business this week, and the fear is expressed that pneumonia may develop.

F. C. Hoerber congratulates himself that the range of Hoerber Bros., at Des Plaines, is in better shape than at any time since the big storm hit it last spring.

M. C. Gunterberg looks forward to the biggest Easter on record.

Paul R. Klingsporn intimates that if conditions continue to improve as they thing turns up every day to keep the pot boiling; if it isn't one thing, it's another to keep things moving.

Following the Danville convention, Frank Farney, of M. Rice Co., moved his exhibit to Chicago and staged it in a room at the Sherman House.

A visitor last week was James M. Pierce, who runs a string of farm papers at Madison, Des Moines and Kansas City as his principal occupation, but who gets a good deal of fun and considerable profit out of a greenhouse establishment at Des Moines.

PHILADELPHIA.*The Eastern Market.

The market shows strength on the lower Lenten price level. During several days of the week ending March 18 the wholesale cut flower houses have been extremely busy, disposing of great quantities of flowers at moderate figures. There have been some large out-of-town orders and many small orders, both in and out of the city. The feature of the week may perhaps be said to be the demand for white carnations to be colored green in honor of the Emerald Isle's patron saint. The supply of white carnations was heavy, particularly so March 16. They brought $4 and $5 per hundred, a few $6. The high level was reached at noon on the aforesaid day; after that prices declined. It seemed as though there were more than enough to go around.

There were no other special features to the market, beyond the change in weather. Winter was succeeded by spring in a sudden sort of way that brought out the flowers and the flower buyers impartially. This meant active business that was in the main satisfactory, although there are always things that we would like to have different. No true farmer, no true florist is ever quite satisfied. Easter lilies, calla lilies and at times valley lilies are weak. Violets are just a shade stronger, thanks to a few good orders and to the weather. Sweet peas are abundant; the orchid varieties have the call; the

Mr. Fuld's Address.

Maurice Fuld, now of New York city, came over to Philadelphia to deliver an address before the Garden and Orchard Club on "The Right Way of Gardening," at 171 Chestnut street, March 13. Mr. Fuld read from the catalogue of one of our foremost seed houses certain passages that he believed were misleading and attacked them with vigor. He is reported as giving a series of "Don'ts," something like this: "Don't be afraid to dig too deep in a garden. Don't do work as an amateur that would prove difficult to a professional gardener. Don't think that anybody can be a gardener. Don't trust to luck. And above all else, don't have too many don'ts!

"Don't follow too many rules," he advised his audience. "Put little faith in what you read in rule books and seed catalogues. The majority of the latter are so devised as to fool the unknowing and to trick them into buying seed that will be of no use to them. If the seed merchants would only realize that by tricking the people they win a customer only to lose him again, they would adopt a more business-like policy."

This seems unfair. The seed catalogues are written by men of undoubted integrity, who thoroughly understand their business. Their aim is to assist the amateur and the professional, not to mislead them. They may, of course, not be infallible, but their work is of a high order, deserving praise, not censure. Everyone who thinks about the subject must know that book knowledge is useless without practical experience, but book knowledge, such as we derive from our best seed catalogues, is invaluable alike to amateur and to professional. Surely, Mr. Fuld knows this.

Past and Present.

There had been a bowling contest in the rooms of the Florists' Club when the party gathered around the photograph of William K. Harris that hangs on the east wall near the door. "There was a great man," one said, but Young America does not know William K. Harris. To those who, let us hope, will make their mark in the future he is a hazy sort of figure. "Grew daffodils and such stuff, didn't he?" How William K. Harris would have laughed at this! The man who branched rubbers, colored pandanus and fruited oranges to be remembered for his daffs is rather startling. "He has a fine beard," Young America remarked. With that William K. Harris was dismissed for the time.

It really seemed as though some tribute was due from the horticultural press to the memory of this self-made leader in our profession, so a trip was taken to Mr. Harris' place to see those wonderful shamrocks that those who have followed in his footsteps still grow in honor of St. Patrick's day. The place is just as Mr. Harris designed and built it, with its fine service shed and well lighted plant houses running from it on both sides. Even the plate glass houses are just as they were when he finished them. The shamrock industry is remarkable in its size: there were said to be 63,000 pots of shamrock. It is specially remarkable when the fact is considered that most of these pots are given away by the buyers. Ordinarily it is a difficult matter to make a paying proposition of an arrangement of this kind, but this evidently is an exception.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

The Market.

Business was good last week and all flowers have cleaned up well. Although it is the Lenten season and there is not much work along the lines of decorations for parties and weddings, the extra work in funeral designs and sprays has kept us busy. The weather has modified to some extent and gives the growers a little rest from the heavy firing to which they have been subjected this winter. There has been a particularly heavy call for white carnations for coloring for St. Patrick's day. Sweet peas are coming in large quantities and are of fair quality. Carnations also are good and are commanding $3 per hundred for the best; lilies, from $8 to $10; sweet peas and single violets, from $4 to $7 per thousand.

Various Notes.

John Meneilly had a good order for a pall during last week, in which he used smilax, plumosus and about 500 Enchantress carnations.

The commissioner of parks has secured a plot in one of the parks for a rose garden. This was through the activities of the local amateur society of rose growers and was announced at the meeting March 10.

George Miller has completed plans and secured the material for a house 22x100 at his place in Jamesville and will plant it to asparagus for cutting for green.

Theodore Miller, of Jamesville, is cutting quite a quantity of first-class blooms of La Reine tulips. They are particularly well colored.

Chester Harris last week had his window decorated with carnations and sweet peas dyed green, together with fern and moss, making an attractive display.

George Dumas, of Fulton, is cutting some fine sweet peas.

Potted plants are made a specialty of at the wholesale place of the Baker Floral Co. Fine plants of the French hydrangeas, hybrid and baby rambler roses and Murillo tulips are the leading items now.

Warner Bultman, of the Edwards department store floral department, was busy when the writer called, complet-

FERTILIZER EXPERIMENTS.

twenty per cent of it, common salt at the rate of something over twenty-five pounds per hundred square feet of bench space were applied to the varieties White Perfection and White Enchantress, a single chemical being applied to a section. The results were quite different with the different chemicals. Those plants treated with dried blood, potassium sulphate or sodium phosphate showed no signs of injury, and even now, when a further application of five pounds each has been made, no effect is seen excepting in a softness of the flower, a drooping of the stems and a general retardation of growth, quite similar in all cases. In the case of those plants to which salt was applied, plasmolysis occurred within three days, the plants falling over on account of weakness at or near the crown. The general appearance of the foliage did not change excepting that the chlorophyl gradually and uniformly disappeared and by this time most of the plants are dead. Where sulphate of ammonia was applied, injury which rapidly became marked was noticed within two weeks after application, but the appearance of the foliage indicated a distinct toxic effect characteristic of this fertilizer. Instead of a falling over at the crown, the first sign of injury was a browning of the tips of the sepals. Later this extended down the juncture between the sepals, causing them to part, and resulting in the formation of a split flower. Flowers fully open and half to full grown buds showed a characteristic weakness just above that node second or third below the flower, where the color disappeared, the cells collapsed, causing the stem to bend over sharply at this point. The leaves exhibited a characteristic white spotting, due to the collapse of the chlorophyl-bearing cells beneath the epidermis at these places, while the remainder of the leaf retained its normal green color. Injury is more marked where lime has been applied, and is worse in the White Enchantress than White Perfection.

These details are given here because it does not seem possible to detect injury to the carnation before overfeeding is rather serious and because, the symptoms being specific, it at least is possible by watching these symptoms to avoid a repetition of overfeeding by the particular fertilizer which caused the trouble.

The comparative solubility of these fertilizers is approximately:

but in addition ammonium sulphate, and, as described in the report last year, sulphate of potash in the later stages must have a definite toxic action peculiar to themselves. The apparent benefit this year from the large amounts of acid phosphate applied to the varieties Rosette and White Perfection, and White Enchantress and White Perfection last year lead to the belief that its solubility in water is not sufficient to cause injury to the plants.

Physical conditions of the soil may be a factor in the injury. Acid phosphate and sodium phosphate in large quantities give a pulverulent, quickly drying soil of excellent texture, while dried blood in large amounts causes the soil to retain large quantities of water. It does not dry readily and so is not watered so often, and yet the tenacity with which the organic matter in the dried blood retains the water prevents as large a proportion of it being used by the plant. This in turn prevents the proper aeration of the roots that is an essential benefit derived from the alternate wetting and drying of the soil.

The effects of overfeeding are not so apparent with carnations as with roses. In addition to the need for applying quantities of fertilizer not in excess of that needed to the rose, it is necessary to take into consideration also the period of growth of the plant when making application of fertilizer to roses, a precaution that so far has not been found necessary with carnations. The necessity of observing this precaution is well illustrated by the experience gained with application of fertilizer to roses during the present season, an experience that came near resulting in a complete loss of the plants.

The roses, young stock, were set in the benches August 4, at which time five pounds of sulphate of ammonia per hundred square feet and varying quantities of acid phosphate with a little potassium sulphate were added to the soil, together with a small amount of well rotted manure. A good crop of flowers was obtained. November 30 a like application of sulphate of ammonia and acid phosphate was made to the sections. The roses were off crop at this time. A good many older leaves were dropped because the fertilizer was cultivated in too deep, and the root system disturbed. However, the flowers produced until the first of the year were good. At this time the new foliage which appeared to replace the flowers removed showed marked signs of injury from overfeeding, the symptoms being weak growth and lack of chlorophyll in the leaves. The injury was worse on the own-root plants than the grafted, and more marked on the side of the bench from which water was applied. It is clear that the condition of the plant is a factor to be reckoned with most carefully in the application of fertilizer. The excellent condition of those plants which have received no fertilizer would indicate, indeed, that no or little fertilizer is needed in the earlier part of the season, although past experiments have shown that the soil used at the experiment station, although rich, will not suffice to keep a rose in best condition throughout the season. The whole question of the time of application of fertilizers from these two standpoints is one requiring further study before definite conclusions may be drawn.

TEN PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The wholesale market has partly recovered from the recent oversupply of cut stock, but there is still plenty of everything to supply the demand, which has been fair during the week, although prices remain low. Carnations in colors are moving slowly, but white ones have been in good demand, as many were bought to be colored green for St. Patrick's day. Jonquils have been in good demand at fair prices. Tulips are overplentiful. In hyacinths there is only a limited supply, with little demand. Cut asparagus and smilax remain scarce, with a good demand. Southern jonquils were seen here March 14 for the first time this season. The retail trade has been fair, but not up to the average for this season of the year.

Various Notes.

J. J. Perry, local manager for the Pennock-Meehan Co., was at Philadelphia on a business trip last week.

A lot of Conrad Hess's azaleas were frozen during the recent cold spell, but he says few are seriously hurt, as they were allowed to thaw out in a cold house.

which found a ready sale.

James Glass, on Erdman avenue, whose houses were damaged during the recent blow, has repaired the houses, but lost the entire crop of azaleas which he was growing for Easter, about 300 plants, besides a house of sweet peas, which were in good crop, and other miscellaneous stock.

Forthuber Bros.' new store, at North and Fulton avenues, is open for business.

There seems to be a general scarcity of pot lilies, azaleas and hydrangeas for the Easter supply. Lilies are not up to the standard of quality and the growers seem to have cut down their usual number of azaleas, and hydran-geas will not be in bloom with a number of growers.

Visitors: Robert Shoch, of M. Rice
Co., Philadelphia, and Walter E. Cook, of Stumpp & Walter Co., New York.

On Monday, March 23, at the regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, the state forester of Maryland will deliver an illustrated lecture on shade trees. This promises to be interesting and it is hoped a large number of members will be present.

M. Richmond is cutting some fine blooms of White Perfection carnations. He has a promising looking lot of cinerarias for Easter.

The Market.

In retail circles counter trade has been keeping up its good record. Funeral work holds its own and each day brings heavy calls. The market is well supplied with stock. There is a large supply of roses, but the quality is not quite up to the mark. There has been more sunshine the last week and stock has almost doubled. Carnations arrive in large consignments, but the quality is poor. They are cheap, however, and clear at low figures. Sweet peas are abundant and sell well. Some of the stores have had to work off their daffodils and jonquils at special prices, the quantity with most of the growers being immense. They have been held back, but now they are coming fast. Violets are good sellers. Valley sells quite well and is large. Pansies, freesias, orchids and gardenias are in good supply. Both callas and easter lilies are in good demand. There is a serious shortage of smilax. Leucothoe and fern leaves are plentiful.

cians' hall Monday evening, March 9. The meeting was fairly well attended and was presided over by John Dunbar. An illustrated lecture was given by Harry E. Bates, of the Lord & Burnham Co., describing up-to-date greenhouses in Rochester and vicinity. It will be decided at the next meeting, Monday evening, April 20, whether another flower show will be conducted this fall. The show last year was declared a success. Plans were made for the bringing to Rochester of John Farquhar, of Boston, Mass., former president of the S. A. F.

Two large shoe store windows were decorated last week with quite a number of birch bark boxes filled with colored crocuses in full bloom. No loud colors were shown, but the daintiest and prettiest display seen this spring.

The Rochester Floral Co. had a pretty display in its window last week. White and purple was the color scheme, and the display was composed solely of Easter lilies and baskets of violets.

For a St. Patrick's day window, H. E. Wilson showed a miniature farmyard surrounded with Irish hats and shamrocks, white hyacinths and lilacs.

vent the spread of the disease in this way, only cuttings from healthy plants should be used. The spores may lodge on the cuttings, and when the young plants are transferred to pots the spores may germinate and find a wound to enter the tissues and so cause the dying of several branches or the whole plant. Again, the same thing may hold true with the plants when they are set out in the field. The disease in the field is not of an infectious character, for diseased plants are often found isolated among healthy ones.

When the plants are benched in the fall the fungus brought in from the field may cause some damage, for the plants seem to be more subject to infection in the house than in the field. As its development is somewhat similar, the same precautions should be applied here as are given for the stem rot, mainly careful attention to ventilation and cultural conditions.

Carnation Yellows.

Last fall we were fortunate to be able to secure the services of C. C. Rees, who took up the question of carnation yellows. Since September, 1913, most of the research on the yellows has been of a cytological nature. Many cross sections of diseased and healthy carnation leaves have been cut and stained and examined carefully under the microscope for bacteria as well as for any physiological disarrangement of the plant tissue that might have been caused by the presence of the disease. However, no bacterium of any description was found, and for this reason, coupled with the fact that we have been unsuccessful in isolating any characteristic bacterial organism, we are ready to conclude that the yellows bears no relation to the bacteriosis of carnation as described by Arthur and Bolley some years ago. We were also unable to locate, in the tissues of the leaves, any distinct paths of the punctures of aphids or thrips, which, according to Woods, are the direct cause of stigmose. Therefore, it is probable that the yellows is a separate and distinct form from stigmose as described by Woods. This conclusion is further substantiated by the assertions of many florists, who claim that in their houses in which there are sucking insects the carnations are comparatively free from yellows, while in their cleanest houses the situation is the reverse. A series of colonization experiments will be started before long with a number of the more common sucking insects. We expect the results of this experiment to prove this point quite conclusively.

We have also outlined a number of grafting experiments, the results of which we hope will be of value to us in the ultimate solution of this problem. Inoculation experiments of various types will also be carried out as soon as the cuttings have sufficiently matured, and if possible a complete set of nutrition experiments will be started at the same time, in order to determine whether this has any influence on the production of the yellows.

Antirrhinum Rust.

In 1905, Holway, an American botanist, found a rust on the cultivated Antirrhinum majus, at Berkeley, Cal., which he determined as a new species, Puccinia antirrhinum (Diet & Holw.). This is the only time this rust has ever been reported up to the present time in Europe or America.

Last summer an inquiry regarding a rust on antirrhinums was received at the station, but not much attention was paid to it, because it was thought to be a common disease. However, on looking up the literature on this rust, it was found to be the opposite. Later, while visiting a range of greenhouses near Wheaton, it was found to be present throughout the neighborhood. Inquiries to florists in the following cities were then sent out. The tabulated list below shows the region infected with this disease and the cities surrounding this locality, showing that at present it is not widespread and also that the trouble started only about two years ago.

Rust present with date of appearance:

Aurora, Ill.....	1913.....	House
Evanston, Ill.....	July, 1913.....	Field, house
Glen Ellyn, Ill.....	Oct., 1913.....	House, cuttings
Lake Forest, Ill.....	1911.....	Field, house
Wheaton, Ill.....	July, 1913.....	Field, house

Rust was not present in Chicago, Des Plaines, Elmhurst, Geneva, Joliet, Lexington, Libertyville, Morgan Park, Waukegan and Western Springs.

Two suppositions can be made as to the origin of this rust in the regions north of Chicago. One is that the rust spores were brought in on seeds or cuttings, the second that the rust is present on wild A. majus, escaped from cultivation, or on linaria (butter and eggs) found growing in the fields, and that the rust on these plants has also attacked the A. majus grown for commercial purposes.

Most of the growers are of the opinion that the rust sprang up locally and was not introduced on seeds. This point will be determined this coming year. While most growers in the middle west do not fear attacks of rust any more, it seems highly possible that the rust on antirrhinums will become so severe as to prevent their culture (in fact, this is true in one locality already), as is the case in the east, where hollyhocks cannot be grown at all, due to attacks of a rust.

Until more information can be obtained on this problem, the only method of control that can be suggested is to stop the culture of snapdragons for at least two years. Only the summer or uredo spores have been found causing the disease up to the present time and as they are unable to live in the field over winter, it can be easily seen that the rust can be controlled in this manner.

Seed Trade News.*AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
 Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

THE shortage of beans is being keenly felt.

THE Californians are whistling at their work.

THE new parcel post rates on seeds appear to have a tendency to foster the local seed houses as against the distant ones.

W. F. THERKILDSON, advertising manager for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., is on a western trip. He is spending this week at his old home at Painesville, O.

APPARENTLY the peas are not going to clean up and the result doubtless will be a larger acreage planted for 1914 seed crop than was the case last year.

Now the mailing clerks can fill in dull days figuring how to deliver parcels cheapest: by express, by parcel post zone rates or by splitting into 4-ounce packages to take the flat rate.

THE seedsman who is not busy this week probably never will be. March 16 was a heavy day, but March 23 is likely to prove to be Big Monday, the peak of the mail-order seed season.

THE portrait of Washington Atlee Burpee adorned the cover of The Fra for March, the leading feature of the issue being a five-page article on Burpee, the Burpee family and the Burpee business, in the characteristic style of Elbert Hubbard.

A CARLOAD of alfalfa seed was recently purchased from the State Nursery Co., at Helena, Mont., by the Canadian Pacific railroad for distribution to farmers along its route. The seed took first prize at a recent state fair at Helena and third prize in the seed contest at Dallas, Tex.

OUCH!

The seed trade didn't get what was wanted when seeds went into the parcel post. Far from it! The rate on small parcels was doubled.

Since July 24, 1888, the postage on seeds has been 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, without regard to distance. Under an order issued March 14, 1914, by the Postmaster General, putting into effect the act of Congress of March 9, 1914, the rate becomes 1 cent for each ounce up to four ounces, regardless of distance, the parcel post zone rates applying on any parcel above four ounces in weight. The result is that a 4-ounce parcel of seeds which formerly went from Phil-

Philadelphia to the Pacific coast for 2 cents now will cost 4 cents and a 5-ounce parcel that heretofore has cost 3 cents will cost 12 cents. It isn't at all what was wanted.

On the other hand, a parcel of five pounds weight, formerly costing 40 cents postage for either local or distant delivery, now can be sent to a local address for 7 cents, to the limits of the second zone for 9 cents, to the third zone for 14 cents, or the fourth zone for 23 cents. There's a big gain there.

The seed trade wanted the same rates on seeds as went into effect March 15 for catalogues, which are 1 cent for each two ounces up to eight ounces, the pound zone rates to apply above that. The trade had not anticipated such snap action as was taken. There were a dozen bills before Congress and the Postoffice Department had endorsed one that gave seeds and plants the same rates as catalogues. The trade was taken by surprise when it read in The Review for March 12 that both houses of Congress had covered the matter in an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill, without giving a hearing to any parties at interest, and that the matter already was up to the President for signature. The change in rates on catalogues and on seeds and plants went into effect the same day.

It will now be up to the seed trade to bring pressure to bear to get the ounce rate reduced. It will be difficult. Seeds and plants now are in the same class as other merchandise; it will not be easy to get the weight limit raised to eight ounces and the rate cut to the old one of two ounces for a cent unless the same consideration is given other people in the mail-order trade.

WALLS FALL ON SEED STORE.

The St. Louis Seed Co., which suffered a heavy loss by fire March 10 as the result of a conflagration in a big clubhouse next door, sustained a further and more serious damage from the same source one week later, on the afternoon of March 17.

The seed store had been reopened and business was going on as usual while repairs were being made. The seed store building is four stories in height, the wall of the burned structure next door towering seven stories. The wall fell without warning at 2:15 p. m., while scores of persons were in the seed building. The customers mostly were in the front of the building, which had not been injured by the fire and which was not hit by the falling wall. Those in the rear portion, which was crushed by the weight of bricks, were seed store employees or employees of the contractor who was repairing the building. One body, that of Wm. Davisson, an employee of the seed company, was recovered and other bodies were thought still to be in the ruins, although John A. Rau, secretary, stated in the evening that all the em-many had miraculous escapes. James Cobb was the worst hurt of any of the seed store employees. He was imprisoned under the wreckage for two hours, but will recover. A. H. Hummert, vice-president of the St. Louis Seed Co., fears heavy casualty among the contractor's laborers who were at work in the basement.

ATTEMPT TO END FREE SEEDS.

During the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill in the House of Representatives several moves were made by congressmen to end the free seed distribution. Representative Summers, of Texas, was the leader in the action against it and first brought up a point of order against its consideration by Congress in that connection. When this was lost, he offered an amendment to strike out the entire free seed section and appropriate instead $100,000 for the distribution of new and rare seeds and plants. The argument against free seeds, that it is for political purposes only, was admitted by some and denied by others of those who wished the distribution continued. When the vote was taken it was found that the amendment had been defeated by 96 to 32. Although the vote represents only a quarter of the members of the House, it is probably a fairly good indication of the proportion of congressmen in favor of discontinuing the free seed distribution.

ELLIOTT'S FIRE LOSS.

The loss sustained by Wm. Elliott & Sons, 42 Vesey street, New York, in the fire of March 10 will not be so great as at first thought. It was a hard fight for the firemen and Chief Kenlon found his men so exhausted by their work in the smoke that after the fire was under control he sent some of the companies to quarters, summoning others to "dampen down" the smoldering basement. He said the fire was one of the most stubborn he had ever fought. He estimated the damage at $25,000. Both the owner of the building and Elliott & Sons were fully covered by insurance.

More than twenty-five girls were at work sorting seeds on the third floor when the fire was discovered and they ran pell-mell down the stairs, leaving hats and coats behind. The fire gained rapid headway and threatened to consume the entire building. Deputy Chief Binns sent for more firemen, and Chief Kenlon came with them. There was much excelsior in the place, used in packing, and the fumes from this overcame nine firemen.

SPRING IN THE BULB FIELDS.

Bulb growers in Holland are now busy removing the winter covering from the fields, notwithstanding that vegetation is at least one week behind compared with last year, says a Dutch correspondent of the H. T. J. for February 28. Only in few places are the first sprouts appearing above ground, and whereas last year's cold snap in the early part of March proved so disastrous to the tender foliage that was above the ground, little harm could now be done if such a spell should come again.

The planting of spring bulbs, such as gladioli, is now in full swing, and

Lilium Formosum

The great value of Lilium Formosum is due to the fact that they can be flowered during the winter months, under average greenhouse conditions, better than any other white lily. They are ready for use at a time when lilies are in demand and bring good returns. Good bulbs of this variety will be scarce and high in price this fall—we mean good Formosum. Now, it doesn't matter how good a grower you have, how good your facilities are for growing, or who you are—if you want a good winter crop of lilies, you must have good bulbs. That's why Horseshoe Brand Formosum are in such good demand. The purpose of this advertisement is to tell you that they are scarce and at the same time very desirable to have, and to induce you to order early, so you will not be disappointed later on, when the good stock will all be gone. The prices are $50.00 for 6 to 8's, $75.00 for 7 to 9's and $120.00 for 9 to 10's—packed in the usual way. Large quantities at a slight reduction. Money can't make a dog's tail wag, but it can make a fine lot of lilies if you buy Horseshoe Brand Formosum bulbs. They are the finest produced, the most uniform and with less mixture than any other brand. A catalogue sent upon request.

HORSESHOE BRAND FORMOSUM

One bulb, grown in six-inch pot; twenty-nine blooms on three stems. Grown by Fred A. Danker, Albany, N. Y.

Not How Cheap,
but How Good.

RALPH M. WARD & CO.
THE LILY HOUSE

71 Murray St.,

NEW YORK

A limited quantity of Mammoth Formosum bulbs can be supplied at $1.00 each larger this season, as the sale has been slow and dragging. The only exceptions are Brenchleyensis and Colvillei gladioli, which have sold out clean.

Generally looking over the bulb fields, it seems that almost everything is behind and consequently we may not expect such an early flowering season as last year, and if nothing unusual should happen, we may expect to have the best flowers about Easter.

COY'S ADDITION.

The C. Herbert Coy Seed Co., Valley, Neb., is occupying its large three and five-story addition to its seed house. The new building is 60x70 feet, making the plant 60x140 feet, one of the largest wholesale vine seed and seed corn establishments in the country. The plant is equipped with modern machinery and is electrically lighted, with all the latest improvements for protection from fire. The company was incorporated in 1907. The president, C. Herbert Coy, has been engaged in the wholesale seed business in New York state and Nebraska for thirty-five years. Laurence Coy is the secretary of the company.

KEEPING THEM IN LINE.

There is not the shadow of doubt that all the makers of standard insecticides are imbued with the utmost sincerity of purpose—they not only are honest but they know that honesty is the best policy. Still, their stuff falls short of the claims on the labels. Beyond question the insecticide act is serving a most useful purpose: it not only keeps out the fakers but it keeps the honest men in line; it keeps them keyed up to see that their employees actually put in the package what the label says will be found there. That so many good firms slip even with the law hanging over their heads shows what the condition would be if there were no law.

Among those recently prosecuted under the insecticide law was the Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore., which the government charged with shipping a quantity of so-called Aphiscide to Vancouver, Wash. It was alleged that the article was misbranded. According to the government report of the case, "the article on examination was found to contain about ninety-nine per cent water, and was not effective against certain plant pests as the label maintained. Misbranding was alleged because the label falsely claimed the product would kill all plant pests and that it was the most effective insecticide known, and because it consisted partially of inert substances, principally water, which do not prevent, destroy, repel or mitigate insects, and the names and percentage amounts of such ingredients were not stated on the label, nor in lieu thereof were the name and percentage amount of each active ingredient and the total percentage of the inert ingredients stated on the label." A fine of $25 and costs was imposed.

WHEN YOU CONSIDER BUYING

Cannas, Dahlias, Gladioli or Peonies

You want the best, true to name, healthy, full of life, at a profitable price. We grow them and aim to have the very best. You get what you pay for—no substitution, no mixture, every one plump, ready to give very best possible results.

Many inquiries come to us like this: "We have trouble getting Cannas, etc., true. What guarantee can you give?"... "I am tired of getting Robusta for Black Beauty, David Harum for King Humbert, etc." Our own experience in buying is similar, often the bulbs are one-fourth worthless. No one has better cannas. Our customers rarely ever kick, but come back for more. Try them.

Gentlemen:

We wish to compliment you on the business getting ability of your paper.

It is with much pleasure that we write that the RESULTS of our Easter specialty ads in the recent issues of the Florists' Review have been very LARGE and EXCEEDED OUR EXPECTATIONS, helping to make this Easter season the most successful in our history.

Orders coming from all parts of the country show that The Review is read EVERYWHERE.

They invariably mentioned having read the ad in The Review.

Thanking you for your cooperation and results obtained, we are,

Very truly yours.

MORE cut orchid blooms are used in San Francisco, in proportion to population, than in any other city in the United States, according to G. L. Freeman, the plant importer, who adds that San Francisco also uses a greater variety of orchids than any other city, the spray varieties being popular there for decorative purposes.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business is still streaky, one day or a few days good, then slack for a time. It is the general idea among the trade that tourists are not spending so much this year as usual. While there is a great and increasing demand for cheap flowers, the higher priced stock does not move as well as in other years. Funeral work continues to be the mainstay of the business and this is plentiful.

Roses are not quite so good as a week ago, as the sudden change from dull to exceptionally bright weather has been hard on the flowers. Carnations are selling better than usual, good pinks being cleaned up daily. Lily of the valley and orchids are plentiful and of fair quality. English wallflowers are seen in some of the stores and are fragrant and pretty, but do not sell freely. Blue cornflowers are good sellers. All kinds of greens are plentiful, especially wild stock in great variety from the northern woods. Cyclamens and wistarias are making a fine show as plants, but move slowly. Ferns of the Whitmani and Boston types sell well, large Bostons and medium and small Whitmani being scarce. Fashion show week called out a big lot of decorative material, especially palms and ferns, and caused a heavy demand for strings of plumosus and smilax. Easter lilies are coming on rapidly and will be in time this year.

In the seed stores the demand for small bedding and vegetable plants keeps up well, notwithstanding the fact that nearly all department stores, grocery and other business houses are carrying them at low prices. The influx of eastern people of moderate means keeps up a constant demand for all this class of material, for Los Angeles is becoming more and more of a home town and everyone wants a garden.

Various Notes.

C. E. Morton is back at the store of the Los Angeles Flower Market, but on the same day he returned F. Sperry had to be taken to the hospital. Mr. Morton is improving rapidly in health and at the last report Mr. Sperry was also considerably better. Robert Shenk and W. Morton have been added to the staff since the new store was opened.

W. Collins, well known in the retail trade here as store manager for Howard & Smith, died March 5, from lung trouble. Other particulars will be found in this week's obituary column.

The value of local advertising was never more clearly shown than in the results of recent spreads in the principal local daily by Howard & Smith. The stock offered consisted of collections of roses at a slight reduction from retail rates and the day after the first ad appeared over 400 of these, or 2,400 plants, were sold and the rush has continued ever since.

Besides being quite busy with funeral work, the Redondo Floral Co. had two good decorations last week. The proprietors of this store, Albert Knopf and A. F. Borden, have just purchased twenty acres of the Fairview ranch. This land is on a beautiful mesa overlooking the ocean and Santa Catalina island on one side and the mountains on the other. The climate is ideal and the investment is bound to prove a splendid one. The whole of the land is to be planted to citrus fruit.

A special meeting of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society was called for March 11, to consider the advisability of the society's helping the school movement for gardens, but these notes have to be in the mail before the meeting is held.

J. W. Wolters reports good business.
H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

A change in the weather wrought wonders with stock in general. Carnations are almost a glut in all varieties, but the prices are holding up well. Roses are also showing a substantial improvement. Callas and Easter lilies are in good supply and demand. Daffodils are overplentiful, with quantities of outdoor stock, and the prices have taken a decided drop. Tulips are holding up well in the fancy varieties. Azaleas, genistas and pans of hyacinths and tulips have proved good sellers this season.

Various Notes.

W. H. Danser has again taken over the business of the Forest Grove Floral Co. The place was leased to Fred Fowler, but he decided to surrender the lease to the owners.

R. W. Gill has announced that he will be a candidate for representative of Multnomah county in the state legislature, subject to the primary. He is president of the Dahlia Society of Oregon and was a delegate to the recent meeting of the National Dahlia Society at Seattle.

Frank McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the trade here last week. He reports business as being highly satisfactory.

Max Smith is displaying some choice rhododendrons, which find ready buyers.

The Portland Seed Co. reports having all the business that can be handled satisfactorily. The season was delayed for several weeks on account of rainy weather.

Frank Teufel has gone on a trip to California and says he will stay there indefinitely if he finds a good opening.

Stock for Easter is looking fine this year and the indications are that there will be plenty of it. Window arrangements for St. Patrick's day were seen on all sides. While green carnations were used considerably, they are waning in popularity. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

When one views profuse display of fruit blossoms, wild flowers, bulbous stock and spring flowers, along with long-stemmed roses, carnations, peonies, etc., one cannot help but wish that the Lenten season could be put off until a time when nature has less floral grandeur to offer. Our retail stores have not been so overtaxed for receptacles for many a day. The market at this writing offers Bermuda lilies in great quantities. The series of warm days has rushed them in a little prematurely. Roses of all varieties are in abundance. Least perfect, perhaps, at this time are Beauties. We have, however, a fine lot of long-stemmed Killarneys and good Richmonds, also many well grown Radiance. It might be said here that Radiance has found immediate favor among the western flower connoisseurs, and its new shade has made it an attractive seller. Lady is also particularly sought. Yellow roses, such as Aaron Ward and Lady Hillingdon, do not move so well, due, undoubtedly, to the presence of so much of the yellow color on the market.

All classes of bulbous stock grace our shops. Jonquils are in oversupply. Tulips are fine in quality but not sufficient in quantity or of long enough stems for high-class work. Narcissi are in good supply, and unusually popular this year has been the snowdrop. Freesias are thinning out and less perfect. We have good supplies of flowering quince, cherry and crab-apple. Cecile Brunner roses are a commodity of the past, inasmuch as the shipments to the eastern states have made it impossible to handle the flowers on a paying basis in San Francisco. Valley has dropped in price and is not in large supply. Added to this are unlimited quantities of acacias, lilacs, potted lilies, rhododendrons, camellias, sweet peas, ranunculus, marigolds, primulas, sweet peas and violets. There is no end to the variety of cut flowers available. The outlook for Easter is quite encouraging.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, held on the evening of March 7, proved to be one of unusual interest. Two movements for the betterment of the society were the adoption of lectures on horticulture for the regular meetings, and also the appointment of a committee of five to circularize and advertise in every way possible the desirability of securing for San Francisco the 1915 convention.

Interesting exhibits were made at the meeting by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., which displayed a vase of Phalaenopsis amabilis, for which the company was awarded 96 points. The flower spikes

Various Notes.

The activity in the retail business is in evidence in the opening of three new stores in San Francisco. Among them is the establishment of H. Lavazelle, who has fitted up a small place in the Hotel Stewart.

The reestablishment of the Francis Floral Depot in a new location on Powell and Sutter streets has been completed. Mr. Schlotzhauer has been known to the trade of San Francisco for the last twenty-five years and his skill and dexterity as a decorator have given him a place among our leading florists. His shop is an attractive one and located in an excellent business district.

Albert O. Stein has completed the entire remodeling of his quarters in Sutter street and now boasts of the finest flower shop in San Francisco. Mr. Stein has a frontage of over seventy-five feet in plate glass. Mr. Stein's originality is everywhere in evidence. He has dispensed with the old-fashioned idea of white enamel trimmings, and there are no counters visible. On one side of the spacious floor is a fountain of Pompeian model ordered from Europe. Valuable Persian rugs are artistically laid on a gray imitation tile floor. Up to the time that Mr. Stein opened his shop our downtown establishments have been considered the highest grade stores, but it must be admitted by everyone that there is nothing in San Francisco to compare with the rich and soothing effect that Mr. Stein has obtained through his artistic ingenuity.

The Market.

Usually for a month or so preceding Easter business is quiet in the flower trade of this city, but it seems as if it is quieter than ever this year. The last two weeks have been depressing in the extreme. Stock of all kinds is in oversupply and carnations are a big glut. Of course prices are slashed. This condition is likely to continue until the cucumbers are all planted. If any grower of Holland bulbs has made any money out of them this year he has been fortunate indeed. Many hundreds of the bulbs were blind in some orders, and with flowers selling little in advance of the price of the bulbs, one has to figure considerably to see where the profit is. The outdoor narcissi are coming in and bringing nearly as good prices as forced stock has brought. Roses are arriving in good shape from the south. Hardly any local stock is offered. The sale for pansies, daisies and such planting stock has begun early this year on account of the phenomenally advanced season. Good azaleas are selling well, but other pot plants move slowly.

The condition of the nursery trade here is shown by the frequent advertisements of cheap sales. The trouble with this business now is that there are more people handling and trying to sell imported stock than there is room for and the legitimate and old established places are suffering from the competition. Another complaint is that the farmers are not planting fruit trees so much as in recent years. This is a natural consequence of the overplanting that has been done in this state for the last decade.

Various Notes.

Ivan Risdon is enlarging his plant at Brighton, building two new houses, one 30x75 and one 16x75.

The Brighton flower growers are regretting the departure from among them of J. A. Sahli, who has removed to his new premises at Kent. During his sojourn here he was respected and esteemed by his fellow sufferers in the growing business and his cheery face and kindly word will be much missed. All are wishing him happiness and prosperity in his new location. He sold his business and stock to J. W. Lewis, who came here from Sedro Woolley.

Harry Risdon has the whole of his place planted to cucumbers and says he means to continue in the growing of eatables, finding the more æsthetic culture of flowers a poor money maker.

The Bryn Mawr Greenhouses are now cutting and shipping cucumbers, realizing fine prices for this early season.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE Holland nurserymen report a good export season, the trade with America showing an excellent increase in spite of the restrictions imposed by the quarantine law.

NORRIS PETERS, of Troy, O., for a long time one of the proprietors of the Peters Nursery Co., is considering the establishment of a nursery at Delaware, Ohio.

AUGUST PAILLETT, for the last twelve years tree warden of Turner's Falls, Mass., has resigned from this position in order to be able to devote more time to his nursery business.

THE Elberta Fruit & Nursery Co., of Hugo, Okla., has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000 by J. M. McConnell, of St. Louis, and W. P. Stewart and A. A. McDonald, of Hugo.

A CHARTER has been issued to the Saibara Nursery & Orchard Co., of Webster, Tex., with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are: Seito Saibara, K. Saibara and T. Nakamura.

NURSERYMEN as a rule will be glad to see the parcel post zone rates apply to plants. It will be of special advantage in that it will help to build up the small local mail order or telephone retail sales.

OSCAR WICK, proprietor of a large nursery at East Grand Forks, Minn., is opening a branch at Edmonton, Alberta, under the name of the Alberta Nursery Co. The branch will be in the charge of John J. Murray.

It is highly complimentary to The Review that the paper devoted solely to the nursery trade finds it worth while to reprint matter from this department in its columns. The trouble is, however, that credit is not given where credit is due.

A NURSERY to supply stock for planting in the parks of the city is being planned by the city council of Allentown, Pa. George Smith, superintendent of parks, is enthusiastic over the idea. One objectionable feature of the present plan is that it provides for the disposal of the surplus by sale to private citizens of Allentown.

AN agitation for a new guarantee of truthfulness to type in nursery stock is being undertaken by several farm papers. They report that they are drafting a bill to be introduced in Congress and the state legislatures providing for the settlement of damage claims by arbitration. So far, however, these journalists are the only ones who are agitated on this subject.

CHARLES A. PALMGREN is building up a nice business in the north shore suburbs of Chicago. His location is Glenview, Ill., seventeen miles from Chicago and six miles west of Evanston. He does business as Palmgren's Nurseries and has twenty-seven acres under cultivation, mostly in ornamentals. Prior to starting for himself four years ago, Mr. Palmgren was for many years with Swain Nelson & Sons Co.

We have always found The Review a top notcher as to results received from wholesale advertising of nursery stock.—Atlantic Nursery Co., per D. W. Babcock, Mgr., Berlin, Md., January 16, 1914.

DALLAS, Tex., is planning to economize by establishing a municipal nursery. The city economists figure a saving of $2,000 a year.

PLANTING CONTRACT LITIGATED.

In a suit brought by owners of land against an orchards company to recover a $6,000 penalty, which the company had agreed to pay for failure to plant 100 acres in apple trees and a cover crop between the trees by the end of a certain season, the Washington Supreme Court recently held that the landowners were not entitled to recover any damages, as it appeared that the contract was substantially complied with and no actual pecuniary damage resulted to the plaintiffs on account of the delay. (Sledge vs. Arcadia Orchards Co., 137 Pacific Reporter 1,051.) S.

PLANTS IN PARCEL POST.

Postmaster General Burleson issued an order March 13, putting into effect the postage rates on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants provided for by the act of Congress of March 9, 1914. Copies of the order, with necessary instructions, have been sent by Third Assistant Postmaster General Dockery to all postmasters. The act mentioned repeals the special rate of postage heretofore chargeable on seeds, plants, etc., and makes the regular parcel post rates of postage applicable to parcels of such articles. Under the law just enacted parcels of seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, weighing four ounces or less, are subject to postage at the flat rate of 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof, regardless of distance. On parcels exceeding four ounces in weight the pound rates applicable to the respective zones apply. The fact that seeds, plants, etc., were specifically excepted from the regular fourth-class rates by the parcel post law caused much dissatisfaction, and there was an urgent and widespread demand by florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and the public for the extension of the parcel post rates to these articles. As reported in The Review for March 12, it resulted in an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill, which went into effect as soon after March 13 as the postmasters received the departmental notice, in most cases March 16. E. H. P.

PROPAGATION OF EVERGREENS.

Will you kindly tell me the proper time to start cuttings of evergreen pine and hemlock spruce, and the best method of doing so? I wish to make cuttings of these and shall be glad to have your opinion. My location is northern Kentucky. S. H. B.

Both these evergreens are propagated from seeds, not cuttings. Occasionally hemlocks are grafted, and this is the method usually adopted with blue spruce when a particularly fine form is wanted, true to name. The best time to sow seeds of pines and hemlock spruce is spring, between the middle and end of April, either in the open air or in prepared frames.

Make the soil as fine as possible, removing all stones and coarse material. Having secured a smooth surface, sow the seed broadcast as evenly as possible. Then give the bed a watering, using a rose that throws a fine spray; next sift some fine earth evenly over the bed and give the whole a light mulch of half decayed leaves. When the seed is sown in a frame, I like to have the frame built so that it is open around the sides as well as on top; I tack ordinary burlap all over, removing this after the seedlings are nicely germinated; this will be in from twenty to thirty days under favorable conditions. Remove the mulch of leaves carefully as the seedlings germinate. It is advisable to shade the seedlings with burlap shades as the hot weather comes on; remove them on cloudy and wet days, and after September 1 no further shade will be needed. C. W.

KENTUCKY PRIVET SEED?

I have about 1,000 Kentucky privet seeds. Please advise me through the columns of The Review when these seeds should be planted, also the care of the seedlings, etc. L. S.

I do not know of any privet known as the Kentucky. Probably you refer to the California privet. This can be propagated in the same way as all other privets. Seeds should first be placed in dry sand and stratified. In spring all the fleshy part will have disappeared. Sow in flats of sandy loam and keep in a coldframe. Often seeds will not germinate until the second year. The second season plant out in nursery rows and keep well cultivated. Green wood cuttings rooted under glass in summer, or hard wood cuttings rooted outdoors in spring, especially the latter, are general methods of propagation which are much superior to seed propagation. C. W.

CALIFORNIA PRIVET HEDGE.

I should like to know something about California privet hedge. I have a contract to cut down a privet hedge which is 22 years old. I am cutting it down to fifteen inches above the ground and ten inches wide. The owner of the hedge suggests a top-dressing of cow manure, but I have heard that cow manure will kill it and that bone meal is best. Please tell me which to use. I intend to spray in the spring. J. C.

The privet hedge referred to should start away all right if cut down to fifteen inches, or even a little lower. Stir the ground well around the plants, and you will make no mistake in giving a top-dressing of well-rotted cow or horse manure. Keep weeds away from the hedge and stir the surface after heavy rains to encourage growth. The plants should make considerable growth the

NURSERY STOCK ON MUCK LAND.

I have a piece of New Jersey muck ground which is never under water. It is new ground and is fairly well drained. I should like to know what a nurseryman could grow on such ground successfully. K. E. W. M.

It is not the easiest thing in the world to suggest what you should grow in your muck land. If, as you say, it is well drained, rhododendrons and plants of this type should do well in it. There seems to be considerable difference, however, in what is termed muck land in New Jersey. Much of it is decomposed peat, having no fertilizing value, but capable of being used successfully for rhododendrons and other plants of the same character. Other sections, where the soil is composed of leaves which have been collecting and decaying there for centuries, make wonderful places in which to grow vegetables. Celery, lettuce and onions do particularly well on such a soil.

It seems to me that, were I in your position, I would spend at least one season in working this new soil and ascertaining the value of it by growing vegetables in it. The necessary cultivation for the vegetables during the coming summer would put it in splendid condition to be used for nursery stock or other plants in the fall or next year, and you might also discover in that time some additional draining which would have to be done, and which might save some loss of valuable nursery stock later.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Outing.

March 12 twenty-two members of the Lancaster County Florists' Club journeyed to Chester county and visited florists there. This number would have been doubled but for the fact that many of our rural members were unable to make trolley connections so early in the morning. The first stop was made at Brandywine Summit, where Alban Harvey & Sons met us with sleighs, which conveyed us to their greenhouses. Their new Lord & Burnham iron-frame house, 72x500, was the center of attraction. It is planted to winter-blooming, orchid-flowering Spencer sweet peas. They were planted early in October and have been producing quantities of blooms for the last five weeks. The present cut is 15,000 per day. The vines are possibly ten feet high and loaded with blooms, many stems measuring fifteen inches in length and having four flowers each. The principal colors grown are white, lavender, pink and white, as well as a beautiful deep shade of pink.

Several houses of regular winter-blooming peas, through blooming, are being cleared of vines and the space planted to Comet tomatoes. Houses of the standard varieties of carnations were found in fine condition. After the inspection of the greenhouses, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey served refreshments and the kind hospitality shown us will always remain a pleasant memory.

Our next stop was at Kennett Square, where we were met by Messrs. Wm. Swayne and Palmer. At Mr. Swayne's place we saw lupines of extraordinary quality, pink stocks that took everyone's eye, houses of snapdragon and benches of fine Rosette and Victory carnations. A house of potted calla lilies, plunged, was showing high quality blooms.

We then called at Palmer & Sons', where carnations are grown exclusively, with the Wards as leaders. Stock was found in fine form. Comments were heard on the light, clean houses here. Our last call was at Ed. Marshall's, at Willowdale. His carnations are in splendid condition and show evidence of a heavy cut during the winter months. Gloriosa was seen in fine form, and judging from the stubs left from cutting the blooms, it has been a most profitable variety at this place. Beacon, Victory, White Perfection, Mrs. Ward and Pink Delight are the principal varieties grown. A bench of a crimson seedling was admired.

Our party divided at this place, some continuing to Percy Barnard's place, and the remainder returning home via West Chester. Our thanks are due to Elmer J. Weaver, of Ronks, and James Brown, of Coatesville, for their efficient services in personally conducting the party.

Those in attendance were: Albert M. Herr, S. S. Pennock, M. J. Brinton, E. P. Hostetter, E. J. Weaver, C. M. Weaver, J. H. Weaver, Chester Weaver, Ira H. Landis, Rudolph Nagel, Elias Lefever, Enos Lefever and son, Fred Ritchey, Walter Denlinger, J. Ralph Hess, A. K. Rohrer, H. K. Rohrer, A. W. Denlinger, M. H. Hostetter, P. S. ## NEWPORT.

Joseph Manda is to be manager of the summer show here. Leading firms are donating many special prizes.

Stewart Ritchie, who is making a specialty of carnations, is finding the best success with Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon.

V. A. Vanicek is building a large packing shed.

William Jurgens was a business visitor in Boston last week. W. H. M.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

With a week of bright sunshine, flowers of high quality are coming into the market, but as yet the supply is light. There are not enough cut flowers to fill orders. The general report is that the supply of cut flowers since Christmas has been the lightest in years.

Various Notes.

The Connecticut Horticultural Society held its regular meeting March 13. Four new members were admitted. As it was cineraria night, Alfred Cebelius exhibited three plants of Cineraria stellata, one measuring over three feet in height.

Theodore Wirth, president of the S. A. F., will give his illustrated lecture on the park system of Minneapolis before the Horticultural Society March 20 at Saengerbund hall, 76 Wells street, instead of March 19.

John Coombs, of Main street, expects to occupy his new store about April 1. It is just across the street from the present location. He expects to have 10,000 blooms of lilies for Easter.

C. H. Sierman, of Park street, has sold his business to Philip Hansling.

At the establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc., the large stock of Easter plants is looking fine. They expect to erect a large addition to the plant during the summer. Axel G. Bloomberg has succeeded W. H. Buggie as carnation foreman; the latter is now to be found at the Cromwell postoffice, after having served A. N. Pierson, Inc., for eighteen years. James Clark has resigned his position as rose grower to take charge of the greenhouses of H. H. Battles, at Newtown Square, Pa. R. C. S.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Not for a long time has business been better than during last week. While the weather remained cold, with minimum temperatures of 10 to 14 degrees above zero, the skies were steadily clear. Then, Boston's annual auto show helped business, there being more social gatherings and dinners than have been customary in Lent. Practically all flowers sold out well, and growers were well satisfied with business.

Somewhat more material is coming in, but clearances continue good. Roses, with the single exception of Beauties, are in good supply. Leaders in popularity are Hadley, Crimson Queen, Russell, Sunburst and Killarney Queen. For a single rose, Irish Fire Flame sells well. Carnations have been selling exceptionally well and even old varieties like Winsor have been in active demand. Violets are in heavy supply; choice stock brings 50 cents per hundred, but many flowers go at half this price. Sweet peas continue abundant and good. There has been no decided glut in bulbous stock as yet. Lilies have been selling well. Some nice candidums are seen on several stands.

Yellow marguerites are more abundant, but continue to sell at excellent prices. Snapdragons are arriving more freely; pink shades, as usual, have the first call. English primroses, wall-flowers and cornflowers are popular in the miscellaneous class. Valley has been moving unusually well. There are still quite a few Cattleya Trianae and plenty of Schrodiana, with a good supply of phalaenopsis and dendro-biums. Green stock has met with a better demand.

Shamrocks and green dyed carnations were leaders for St. Patrick's day. There has been quite a good business done in pot plants, such as rambler roses, cyclamens, genistas and azaleas.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of 120 at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club March 17, the officers and directors of the S. A. F. being among those present, as the annual mid-Lenten executive meeting was opened that day. Speeches were made by President Wirth, C. H. Totty and W. F. Gude.

Roy C. Pierce, of Washington, gave an address on the chestnut blight, which elicited considerable discussion on the part of the gardeners. The usual routine business was transacted, five new members being elected.

On the exhibition table was a fine display of sweet peas, violets and pansies from William Sim. The sweet peas labeled Bohemian Girl, No. 4 and No. 12 were given reports of merit. Rose William Sheehan was shown by T. N. Cook. Mount Auburn cemetery showed Strelitzia reginae. W. N. Craig staged cinerarias and antirrhinums, receiving a cultural report of merit for the latter.

Price Reduction

The strenuous weather of February completely disarranged our plans, and now everything comes at once. Two lots of plants ready to go out and another lot ready to go in. We shall give you the benefit of a reduction in price to quickly make room. Our plants are branched and stocky, and were never better. The price is only \$20.00 per 1000; \$3.00 per 100; 200 for \$5.00. These plants, if benched, will blossom from Memorial Day throughout the summer. If potted on and pinched, they will make you a leader for spring sales. Potted into 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  or 4-inch pots and set on the back side of carnation benches, will yield a surprising profit. While you can get fine plants at a small price make room somewhere. No other plant will do the amount of business in so short a time as our

Silver Pink Seedling.

Every shoot of the 40 or 50 that it throws is a flower spike. Make room today and secure your plants.

Now is the time to sow seed for plants to bed out. Snaps are fast coming into favor for garden use.

ENCOURAGE IT—PUSH IT—PREPARE FOR IT.

You will fuss with a geranium for nine months and sell at $1.00 to $1.50 a dozen, while you can get the same money for our SEEDLING snap plants in THREE months, and at one-tenth the cost of production. This is not theory, but a plain fact. Pure seed at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. All orders cash. Free cultural directions.

right for Easter. His giganteum lilies are twenty-four to thirty-six inches high and bristling with buds, as fine a lot as I ever saw. Mr. Boyle's Killarney and Richmond roses are now in fine crop.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have their largest bulb sales now, of the following varieties: White Hawk, Murillo, Couronne d'Or, La Reine and Keizerskroon tulips, Victoria, Golden Spur, ornatus, Emperor, Princes and Double Von Sion narcissi.

At the new market of the Boston Coöperative Market, at 260 Devonshire street, business boomed all the opening week and stall holders have been delighted with the increase. Few flowers remained unsold March 14 at 9:30 a. m.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, have some hundreds of phalanopsis in flower, among other orchids. One plant of P. Schilleriana carried over 100 flowers, and many from fifty to seventy-five each.

The New York spring show, which opens March 21, will attract many visitors from Boston and vicinity. The majority will not go before March 24. Few plants will go from here, but there will be a number of cut flower exhibits.

Thomas Roland, William Sim and F. J. Dolansky have commodious and convenient quarters at the new Boston Coöperative Flower Market. Their leased spaces run side by side.

Chester Paine, of Randolph, has been getting fancy prices for his bulbs this week and has been in exuberant spirits. The real cause was the arrival,

E. MacMulkin had a large model of an automobile decorated with flowers as a window attraction for the Boston auto week, March 9 to 14.

The Budlong Co., of Auburn, R. I., has secured a splendid location in the new Boston Coöperative Market. The company has a commodious office, an ice-box with a capacity of ninety boxes of roses, and teams from the terminal station can back right up to the stands.

Alexander J. Montgomery, son of Robert Montgomery, the well known Natick rose grower, was married March 12. His bride was Miss Hazel Ward, a popular young lady in Natick. The couple, who were well remembered by their friends, left for a honeymoon in New York and Philadelphia. Mr. Montgomery's market friends are preparing a rousing reception for him on his return to business.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is cutting 8,000 valley weekly, of fine quality. His gardenias are doing well. Giganteum lilies, 7,000 of them, are in fine shape for Easter. He has had good success in growing lilacs this season.

W. A. McAlpine and F. J. McDonald have commodious quarters in the basement of the new Boston Coöperative Market. Their ice-box, just completed, is convenient and roomy.

James Wheeler is cutting about 8,000 yellow marguerites weekly. His plants now stand four to five feet high and are smothered with buds. He has a fine lot of Cölogyne cristata, Chatsworth variety, in flower.

John Cummings and Everett E. Cummings, two brothers, each of Woburn, are leading single violet specialists. March 14 they sold 100,000 flowers between them.

Indications point to a large attendance at the W. W. Edgar field day March 28. Quite a few ladies will attend.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, has a salmon sport from Carnation Winsor that is doing remarkably well this season.

B. P. Peterson, of Saxonville, has had good sales for shamrocks this season; his snapdragons also are doing finely.

John A. Nelson, of Framingham, has the finest cut of Fenn carnations to be seen in the country, according to E. G. Hill, who is a good judge.

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

THE WONDERFUL NEW CANNA Queen Helen

Queen Helen is a green-leaved sport of King Humbert, retaining all the good qualities that have made Humbert the best Canna heretofore introduced—and Queen Helen has several points of superiority over Humbert. Same orchid-like flowers, golden yellow color, evenly spotted with red; stronger grower, producing more than twice as many shoots per plant; flower clusters larger; green-leaved, foliage large and glossy. Queen Helen is a variety that in years to come will be grown more generally than any other one canna. One large canna grower says it is the best novelty ever produced.

I call your attention to the size and form of the flowers of Queen Helen. Compare same with some recent introductions. The flowers of Queen Helen are as sun-proof as those of King Humbert. A first-class yellow is needed. Look it up and see what we have in yellow Cannas today. There is money in Queen Helen for every grower.—Queen Helen would be cheap at twice the price.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Green carnations and miniature pots of shamrock conspicuously displayed gave evidence of the approaching holiday to Ireland's patron saint. There was a brisk demand during the closing days of the week for both these novelties. Carnations continue to be short in supply and brisk in demand, with a consequent slight stiffening in price. Roses are in good quantity and quality and bulbous stock of all kinds is plentiful. Funeral work was heavy last week.

Various Notes.

Hazard & Pierson have changed their flower stand in the store of L. Dimond & Sons to a more prominent location and with increased room.

I. Smith, of Boston, has opened a flower stand in the 5 and 10-cent store of S. S. Kresge, 191 Westminster street.

Mrs. J. A. Staples, of Woonsocket, was exceptionally busy last week with funeral work.

Fred B. Luther has the sympathy of the trade in the death, March 15, of his father, William H. Luther, for several years police commissioner of Providence.

The Rhode Island Experimental Station at Kingston, R. I., has issued bulletins on "How to Build Hotbeds and Coldframes," and on "Sweet Pea Culture."

Joseph Koppelman was a business visitor in New York and Philadelphia last week.

The trade in this vicinity received a business visit last week from J. W. Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. William Doel celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding March 16, at their home in Pascoag.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, is entering his sixteenth year as a grower of dahlias and his greenhouses are practically filled with 10,000 cuttings for spring. Frank E. James has charge of his propagation plant. W. H. M.

Trenton, N. J.—F. X. Millman, Jr., is manager of the Quality Flower Shop, which was opened March 6 in the Commonwealth building, East State and Montgomery streets.

JOY!

This is a Carnation that did not get a reputation over night. We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it.

IT'S A REAL RED

It is the kind of Carnation that proves the florist's friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as "a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem." That should be good enough for anybody.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Meeting of Executive Committee.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met in New York city March 9, and registered the following two roses, entered by Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.:

Climbing My Maryland—In all except habit of growth a duplicate of My Maryland, from which it is a sport; a decided climber.

West Grove—Liberty x Kaiserin Augusta Victoria; in color, cerise pink; flower flat in form, full and double, cup-shaped; habit of growth vigorous.

The committee also registered the following rose, entered by S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., Westerly, R. I.:

Lady Ann Borodell—Light pink sport of My Maryland; very pleasing salmon pink shade, deepening in center of bloom to a lively pink; habit of growth distinct from My Maryland, being much more vigorous, with heavier foliage and heavier growth in every way; plants without bloom can easily be distinguished from My Maryland.

Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., is manager of the rose division of the show at New York March 21 to 28. Treasurer Harry O. May will be on hand to give all assistance possible. The gentlemen who are to act as judges are as follows: Philip Breitmeyer, Peter Duff, William F. Gude, Frank H. Traendly, F. A. Danker, Leo Niessen, Joseph Heacock, Walter Sheridan, W. J. Palmer, George Burton and William Kleinheinz.

The gold medal for the best rose originated in America during the last five years will be passed upon on Monday, March 23. The entire committee, as well as the executive committee, will act as a body of judges.

All entries will be filed in duplicate, one with the secretary of the society and the other with John Young, general secretary. The ruling is that no rose shall be exhibited with more than two growths; that is, with one pinch, except in a class calling for special displays. These rules it is desired to have generally known.

More members have paid up their dues so far this year than in the same period in any previous year.

Benjamin Hammond, Sec'y.

Mansfield, O.—The addition of 15,000 feet of glass, just completed by Stuhl-dreher Bros., more than doubles their glass. The whole of the addition will be planted with lettuce plants, which will be followed by tomatoes and cucumbers.

NEW EVER-BLOOMING PELARGONIUM "EASTER GREETING"

IN thinking of "Easter Greeting" forget all the old Pelargoniums you used to grow.

Imagine one that bloomsequal to a geranium, with magnificent Regal flowers on fine shaped plants, with splendid foliage, that's "Easter Greeting."

It is as near ever-blooming as a geranium. Its habit, constitution, foliage, color, size and profusion of blooms combine to make it, indeed, "The Plant of the Century."

It is certain to become popular. What can we say or do to induce you to give it a trial?

The best is none too good for you. This is it. Circular giving full particulars, testimonials, complete price list, etc., on request. Send trial order now.

PRICE

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

With the season of Lent upon us, decorations for weddings and various social functions have fallen off. Trade in cut flowers is fairly good. Carnations are better. Of the bulbous stock, daffodils and tulips find good sales. Lilies are not so plentiful. Some of the florists are cutting prices on much of their stock. Azaleas are coming in quite freely, but not going fast enough. Peas and violets are plentiful.

Large church orders have been coming in daily since the latter part of last week. This enables florists to sell their lilies and do a good cut flower and plant sale. The weather has been cold and disagreeable, causing some losses in palms and other stock through deliveries. A most welcome mild spell is now on and flowers are blooming fast. Funeral work is keeping up well, and is pretty well distributed, so that most of our florists are sharing in the orders.

Shamrocks and green tinted blooms in baskets of various shapes and sizes had a good sale for St. Patrick's day. There seemed to be more call for the dyed cut flowers this year than last.

Various Notes.

Trost & Steinfurth are building two new houses this season.

The flower show and trade exhibit, now open to the public, proves a big surprise to all, with its beautiful booths decorated with wild smilax, palms, ferns, potted plants and cut flowers, as well as an elegant display of baskets,

GERANIUMS

We need not tell you how we stand on the Geranium question; our name has become synonymous with Geraniums, and to think of Geraniums is to think of Vincent, to think of Vincent is to think of Geraniums; it has become our middle name. We have over a million in 2-in. and 3-in. pots, ready for immediate shipment, in the best assortment of standard varieties in the country, representing the cream of thousands of varieties. Good standard varieties from two-inch pots, at $2.00 per 100; $18.50 per 1000; from three-inch pots, at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. Good collection of Novelties listed in our catalogue at reasonable prices.

SPECIAL

For $18.00 we will send 1000, 50 each of 20 varieties, our selection, either single or double. We have been sending out these collections for a number of years, and they have given general satisfaction. 6000 for $105.00; 10,000 for $175.00. These assortments are made up of all good kinds, and will make a collection that will be hard to beat.

CANNAS

We are not Dealers but Growers, and by handling our product, it being grown, cured and packed under our own personal supervision, we know just what our customers get and do not have to put the blame for poor stock, wrong varieties, etc., on some one else, but stake our own reputation on every package that leaves our place. The following sorts are all distinct useful varieties, select stock, two, three and more eyed divisions—250 at thousand rate; less than 250 of a kind at hundred rate.

QUICK ACTION.

When a man advertises stock that chances to be a little scarce he frequently gets such quick action that it makes a strong impression on his mind. Like this:

Please do not print my classified ad again; the stock was sold even before we received The Review that contained the ad. The paper came Saturday afternoon, but earlier in the day we received a telegram from a subscriber in Missouri who wanted the whole lot. It shows what The Review can do.—W. Bezdek, R. F. D., Cedar Rapids, Ia., March 10, 1914.

GOOD'S FISH OIL SOAP.

According to information supplied by the government, Roberta K. Good, of Philadelphia, recently was charged with shipping so-called Fish Oil Soap to Nashville, Tenn., the label of which stated that it contained sixty-three per cent of fish oil, whereas analysis showed less than that amount present. The product was alleged to be adulterated because it fell below the professed standard, and misbranded in that it was labeled so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser. A fine of $20 was imposed under the insecticide act.

PREPARE FOR EASTER!!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply? From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

It is time to get busy, for Easter is near.
The birds are singing, to bring us good cheer;
And this is the message that sweetens their song—
That Aschmann has plants for which buyers long;
Azaleas, covered with blossoms; Bulbs, radiant and sweet;

Araucarias, perfect; Palms, stately and neat;
Ferns, sturdy and green; Lilies, gleaming and bright;
The stock is complete, the prices are right.
There's no time to be lost, wise florists all hurry
To buy up the best, and save money and worry.

A Photo of a House of Lillium Multiflorum, with Godfrey Aschmann, the Grower.

We have the genuine EASTER LILY, Lillium Multiflorum. We have the genuine stock, true to name, raised from selected bulbs, furnished by our grower in Japan; 9 to 12-in. bulbs; now in fine condition for Easter sale; 5½ to 6-in. pots, having from 5 to 10 buds to a plant; 10c per bud; plants having less than 5 buds, 12c per bud. Order Now. Buds now showing; plants of medium height, just right for Easter.

Headquarters for Azaleas FOR EASTER BLOOMING

Bear in mind we are headquarters for Azalea Indica, the plant of the century, a rival of all Easter novelties. 10,000 of the choicest plants now ready, all in prime shape for Easter trade. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Vander Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Vander Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tiptop condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 50c, 60c 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each.

NOTICE.—A portion of large size Mme. Vander Cruyssen must be ordered in connection with small sizes, because we were able to get only a limited amount of this variety in smaller sizes.

Niobe, double white, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Paul Weber, double rose, white border, 75c, $1.00, $1.25.

De Schryveriana, double variegated pink, white border, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Vervaeana, double variegated rose, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Apollo, double red, $1.00, $1.25, $1.75 to $2.00.

John Llewellyn, double pink, white border, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Simon Mardner, double pink, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Empress of India, double variegated rose, white border, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Deutsche Perle, double white. Stock limited of this variety, 75c, $1.00, $1.25.

About 6 more best assorted varieties. 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

If you leave the varieties to us, we shall give you a good assortment in best varieties and sizes according to price. If we are out of variety and size mentioned in your orders, we shall send the next best variety and size as near as possible. During the big Easter rush, when thousands of boxes must be packed in a very short time, we have no time to look up references, hence must ask for cash with order.

PALMS

We are well provided this Easter with a big stock of Palms. To make room for the new importation coming in from Belgium in April, we will be able to give you excellent good value in them. Just look at these low prices—a bargain seldom offered:

KENTIA Forsteriana and Belmoreana. 5½-in. pots, made up of 3 plants, 40c, 50c and 60c; single, 5½-in., Forsteriana or Belmoreana, 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c; Forsteriana, 12-in. tubs, 65 to 75 in. high, $4.00 to $5.00.

COCOS Weddelliana. 4-in., 25c; made up, 30c; 3-in., 15c.

ARECA lutescens robusta. 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 25c; 5-in., 35c.

CINERARIA HYBRIDA GRANDIFLORA. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

PRIMULA Obconica. In bloom, 4-in., 15c; 5½-in., $3.00 per doz. PRIMULA Chionensis, 5½-in., $2.50 per doz.

HYDRANGEAS

We have a whole house in Hydrangeas, finer than ever, in fine shape for Easter; every branch staked up.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA, full of foliage, all have buds, just right for Easter sales, 5½, 6 and 7-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. FRENCH HYDRANGEAS, Mme. Mouillere, best white, and Gen. de Vibraye, bright rose, 30c, 40c and 50c.

BEGONIA GRACILIS LUMINOSA, deep red, in bloom and bud, 5½-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

BEGONIA ARGENTEA COMPACTA, 4-in. pots, 15c.

Our specialty, the world wide known pure white MOONVINE, Ipomoea Noctiflora, is now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

ARAUCARIA Excelsa. 6-in. pots, 4, 5, 6, 7 tiers, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50.

RHODODENDRONS. 10-in. pans, full of buds, $1.25 to $1.50.

SPIRAEA GLADSTONE. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, DAFFODILS

HYACINTHS are scarce this Easter, but we put in last fall an immense stock of our own importation, which will make large spikes and cannot be compared with the cheap stuff that is now floating on the market. Gertrude, best pink; La Grandesse, best white; King of the Blues, best dark blue; Grand Maitre, best lavender blue. 4-in. pots, staked up, $12.00 for 100 pots. In bloom for Easter week.

TOURNESOL TULIPS, best double red and yellow variegated; Murillo, double rose; Imperator Rubrum, bright red double; Couronne d'Or, double yellow, new, three bulbs planted in a 4-in. pot, $15.00 per 100 pots, $8.00 a doz., in bloom one week before Easter.

DAFFODILS, Von Sion. Best double yellow NARCISSUS in existence, three double-nosed bulbs, planted in 5½ to 6-in. pot, $3.00 per doz. pots, out of cold frame, will bloom one to two weeks before Easter.

While we pay the highest price for our Bulbs of Hyacinths, Tulips, etc., from Holland growers, you must bear in mind that we can sell them no cheaper than we do, and we assure you that there is no profit in it for us for the fine stock we sell you.

FICUS Elastica (Rubber Plant). 4-in., 5-in., 5½-in., 6-in., 7-in., 25c, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

NEPHROLEPIS OR FERNS, Scottii, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in. pots, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Harrisii, 7-in., 75c to $1.00. Glatrasii, 5½-in., 35c to 40c. Smithii, 6-in. pans, 35c, 40c, 50c.

NEPHROLEPIS CORDATA COMPACTA, 4-in., 25c.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI, 4-in., 10c; 2½-in., 4c.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS NANUS, 3-in., 7c; 4-in., 10c; 2½-in., 4c; 5½-in., 25c to 35c.

FERNS for dishes, Wilsoni only, 2½-in., 4c; 3-in., 6c.

PTERIS Wilsoni. In 6-in. pans, 25c.

CYTOMIUM Falcatum (Holly Fern). 5½-in., 25c to 35c.

ENGLISH IVY. 3-in., 7c; 4-in., 10c.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk only. Cash with order, please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Stock last week was far more plentiful than it has been, with the result that prices dropped to an alarming extent. This was particularly true in the case of carnations, which dropped from as high as $4 per hundred, in some instances, to whatever the street vendors cared to offer for them, and on Saturday red carnations could be had in large quantities at 15 cents per dozen, while short-stemmed Richmond roses were sold as low as 25 cents. This cut deeply into the store trade, for the florists were asking 50 and 75 cents per dozen for good stock. Customers could be heard complaining of these prices, which they termed high, although the quality was of the $3 and $4 per hundred variety. Snapdragon is meeting with a good demand and can be had with 4-foot stems in the three colors at $1.75 to $2 per dozen. Large quantities of locally grown lilies are to be had and these seem to be moving well. Cypripediums and catleyas are off crop at present.

The price of sweet peas has dropped from $7.50 to $5 and even less, although the Spencer type is holding up at $2 per hundred. The public is beginning to see the worth of this flower and is more readily paying the price asked. Locally grown single violets at present appearing on the market are as good as any ever seen here, some of the best being as large as pansies, and the best of these can be had at $7.50 per thousand. Some exceptionally fine Radiance roses, with 4-foot stems, and Irish Fire Flame, with good foliage and full blooms, are to be seen in the stores. American Beauty roses are more plentiful and of a better quality, while Richmonds are coming in strong. Yellow lupines are also to be had.

Various Notes.

An attractive store was recently opened at 6 Du Pont Circle, northwest, under the title of the Du Pont Flower Shop, by a corporation of which Elmer C. Mayberry, formerly a member of the firm of Mayberry & Hoover, is a member. The display window is of the show case type, the glass reaching from the ceiling to the level of the floor, and

When experienced florists like these not only install the Skinner System of Irrigation, but continually add to it, don't you think you can place some reliance on their judgment—a judgment that is based on practical watering experience?

500,000 CARNATIONS.

We are devoting our whole plant to the production of rooted carnation cuttings. Our stock plants are grown cool and for cuttings only. Experience proves that cuttings grown from this kind of stock are stronger and far superior to cuttings taken from flowering plants. You can be sure that orders placed with us will be filled with the very best stock.

ROOTED CUTTINGS.

My cuttings are taken from stock plants that are allowed to bloom very little. The full strength of the plant goes to produce strong, vigorous cuttings. Those wishing stock potted and held for planting out time, or earlier delivery, may secure same by a deposit. The balance will be payable with order to ship. 5% discount allowed on all orders accompanied by cash. Your order will receive my personal and careful attention. Cash or references.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 16 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no flizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be potted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers to date. Hardy, field-grown plants from seed sown in August, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong with extra good roots; just right to transplant for blooming in May. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, $4.00 per 1000. Cash with order.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE FUEL MARKET.

The recent moderation in the weather has brought on a slackness in the fuel market in some parts of the country. The possibility of a strike in connection with the negotiations for a new wage contract has not been taken so seriously as in former years, as it is well known that the number of workers lying idle is extremely large, and this has had an additional tendency to soften the market. Buying for storage has kept up steadily, although not to the extent looked for by the operators, who have been expecting an increase in this line to strengthen the market.

The market in smokeless coal, which is used largely by middle western growers, has been fairly steady at Chicago. The producers have been restricting the production sharply, and this, combined with steady buying and a market clear of demurrage coal, has added strength to the market. The circular price of mine-run is $1.40 at the mines, but this has been shaded. Mine-run coal that is up to demurrage has sold as low as $1.25. The market in anthracite in New England and New York has been good, as a result of the recent storm in that region.

HOW BIG IS THE BOILER?

I presented my heating problem to you some time ago, stating that I was unable to get heat enough, and your reply appeared in The Review of January 22. I thank you for the favor, but since your suggestions may be interpreted as meaning that I do not know how to feed a boiler, I am not satisfied to "let it go at that," so I beg leave to trouble you once more.

I have gone over the piping with a rule, measuring every foot of it, and find that there are 264 feet of radiation in one house and 292 feet in the other, making a total of 556 feet in the two houses. In the cellar there are 54 feet, making in all 610 feet of radiation that the boiler has to carry. Now comes the question: How big is the boiler? Because I gave its rating as 1,000 square feet of radiation, you inferred that it contains from four to five square feet of grate surface, but I fail to find that amount. The grate measures 18x23 inches, which would be a little less than three square feet, unless there is some peculiar way of measuring the grates. The smoke pipe, too, is only eight inches in diameter, running to a brick chimney which is 8x12 inches and twenty-three feet high.

I hope that the rating of 1,000 square feet is correct, but I am beginning to think that the boiler is much overrated. The makers of the boiler advise me to add two sections to it, saying that there should be 1,200 feet of radiation to heat the houses. A prominent greenhouse builder suggests that I put in a new boiler, one rated for 1,600 feet. Think

Expressions from Men Who Know Boilers

Try the Kroeschell First—It's Ahead of Them All.

I have had eight or ten other types of boilers. The Kroeschell is the best I have ever used. Your boiler heats the water very quickly—almost as fast as steam.

Yours very truly,

H. K. LEWIS,
Dorothy, N. J.

Kroeschell Boiler Better Than Tubular Boilers or Cast Iron Boilers.

Have used upright boiler, tubular boiler and cast iron boiler. The Kroeschell Boiler heats up better and easier than any other boiler we have ever had anything to do with. If we ever buy another, it will certainly be a Kroeschell.

Very truly yours,

POOLE & PURLLANT,
Washington Court House, Ohio.

No More Cast Iron Boilers.

I have used several different makes of boilers but none I like as well as yours. The Kroeschell is easier to fire, takes less coal and water circulates quicker than any other boiler.

I have used two different makes of sectional boilers—no more cast iron boilers for us. (Signed)

FARMINGTON GREENHOUSE CO.,
E. H. Steele, Manager.
Farmington, Mich., June 30, 1913.

Kroeschell Replaces Three (3) Cast Iron Boilers.

We purchased of you this spring a No. 6 Kroeschell Boiler, which you guaranteed would take the place of three cast iron boilers. Well, the whole thing in a nutshell is this—your word is as good as gold. Night before last we had a severe storm of snow and sleet and a very high wind; we had not the least bit of trouble. We fired the last at 10 p. m., November 24, and the next morning at 7 o'clock we looked at the houses and found it only 1 degree less than when we fired the last coal, 9 hours earlier. If this isn't magnificent work and a good test, we would be pleased to hear from anyone else that could furnish a better boiler. We know if parties wishing a boiler would get one from you they never would try any other. We think in 5 years' running of this boiler we will have the price saved in the difference in our coal bill. Wishing you the best of success, we remain, of it—to carry 600 feet of radiation!

Very truly yours,

The boiler is enclosed in a covering about one inch thick, but none of the piping is covered. What shall I do? I can put a thicker covering on the boiler, cover the pipes in the cellar and extend the chimney with iron pipe, so as to make it from five to eight feet higher. I do not wish to add new sections this winter and I do not intend to put in a new boiler. Any necessary changes must be made immediately. If you can give me any more advice, I shall greatly appreciate the favor. L. W. R.

The houses in question, I understand, are 16x40 feet and ten feet to the ridge. The inquirer also makes the statement, among some other memoranda enclosed with his letter, that in one house, where there are 264 square feet of radiating surface, the temperature drops to 30 degrees in zero nights, and in the other house, which contains 292 square feet of radiation, not over 40 degrees can be maintained. If the houses have tight roofs and warm walls, it should be possible, with this radiation, to maintain 50 degrees in one house and 55 degrees in the other, and a boiler rated at 800 square feet should do the work easily. Of course the proportion between the grate area and the amount of radiation that can be heated varies with the construction of the boiler, but, as a rule, a grate area of four square feet will handle 800 square feet of radiation, and the boilers of that size are usually rated at about 1,000 square feet of radiation. With the boiler described, however, I would not expect to handle more than 500 square feet of radiation.

The addition of two more sections will add materially to the capacity of the boiler, provided five or six feet are added to the height of the chimney. I would consider that such a heater should keep the houses at 45 and 55 degrees, respectively, with the radiation as installed. Covering the pipes in the cellar will also add to the capacity of the boiler, as will taking pains to clean the sections every week. In case the changes suggested are made, it will be possible still further to add to the capacity of the boiler by attaching a mercury generator, but this will be done at a greater expense for fuel, as it will be necessary to force the fire to keep the water at the boiling point in the heater.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The March meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held March 11 at Pembroke hall, with President H. Gaut in the chair. Herman Gold, of Roslyn, was elected to active membership. Petitions for membership were received from Leon Mampoy, of Roslyn, and Edward Rorke, of Locust Valley. The judges for the monthly exhibits were T. Elmslie, Geo. Ashworth and T. Twigg, and their awards were as follows: Twelve spikes mixed antirrhinums, F. Honeyman, first; fifty single violets, F. Honeyman, first. Mr. Redstone, of Hitchings & Co., was a visitor and addressed the meeting.

At the April meeting Mr. Wilkinson, of the New York state department of agriculture, will deliver an address on "Home Gardens," after which there will be a smoker, or social evening. As this is the first to be held, it is hoped the members will help the committee of arrangements in every way and make it a point to attend, so as to make the evening a success. The meeting is called for 6 p. m., instead of 7 p. m., as usual. The exhibits for the next meeting are to be twelve narcissi, twelve early flowering tulips and one pot or pan of hyacinths. The meeting will be held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, Wednesday evening, April 8, at 6 p. m. Harry Jones, Cor. Sec'y.

Paper Pots and Dirt Bands

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots .....	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots .....	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 81 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27th, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading.

There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-hand, Pa., 45,000 2-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6,000 5-inch dirt bands.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Business last week was just about fair. Sales were large and, in spite of the low prices, the week's business ran into fair aggregate figures. There was a good supply of white carnations for St. Patrick's day. The demand proved so strong that all were readily taken up at prices that were rather stiff when compared with prices on other stock in the market.

Roses are coming in steadily. As a whole they prove adequate for requirements, except in the case of American Beauties. Carnations continue in good supply. The receipts of giganteum lilies have increased. Callas are sufficient for requirements. Of the list of small bulbous stock, the jonquils are of the best quality and are proving most popular when sold at ordinary prices. Sweet pea receipts are heavy. Those of the best quality find a nice market. Violet receipts, too, are heavy, but they meet with a poor call. Valley offerings are excellent, but they, too, meet with a rather slow market. The same is true of orchids.

The decorative green line shows only limited offerings of smilax and a good demand for ferns.

Various Notes.

The Hyde Park Rose Co. has been shipping some fine lilies to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

C. E. Critchell reports a strong call for ferns and hanging baskets.

L. H. Kyrk has been receiving excellent forget-me-nots from Geo. Klotter, of Price Hill.

Schumann & Wahlers succeeded in getting a nice lot of hydrangeas into full bloom last week. All were quickly snapped up.

It is with regret that I write of the recent death of Ernst Mack, of Price Hill. Mr. Mack was a prominent figure in the local trade for nearly twenty-five years.

Out-of-town buyers in the city last week were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Beckman, of Middletown, O.; Wm. Rodgers, of Dayton; Fred Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Wm. Lodder, Walter Grey and Carl Heiser, of Hamilton, O., and Carl Brehmer, of Chillicothe, O. Other visitors were Fred Lemon, of Richmond, Ind.; Milton Alexander, of Lion & Co., New York, and Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

These sash are in use by hundreds in every state in the Union, and are paying for themselves every season in extra profits. They are a model of efficiency. The extra layer of glass, with the air space between, conserves the warmth in the bed and does away with the need to buy or use mats or shutters. Here is a saving of 50% in labor and worry. The plants are earlier and stronger—here is a gain of 50% in money returns.

A New Sun-heated Greenhouse

The Sunlight idea has been carried into an inexpensive greenhouse, 11 x 12, 11 x 24, 11 x 36, or 11 x 48 feet in size. It is made of Sunlight Double Glass Sash, which are instantly adjustable for top ventilation and instantly removable for use on hot-beds or cold-frames. Thus they serve a double purpose. For this reason, and also because no expensive system of artificial heating is required, this greenhouse is the cheapest you can buy.

E. A. LIPPMAN

MANUFACTURER OF
GREENHOUSE SHADING

No. 6 High Street, MORRISTOWN, N. J.

AFTER twenty-five years' experience in Greenhouse work, with Lord & Burnham Company, in the glazing and painting department, I am convinced that what is most needed in this line is a good shading, and I am pleased to advise you that I have the real thing, which I am sure you will find to be just what you are looking for.

This shading is beneficial to the painted wood, as it does not contain any gasoline or naphtha which would destroy the paint. In addition, it is beneficial to the glass also, for you will find that when the shading is removed the glass retains its former brilliancy.

As to its application, this is a very easy matter: It can be either sprayed on or put on with a soft brush. For real good work, however, I would recommend the use of a soft brush.

Another advantage of this shading is that when it is no longer needed it can be removed without any difficulty, leaving the glass, as before stated, with its original brilliancy.

I am making this up in gallon cans, in three shades—light green, light blue and pure white. When ordering, kindly mention the color desired.

I trust that you will kindly favor me with a trial order to prove its worth, after which I have no doubt whatever but that you will continue its use.

PRICE, $1.25 PER GALLON

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Weather conditions are gradually becoming more favorable, although there is still a good deal of snow and the temperature continues low. We are beginning to get a little sunshine each day, which was badly needed, for this has been the record year for continuous cold so late in the season and we have had less sunshine since Christmas than any time in years. The supply of flowers is gradually increasing, but so far has only been about equal to the demand. Lilies, which have been extremely scarce, will begin now to come again and there will be plenty of good lilies for Easter. Violets seem to have lost their hold entirely, as the demand is away below that of other years.

There is nothing out of the ordinary going on, as the Lenten season has put an end to social functions, but there have been a great number of funerals, which have kept flowers of all kinds in good demand, and the retailers have not noticed any great falling off in business.

A Model Dormitory.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has built, in connection with the hotel at its Bakerstown place, a dormitory which is unique in its way. The building is a two-story frame structure, with the sleeping rooms on the second floor. Each man has a room for himself. The first floor contains a reading room, a pool room and the lavatories. Here there are a double row of twenty wash basins, four shower baths, four tubs and eight toilets, making it possible for the men to come in, get a shower bath and be dressed for their evening meal in a few minutes.

On the evening of March 12 these rooms were opened to the men by having a dinner to which all of the men and boys on the place were invited, and they, with all the members of the company except Mr. Burki, who is in California, and with a few invited guests, spent a most delightful evening. Addresses were made by the different members of the firm and by employees. Music was furnished by some of the men on the place.

One of the objects of the company in putting up a building of this kind was to make the living conditions of the men as pleasant as possible and thus help the men to feel a greater interest in their home and work. The company hopes thus to get and keep the best possible class of men in the business.

Scotch Soot

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

GREENWICH, CONN.

The regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Doran's hall, Friday evening, March 13, President Robert Williamson presiding. There was a large attendance. The talk on roses scheduled for this meeting was postponed until a later date on account of the illness of the speaker, Alex. Cummings, Jr., of Cromwell, Conn. Two new members were elected and three petitions for membership were received.

The committee appointed at the last meeting to arrange for a June show made a favorable report and the show will be held at Portchester, N. Y., under the auspices of the hospital management, the date to be announced later. The annual fall show will be held in November at New Rochelle, N. Y. A long list of offers from various seed houses, nursery firms and allied interests, of cash and plate, will make the schedule quite attractive. Undoubtedly the show will be up to the usual high standard of excellence. The question of coöperation with the National Association of Gardeners was again discussed. As the policies of this movement are indefinite as yet, the society will await a further report of the executive committee of the association after its meeting to be held early in April before any further action is taken in the matter.

There was an interesting display on the exhibition tables. The judges made the following awards:

Christmas flowering sweet peas, from Carl Hankensen, honorable mention.

Primula obconica, from W. J. Sealey, cultural certificate.

Hybrid freesias, from A. Bieschke, honorable mention.

Mahernia odorata, from P. W. Popp, highly commended.

Cucumber Telegraph, from Louis Whitman, vote of thanks.

Carnations, from A. L. Marshall, vote of thanks.

Rose Mrs. Shawyer, from L. Whitman, cultural certificate.

Ottleya luminosa, from A. L. Marshall, highly commended.

Violet California, from Paul Dwenger, vote of thanks.

Carnation White Wonder, from Carl Hankensen, highly commended.

Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward, from Louis Whitman, honorable mention.

Darwin Tulip Pride of Haarlem, from Geo. Alten, cultural certificate.

TORONTO, ONT.

The executive committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association met Monday, March 9, at St. George's hall, Toronto, with Walter Muston in the chair. There was an excellent attendance, and the proceedings from start to finish were of such a nature as to make all interested in floriculture look forward with increasing interest to the annual convention, which is to be held at Toronto August 4 to 7. Secretary Julius Luck is to arrange with competent authorities for papers to be read at the convention, and among the pleasures that are to be provided are a trip by special train to the Dale Estate, at Brampton, and a visit to Sir Henry Pellatt's extensive grounds and greenhouses, as well as a journey through Miller & Sons' plant at West Toronto. Sports at Scarboro beach are spoken of, as well as a trip across the lake to Niagara with sports in addition, and with the annual banquet to wind up affairs, it is felt that Toronto is really going to excel itself on this occasion. Those in attendance at the executive meeting were the guests of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of the city, and thoroughly enjoyed the visits to one or two principal places of interest, winding up the evening at Loew's Music Hall.

A good many florists suffered through the terrible hurricane which swept through this part of Ontario Sunday and Monday, March 8 and 9. Part of W. J. Lawrence's plant at Eglinton was frozen and J. H. Dunlop's propagating house at Richmond Hill was blown down. Carl Grobba, of Mimico, suffered heavily through the roof of his extensive bulb house being blown over and damaging one of his greenhouses containing valuable stock. The Gresswell Co., of Moore avenue, is reported having been frozen out, and A. J. Milligan, of Lambton Mills, and H. J. Mills, Richmond Hill, are also among those who lost severely through the terrific force of this storm, which lasted for nearly two days and blew at the rate of between seventy and eighty-five miles per hour.

W. G. P.

Calla, O.—Returning from a visit and finding the temperature in his houses a little low, Frank Rogers rushed his boiler, with the result that a large piece of the back section of the cast-iron boiler cracked and fell out, letting out all the water in a moment. Favored by mild weather, he kept the temperature up until a new section arrived. He had fortunately just installed this when the blizzard came.

Louis Dupuy's New Show House at Whitestone, L. I.

IT IS generally conceded that Louis Dupuy is one of the leading plant growers for the New York market. You will recall it was Mr. Dupuy who first made a real success in this country of growing greenhouse heather.

At the National Flower Show last Spring, it was his pot hydrangeas, with their beautiful mammoth bloom heads, that created so much comment.

This curved eave house, which we have just completed for him, will be used for show purposes.

When his customers come to look over his stock, instead of their having to go from house to house, they can step right in the show house and make their selections right then and there of practically everything Mr. Dupuy grows.

It's a distinct advantage to both buyer and seller.

Both photos were taken before the house was cleaned up or benched, but give a good idea of construction and general interior of the house. After Easter we will show how it looked full of blooming plants.

The house is 35 feet wide and 120 feet long. The rafters are placed about 12 feet apart and 20-inch glass used. But one column was necessary. The curved eave adds to its attractiveness and lightness. The side ventilation, with its specially designed sash, is an effective touch well worth the slight additional cost.

The ventilating apparatus is of a special close operating type, so the side-walk is entirely free.

There are several important new structural features introduced in this house which we have not the room to go into here, but we should be heartily glad to talk them over with you at the National Flower Show, if you will call around at our exhibit.

If you can't arrange to come to the show, we will gladly correspond with you on the subject.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

Stock remains about the same as it has been for some time past. The supply of carnations is still large and equal to the demand. Of course, white carnations were in great demand for St. Patrick's day and were in fine shape. The proportion of white seems to be about normal.

Roses are increasing in supply right along, owing to the fine spring weather and the abundance of sunshine which we have been having for the last week. The weather has been exceptionally warm lately; the thermometer registered close to 50 degrees Saturday, March 14. Sunday evening we were treated to our first rain storm of the season. If the warm weather continues, the prospects are bright for an exceedingly large cut of everything for Easter. The quality of the roses is exceptionally fine at this time, and the stock is being cleaned up as fast as it is cut.

The supply of violets and sweet peas is quite large, enabling the trade to take care of all orders on this stock. The Butterfly sweet peas are exceptionally fine and are bringing good prices. Bulbous stock is in fine condition and is selling well. All indications are that there will be an enormous sale of plants in and out of pots for Easter; in fact, there are some varieties which are practically sold out at this early date. Lent is not making the usual inroads in the flower business this year, and while we can give no good reason for it, we are extremely glad of the fact.

Various Notes.

Wm. King, of Antigo, Wis., visited Milwaukee last week. Mr. King says that business at Antigo has been quite good so far this season. H. J. S.

Mrs. C. C. Pollworth fell on a slippery walk last week and broke her ankle.

Pawnee City, Neb.—The residence and office of J. E. Atkinson, proprietor of the Northedge Nurseries & Greenhouses, were destroyed by fire March 10, including all books, correspondence and trade literature.

IF YOU ONLY KNEW what a good eave the METROPOLITAN PATENTED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the eave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. # NEW YORK'S BIG SPRING SHOW

BOLDED by the success of the National Flower Show of 1913, the New York Florists' Club, with the co-operation of the Horticultural Society of New York, is this week holding the largest exhibition of plants and flowers ever attempted in America otherwise than under the auspices of the S. A. F. The financial outcome was made certain months ago by a guarantee fund of $10,000 backed by the sale of space for trade displays to the aggregate of $13,000, with a further cash income from the souvenir program. And the artistic success was assured the moment the doors were opened.

While the title "International," given with the idea of securing advertising prestige, was something of a misnomer, no foreign exhibits being noted, the exhibition is a magnificent one, and, considering the severity of the weather, which kept away some choice exhibits and seriously injured not a few, the display is worthy of the highest praise. The exhibition is nearly as large as that of a year ago, and the arrangement is better. While the aisles are a little narrower, the passage room is ample. The massive pillars really add to the effectiveness this year, owing to the way they have been treated. Everyone concerned deserves hearty congratulations.

While there are fewer large exhibitors from a distance than a year ago, there are many new ones from near New York. The retailers' booths are wonderfully attractive, Max Schling, C. A. Dards, A. T. Bunyard, Geo. M.

Stumpp and Bloomingdale all making superb displays. The greenhouse men's exhibits are more attractive than ever, and the spacious and artistic booth erected for the Horticultural Society of New York by Wanamaker is a splendid feature. The seats and tables provided with the best horticultural books prove alluring to large numbers of the society people.

The Attendance.

Encouraged by liberal advertising, the attendance has been good from the start and the appearances are that the guarantee fund will not be touched; indeed, that there will be a good sum to serve as a nucleus for a fund for another show. The management announced that the gate receipts for the first day, Saturday, March 21, were nearly three times those for the opening day last year. There was a heavy fall of snow that night and prospects were less cheerful the second day, but the attendance was excellent, considering the circumstances, and has increased day by day.

The attendance of trade visitors is large. The private gardeners for 100 miles around have been dropping in by scores and many commercial men from some distance have been noted.

In an exhibition of such magnitude it is impossible to note every attractive feature, but probably the strongest section is that devoted to hard-wooded plants.

Flowering Plants.

Azaleas are shown of grand quality. Julius Roehrs Co., the largest exhibitors in the show, making fifty entries and capturing two gold medals, one silver medal, one certificate of merit, thirty firsts, fourteen seconds, and one third premium in the plant classes, put up a wonderful group of azaleas. Some specimens are six to eight feet across. The group covers 1,000 square feet of space. Some new varieties, such as Daybreak, Blushing Bride and purplea superba, are included. A. N. Pierson and others also show azaleas well. Rhododendrons from A. N. Pierson, F. R. Pierson Co., Bobbink & Atkins, and others, are splendid.

Acacias make a grand showing. Thomas Roland did not put up as large a group as a year ago, but shows the best plants he had at the Boston exhibition, such varieties as pubescens, longifolia, Baileyana and heterophylla. Other exhibitors of acacias are Mrs. F. A. Constable, James Stuart, gardener; Knight & Struck Co., Julius Roehrs Co., and Louis Dupuy. The last named grower has splendid bougainvilleas. Knight & Struck Co. won many prizes and has a beautiful collection. Thomas Roland secured a gold medal for the wonderful Erica melanthera on which he won a similar award in Boston. Erica codonodes from Louis Dupuy is good. H. Frank Darrow shows, for the Haerens Co., some good new azaleas, including Pink Pearl, delicate pink, and Haerewill's alba, a beautiful white.

The large-flowered cinerarias shown are not up to the mark, but the stellatas are immense, as shown by W. B. Thompson and others, being four to five feet across. Cyclamens are good, as exhibited by James Stuart and others, but not up to what are seen at some other shows, notably in Boston. Schizanthus are grand plants four to five feet across, being shown in large numbers. Those from P. M. Marbury, F. C. Luckenbach, gardener; Adolph Lewisohn, J. Canning, gardener; W. B. Thompson and C. K. G. Billings, James Bell, gardener, are all splendid. Primula obconica is well shown, but P. malacoides is the best of the whole primrose family. The dozen from F. V. Burton, Newburgh, Wm. Cordis, gardener, are beauties.

The French hydrangeas are shown in great numbers. Plants of Mousseline, Mme. Mouillere, Avalanche, La Lorraine, Mont Rose and Mlle. Renee Gaillard, from Wm. Ziegler, Jr., Noroton, Conn., A. Bieschke, gardener, are beautiful specimens, each carrying twenty-five to forty heads of bloom. Groups of these from Julius Roehrs Co., Louis Dupuy and others also are fine and attract a lot of favorable comment. Madsen & Christensen, as usual, have some wonderful specimens of marguerites. Geum coccineum Mrs. Bradshaw, a hardy perennial with double scarlet flowers, is well shown by J. J. Goodwin, and merited the certificate of merit awarded.

The awards on blooming plants, in full, were:

The Ferns.

There is probably the finest show of ferns ever seen in America. In the nephrolepis group of the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, each plant is a perfect specimen. Included are N. Roosevelt, Viridissima, Magnifica, Teddy Junior, Amerpohlii, Superbissima, Elegantissima compacta, and several sports from it; cordata compacta, Elegantissima, Muscosa, Giatrasii, Forsteriana, Improved Piersoni and Scholzeli. W. A. Manda shows no less than fifty-four varieties of nephrolepis. Some not included in the Pierson collection are N. tuberosa angustifolia, exaltata grandiceps, Elegantissima cristata, Goodii, tuberosa splendens, candiculata, Mayii ornata, conina, todeoides, Scottii, Philippensis, Spiralis, W. K. Harris and Westoni.

Manda's collection of specimen ferns is fine. It includes splendid plants of Platynerium Hillii majus, Agoniopteris erecta, Polypodium Mandaianum, Polypodium sporadocarpum, Cyrtomium Rochfordianum, Asplenium caudatum, Alsophila australis, Aspidium capense, Asplenium Nidus-Avis and a new polypodium species from South America.

Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Howard Nichols, gardener, has an immense specimen of Goniophlebium subauriculatum. Louis Dupuy and Herman Dreyer show grand nephrolepis. Other ferns worthy of note are W. B. Thompson's, A. M. Johnston, gardener, Adiantum cuneatum, and A. N. Pierson's and Mrs. D. W. James' Adiantum Farleyense. Mrs. B. Stern, W. D. Robertson, gardener, shows an immense specimen of Selaginella denticulata. Julius Roehrs Co. has a fine collection of platyneriums. The Roehrs Co. also has a large group of the splendid new Polypodium glaucophyllum crispum, which will give P. Mandaianum a close run. There are many more fine ferns of which space forbids mention. The awards in full were:

The Cut Roses.

Probably the point of greatest trade interest is the showing of roses, although these were not staged until the third day, Monday, March 23. The showing is a brilliant one, better roses never having been seen. Interest of course centered in the novelties. Hadley and Killarney Brilliant, the present season's debutantes, were staged in such shape as to confirm the good opinion formed of them by the large number of growers who have invested heavily in young stock. Hadley won the gold medal. Other novelties did not show strongly. S. J. Reuter & Son has Lady Ann Borrodell, and Wm. A. Leonard staged Lansdowne, but the judges did not consider the latter sufficiently distinct from Double Pink Killarney to give it an award as a novelty.

The new Waban rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey, illustrated in The Review for March 19, was a matter of much interest as promising a new type of soft pink forcing rose. It was not entered for competition.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., went in heavily in the rose classes, making a splendid showing. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, also was a strong competitor. The Killarney Queens of these exhibitors are something quite out of the ordinary, right up to Beauties in size and quality. Several exhibitors have Mrs. Russell in excellent shape. The rose exhibit from the greatest distance is that of J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, who entered several competitive classes and also showed other roses not for competition. Philadelphia was right in the running.

The rose section is under the management of the American Rose Society. The judges were Joseph Heacock, F. H. Traendly, Leo Niessen, W. J. Palmer, George Burton and Philip Breitmeyer. The awards were:

The Carnations.

The carnation section was staged March 24 under the management of the American Carnation Society. The carnation men insist that March is too late to show their flowers at their best and the carnation section did not compare with the roses for extent or interest. Matchless, Philadelphia and Princess Dagmar, of this year's novelties, were in good shape. Alice Coombs, a 1915 debutante, was excellent and Laura Weber was good. Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and Mrs. Ward were the best of the standard varieties. The awards were:

COMMERCIAL GROWERS' CLASSES.

One hundred blooms white—Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., first on Matchless; Growers' Cut Flower Co., New York city, second on a seedling.

Fifty any other color—Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y., first on Rainbow.

The Rose Plants.

Rose plants are much more largely shown than a year ago, the plants also being much larger and better flowered. M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass., has an imposing display, all his own seedlings. There are forty specimens six to seven feet high and of proportionate width, and many smaller ones. Included are Lady Gay, Arcadia, Mrs. M. H. Walsh, Wedding Bells, Hiawatha, Jessica, Minnehaha, Coquema, Regina, pale pink; Excelsa, Maid Marian, Paradise, La Fiamma, and several seedlings under number.

Anton Schultheis has some grand specimens trained as umbrellas, baskets, pyramids, etc. One umbrella standard is ten feet high. A large basket of Tausendschon was beautiful. The large groups of H. C. Steinhoff and A. Schultheis are great features, hybrid perpetuals, ramblers, hybrid teas and other types being included, both standards and dwarfs. A. N. Pierson and others also show many fine roses. The awards in full were:

COMMERCIAL GROWERS' CLASSES.

Hiawatha, specimen—Miss S. B. Fay, first.

Climbing, any other variety, specimen—Miss S. B. Fay, first.

Palms and Foliage Plants.

The superb group of gloriosa from Julius Roehrs Co., which received a gold medal, is a great feature of the show. There are fifty large plants carrying twenty-five to forty flowers each, all in perfect condition. No such group of gloriosa had ever been seen at a show in America. The ladies seem charmed with these flowers. Roehrs' collection of stove and greenhouse plants, foliage and flowering, is splendid. It includes anthuriums, Calla Elliottiana, Crossandra infundibuliformis and a host of fine foliage subjects. This exhibitor has splendid collections of anthuriums, dracaenas, crotons, etc. Bobbink & Atkins have an attractive group, their plants being mostly cool greenhouse ones. Mrs. D. Willis James, W. H. Duckham, gardener, and other private growers show foliage plants of grand quality. W. A. Manda also has a superb collection.

Palms are larger and more numerous than in 1913. A few noteworthy ones are the grand specimens of Cyathea medullaris, Caryota urens, Phoenix rupicola, P. Roebelenii, Seaforthia elegans, Kentia Forsteriana and Cocos plumosa, the latter thirty feet high. W. A. Manda has splendid plants of Phoenix rupicola, Cocos australis and others. His Cycas circinalis also is noteworthy. There are many other exhibitors of large palms. Phoenix Roebelenii is seen on every hand.

The awards in full in these classes were:

Specimen foliage plant—John Wanamaker, first; Wm. H. Fisher, New Canaan, Conn., second.

Bulbous Plants.

Amaryllis are well shown by Mrs. D. Willis James, but are fewer in number this year than last. Lilies from Louis Dupuy, with a base of Cyrtomium Rochfordianum, are splendid. Roehrs' lily of the valley is fine, as is that from Howard Gould, Wm. Vert, gardener. Anton Schultheis has a magnificent lot of hyacinths, narcissi and tulips, models of cultural skill. The Darwin tulips shown by several exhibitors had been staked up straight and all their beauty is lost. Hyacinths are fine. The prize-winning varieties are Grand Maitre, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, La Victoire, La Grandesse and Etna. Narcissi and early tulips are exceptionally good. Wm. Duckham's first prize group of spring bulbs is finely set up. Geo. B. Schlegel's silver medal group of callas is worthy of note. Freesias shown include many of the new colored varieties. The awards in full were:

Group of bulbs in bloom in pots or pans, arranged for effect with foliage plants, fifty square feet—Mrs. D. Willis James, first; E. Fardell, second.

The Orchid Groups.

Fine as the orchids were in 1913, the showing this year is better in every way, more plants, better plants and a greater variety being in evidence. Among our orchids Joseph Manda's collection is a splendid one. The groups are, as usual, beautifully staged, many new and choice varieties being included. Julius Roehrs Co. has a superb collection, full of choice varieties. Lager & Hurrell show a nice group. In the center is a mirror resembling water, on which floats an imitation raft containing orchid cases. At the rear is a painting of a scene at Rio Bache, in southern Colombia. W. A. Manda also is a large exhibitor. G. B. Schlegel's group of Cattleya speciosissima contains many fine forms. A. N. Cooley has, among other gems, five blooms—John Welsh Young, first, on Lady Alice Stanley; Aug. Doemling, second, on Jonkheer J. L. Mock.

Twenty-five blooms of any undisseminated variety—Montgomery Rose Co., first, on Hadley.

Twenty-five blooms, one or more varieties to be shown in one vase—P. B. Widener, first.

The Carnations.

The carnation section was staged March 24 under the management of the American Carnation Society. The carnation men insist that March is too late to show their flowers at their best and the carnation section did not compare with the roses for extent or interest. Matchless, Philadelphia and Princess Dagmar, of this year's novelties, were in good shape. Alice Coombs, a 1915 debutante, was excellent and Laura Weber was good. Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and Mrs. Ward were the best of the standard varieties. The awards were:

COMMERCIAL GROWERS' CLASSES.

Fifty Benora—A. A. Pembroke, first.

Fifty any other color—Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y., first on Rainbow.

The Rose Plants.

Rose plants are much more largely shown than a year ago, the plants also being much larger and better flowered. M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass., has an imposing display, all his own seedlings. There are forty specimens six to seven feet high and of proportionate width, and many smaller ones. Included are Lady Gay, Arcadia, Mrs. M. H. Walsh, Wedding Bells, Hiawatha, Jessica, Minnehaha, Coquema, Regina, pale pink; Excelsa, Maid Marian, Paradise, La Fiamma, and several seedlings under number.

Anton Schultheis has some grand specimens trained as umbrellas, baskets, pyramids, etc. One umbrella standard is ten feet high. A large basket of Tausendschon was beautiful. The large groups of H. C. Steinhoff and A. Schultheis are great features, hybrid perpetuals, ramblers, hybrid teas and other types being included, both standards and dwarfs. A. N. Pierson and others also show many fine roses. The awards in full were:

COMMERCIAL GROWERS' CLASSES.

Display in pots or tubs, any or all classes, to occupy 300 square feet, arranged for effect—Anton Schultheis, first; H. C. Steinhoff, second.

Twelve climbing or rambling, six or more varieties—Anton Schultheis, first.

Tausendschon, specimen—John Wanamaker, first.

Hiawatha, specimen—Miss S. B. Fay, first.

Climbing, any other variety, specimen—Miss S. B. Fay, first.

Palms and Foliage Plants.

The superb group of gloriosa from Julius Roehrs Co., which received a gold medal, is a great feature of the show. There are fifty large plants carrying twenty-five to forty flowers each, all in perfect condition. No such group of gloriosa had ever been seen at a show in America. The ladies seem charmed with these flowers. Roehrs' collection of stove and greenhouse plants, foliage and flowering, is splendid. It includes anthuriums, Calla Elliottiana, Crossandra infundibuliformis and a host of fine foliage subjects. This exhibitor has splendid collections of anthuriums, dracaenas, crotons, etc. Bobbink & Atkins have an attractive group, their plants being mostly cool greenhouse ones. Mrs. D. Willis James, W. H. Duckham, gardener, and other private growers show foliage plants of grand quality. W. A. Manda also has a superb collection.

Palms are larger and more numerous than in 1913. A few noteworthy ones are the grand specimens of Cyathea medullaris, Caryota urens, Phoenix rupicola, P. Roebelenii, Seaforthia elegans, Kentia Forsteriana and Cocos plumosa, the latter thirty feet high. W. A. Manda has splendid plants of Phoenix rupicola, Cocos australis and others. His Cycas circinalis also is noteworthy. There are many other exhibitors of large palms. Phoenix Roebelenii is seen on every hand.

The awards in full in these classes were:

Specimen foliage plant—John Wanamaker, first; Wm. H. Fisher, New Canaan, Conn., second.

Bulbous Plants.

Amaryllis are well shown by Mrs. D. Willis James, but are fewer in number this year than last. Lilies from Louis Dupuy, with a base of Cyrtomium Rochfordianum, are splendid. Roehrs' lily of the valley is fine, as is that from Howard Gould, Wm. Vert, gardener. Anton Schultheis has a magnificent lot of hyacinths, narcissi and tulips, models of cultural skill. The Darwin tulips shown by several exhibitors had been staked up straight and all their beauty is lost. Hyacinths are fine. The prize-winning varieties are Grand Maitre, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, La Victoire, La Grandesse and Etna. Narcissi and early tulips are exceptionally good. Wm. Duckham's first prize group of spring bulbs is finely set up. Geo. B. Schlegel's silver medal group of callas is worthy of note. Freesias shown include many of the new colored varieties. The awards in full were:

The Orchid Groups.

Fine as the orchids were in 1913, the showing this year is better in every way, more plants, better plants and a greater variety being in evidence. Among cut orchids Joseph Manda's collection is a splendid one. The groups are, as usual, beautifully staged, many new and choice varieties being included. Julius Roehrs Co. has a superb collection, full of choice varieties. Lager & Hurrell show a nice group. In the center is a mirror resembling water, on which floats an imitation raft containing orchid cases. At the rear is a painting of a scene at Rio Bache, in southern Colombia. W. A. Manda also is a large exhibitor. G. B. Schlegel's group of Cattleya speciosissima contains many fine forms. A. N. Cooley has, among other gems, Odontioda Zephyr, Odontoglossum crispum, and Sophro-Cattleya Thwaitiae.

Clement Moore, J. P. Mossman, gardener, has a valuable collection. E. D. Dane, D. McKenzie, gardener, shows a fine specimen of Odontioda Bradshawiae. The awards on orchid plants were:

Dinner to the Judges.

The dinner to the judges of the flower show Saturday evening, March 21, was most enjoyable. Over fifty were present. The Vanderbilt hotel was the place of entertainment and among those present were George Asmus, August Poehlmann, R. Vincent, Jr., W. F. Kasting, J. J. Hess, John Champion, Wm. Falconer, Robert Cameron, J. F. Huss, W. H. Loveless, A. E. Thatcher, Edward Kirk, George Burton and the officers of the New York Horticultural Society and the New York Florists' Club.

The Trade Exhibits.

The trade exhibits are an important feature of the show, especially so as the money received from the sale of space is relied on to meet the premiums in the competitive classes. Many of the so-called trade exhibits are not really trade exhibits, as they are not planned to interest the trade, but primarily to advertise the exhibitor to the general public, and incidentally to the trade. Most of the trade exhibits therefore have been staged in extremely attractive style. Most of them are on the second floor, with the ladies' orchestra to help make things lively for them. Among the exhibitors are:

Alphano Humus Co., New York, a large exhibit of humus, with fine illustrations showing results.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., display of gladiolus bulbs, with photographs, etc.

Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Newburgh, N. Y., man, mule and motor mowers in variety.

Carnation Support Co., Connersville, Ind., self-tying carnation support and rose stake.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., a large line of plant tubs and rustic furniture.

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I., summer flowering bulbs and Calla Eliottiana in flower.

Bon Arbor Chemical Co., Paterson, N. J., Bon Arbor fertilizer in various forms.

Annual Meeting.

The annual business meeting of the American Rose Society was held March 23 at the Grand Central Palace, New York city, with President Wallace R. Pierson in the chair and about fifty present. Mr. Pierson made a brief, business-like address and Secretary Hammond presented a report of the year's work of his office. Treasurer May reported $953.73 on hand. There was general discussion of the test rose garden project the society has under way, especially the one at Washington, D. C. Invitations to hold the next meeting at Buffalo were presented by W. F. Kasting on behalf of the florists of Buffalo, the mayor and the Chamber of Commerce. Decision was left to the executive committee, announcement to be made following the S. A. F. convention at Boston in August. All the officers and executive committee were unanimously reelected.

THE GLASS MARKET.

There is every indication that the early part of April will see an advance in the price of greenhouse glass; the manufacturers operating the hand factories have had one meeting and it seems fairly certain that they will get together on an increase of about five per cent, which will mean 15 cents per box.

"There is extremely little hand-made window glass in stock, especially of the greenhouse sizes," says an authority in the glass trade. "The stock on hand last May was only normal, and the start of the present season's fire was delayed six weeks, to November 1, while the wage question was being adjusted. Consequently, the production to date is six weeks short of the average season's production. The fire will end May 25, so that only about two months remain in which to manufacture to meet current demand and to accumulate a stock to carry the trade through the summer. The glass trade in general reports that the call for greenhouse sizes this season has been the heaviest ever known, and many unfilled orders are on hand. The glass trade is one of frequent changes in trend, but every indication is that when the manufacturing season ends it will find factories and jobbers with much less than the usual stocks of greenhouse glass. It is because of this situation that an early advance in price is considered certain, with a possibility of still another boost after manufacture has ceased."

It is fairly well understood in the greenhouse trade that greenhouse glass is more or less of a by-product; the factories get more money by cutting their sheets into 36x40 or 40x40, and they only cut 16x18 and 16x24 where they cannot cut the larger sizes. No glass factory will cut greenhouse sizes to order except at a premium that the trade considers prohibitive.

Greenhouse glass f. o. b. Chicago in carload lots is today worth about $2.80 per box for double strength A, and $2.65 for B.

The factories turning out machine blown glass can be relied on to keep the price from mounting to any excessive height. But the interests controlling the machine production are just as anxious to make a profit as are the men handling the man blown article. When the hand made glass goes up the machine blown glass moves with it.

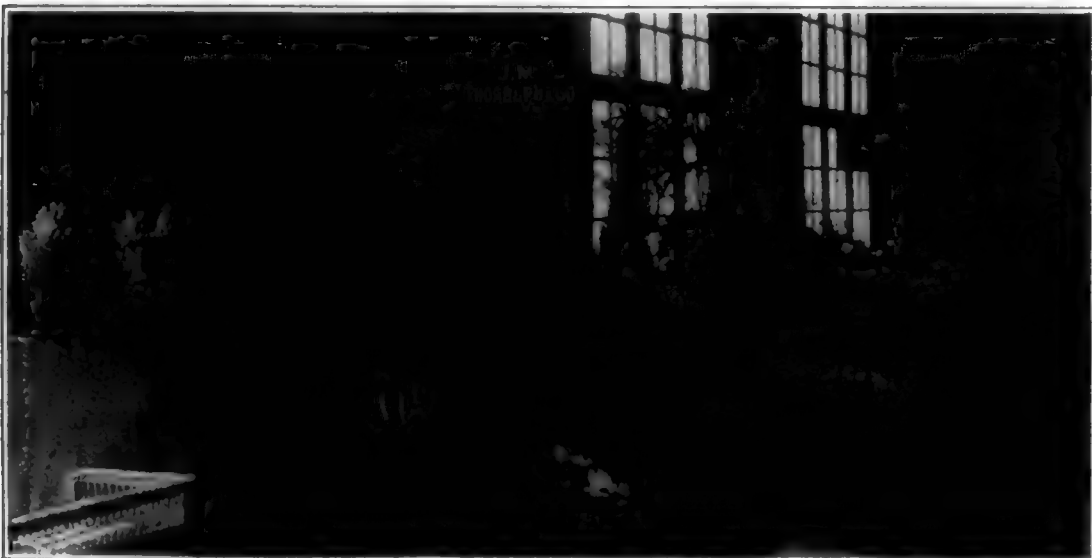

The greenhouse man's dislike of machine blown glass is rapidly disappearing. In the early days of machine manufacture the product unquestionably was more brittle than the hand blown glass, but this brittleness has been overcome to a considerable extent and the machine made glass has the advantage of uniform thickness. The color of the glass is a point that really is of much more importance to the greenhouse man than the method of its manufacture. On this point the machine glass and the hand blown glass are much alike in that some factories turn out a much whiter article than others; it depends upon the materials used.

There is no immediate prospect of any relief from high prices by reason of the importation of foreign glass. In figuring on the cost of Belgian glass laid down in Chicago it appeared, a few days ago, that $3.30 per box was the best that could be done. American glass is not likely to go that high this summer. The reduction in duty has had no effect on the glass market. The reason why Belgian glass is so high is that the Belgian manufacturers have made a pooling arrangement by which the output of each factory is limited. If American manufacturers were to do what the Belgian makers have done Uncle Sam would have them all in jail for violation of the anti-trust laws.

BULBS NOW USELESS.

I have about 500 bulbs left from last fall's planting, which I never put in the ground. They have sprouts about three inches long. Will they bloom if planted in the benches or on the outside?
G. R.

It will not pay to plant these bulbs; any flowers they might produce would be of no value whatever. Any bulbs, such as hyacinths, tulips or narcissi, planted later than the early part of December, will prove of little value.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Odontoglossum Crispum.

Odontoglossum crispum, the most beautiful of all cool orchids, and, in the estimation of many, of all cultivated orchids, is, unfortunately, hard to grow presentably in the United States, owing to our hot summers. Even along the eastern seaboard, however, there is an increasing tendency to attempt the culture of this orchid in especially constructed houses, while from San Francisco northward along the Pacific slope, conditions would seem to be more favorable for its successful culture than in any other part of the country. Since early in November our plants have been in a sunny, span-roofed house, without any shade, the night temperature being 50 to 52 degrees. Some growers make the blunder of keeping odontoglossums in a sunless, northern house all winter, in a temperature of 45 degrees at night. Such plants go to pieces rapidly when our intense heat waves arrive, the leaves simply falling off in showers. On the other hand, plants kept in a fairly warm, airy house in full sun all winter are harder and better in every way. Their leaves take on a reddish hue, and the flower spikes come of a stoutness unknown to plants cultivated in a cold and sunless atmosphere.

About March 15 a light shade will be necessary, but we will keep the plants in a full span house until the end of April, after which time they can go into a lean-to north house, where a lower temperature is more easily maintained. Be sure to protect the flower spikes with a piece of cotton-wool. It is disheartening to find that snails have destroyed them, which they will surely do, especially if the mistake is made of using a carpet of growing sphagnum on the surface of the pots. This moss looks nice, and plants with healthy moss always seem to be in a thrifty condition, but it harbors numerous small shell snails which cut the tender flower spikes just as soon as they show, to say nothing of the roots. For this reason it is a safe plan to use fern fiber only when repotting.

The bulbs of calanthes, which have been resting for some time, are now showing signs of growths at the bases of last season's bulbs and should be shaken out of their pots or pans and placed thickly in flats of coarse sand. Some growers like to use some old cow manure when starting, but I have always failed to see the necessity for this or the advantage of using it. Put the bulbs, after being placed in their flats, in a warm, moist house. Give a good soaking of water; then spray occasionally, but only lightly until the roots and growths are being freely made. The bulbs should be taken out and repotted before the roots have made much progress. Pots or deep pans, sometimes called three-quarter pots, are excellent to use. A 5-inch size will do for one large bulb, and three average flowering bulbs will go in a 6-inch size. Calanthes, it is needless to say, want a warm, moist house, and no one should attempt their culture who does not possess these conditions.

Phalænopsis.

Phalænopsis is now making a beautiful show. The glorious branched spikes of P. Schilleriana, and the white glistening spikes of P. grandiflora, amabilis and Rimestadtiana almost take one's breath away when they are seen well grown. We in the east are yet behind California in the culture of the beautiful moth orchids, but I am glad to see more attention being paid to them. Phalænopsis must have some shade practically all the time, or the handsome leaves become easily scorched. They succeed well in deep baskets and pans, the former being the best, and great care is needed when rebasketing is necessary, in order that the roots may not be injured. Usually a little fresh sphagnum and pieces of fern root can be used as a surface dressing in lieu of an entire overhauling. Sponge the foliage with tepid water. Carefully avoid any draughts, as the plants detest air currents, and let the night temperature be as near 65 degrees as possible.

CATTLEYAS FLOWER FREELY.

Cattleyas at the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., have been flowering with unusual freedom this winter. Over 15,000 blooms have been cut from November 1 to the present date. Spikes bearing four and five flowers have been quite common. The spikes shown in the illustration, however, are extremely rare. On this plant of Cattleya Trianae there are eight blooms on one spike and six blooms on each of the two other spikes, a remarkable and unusual occurrence for this variety.

STOCKS FOR WINTER.

When should stocks be sown, potted and benched to produce winter flowers?
H. & C.

For a winter crop of stocks, sow seed early in August in a coldframe. Pot off the plants as soon as they are ready, and bench them before they become too potbound, which should be on or about September 20. The benches should not contain over four inches of soil. Good varieties are White Column, Beauty of Nice, Rose of Nice, Queen Alexandra and Snowdrift.

SPIRÆAS DO NOT GROW.

I am sending you a spiræa clump. Will you please tell me what is wrong? The clumps have been in pots since December 12 and as yet have not made any headway or any sign of growth.
F. S.

Probably these spiræa clumps were placed in heat before they had any real rest. In such cases they always start poorly, if at all. The specimen sent appears to be fresh, and I would suggest placing the clumps outdoors in their pots for a few days and exposing them to frost; then place them in heat and they ought to start away all right. Spiræas, after being received, should always be exposed to some frost.

Geraniums

LEAF-SPOT ON GERANIUMS.

I am sending you a geranium out of my stock. I have one house with about 5,000 geraniums in it, and they are all beginning to show spots on the leaves and stems such as show on the one I am sending you. These spots keep spreading until the leaves turn and shrivel up and finally die. I am anxious to know what this disease is, and the cause and remedy for it. Any information will be greatly appreciated.

W. E. J.

This is a common trouble among geraniums. Outdoors it usually appears during hot, damp, sunless weather, when growths are soft, and most affects plants which are in rich soil. What soil did you use for your plants? If it contained much animal manure, more particularly any which was not well decayed, it would render such plants softer and more susceptible to attack. Any manure used should be quite old. A 3-inch pot of fine bone to a bushel of earth is good, and helps to create a stocky plant with firm wood which will flower freely.

Pick off the worst affected plants, throw away any badly affected and give the plants a spraying of Fungine, an excellent and reliable remedy for such fungoid attacks. Spray so as to damp every part of the foliage, selecting a clear day for the operation. Use a fine, misty spray nozzle in applying it. Give a second spraying a week later, and, if necessary, a third one. Bordeaux mixture is another good fungicide, but for greenhouse plants I prefer Fungine.

Do not syringe your plants overhead at all, but run them somewhat on the dry side, to harden up the growths. Air freely and leave a little air on all night; keep a dry, buoyant atmosphere and a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and your plants should soon show an improvement. Cleanliness, plenty of fresh air, full sunlight and a drier atmosphere—all these will help to put new life into your plants.

C. W.

GERANIUM LEAVES DISEASED.

Enclosed you will find some geranium leaves from plants in my greenhouses. The plants are now in 4-inch pots in good, rich soil and seem to be thrifty otherwise. What is the matter with them? Would you suggest using nitrate of soda, or is there something else I can use to remedy this trouble?

T. G.

Keep the affected leaves picked off. Throw away any badly spotted ones. Probably the cause of the trouble is too rich soil. If you used much decayed animal manure in the soil, it would promote a rank, soft growth and make the plants more susceptible to disease. Geraniums should have little animal manure, and such as is used should be old and well decayed. Bone, at the rate of a heaping 3-inch potful to a bushel of soil, is a good fertilizer for geraniums, keeping the plants hard and stocky and promoting floriferousness. On the other hand, the too free use of animal manures causes soft growths which flower but sparsely.

If your plants are well potbound and the growths are not soft, you might try an application of weak nitrate of soda water. Use it with caution, however, as it may improve the color but at the same time make the growths decidedly soft. Soot water, such as is obtained from the imported Scotch soot, is splendid for toning up sickly looking plants. Give the plants full sunlight, do not spray overhead, ventilate the house freely and give an average night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Keep bad foliage removed and give the plants a fresh stand as they crowd one another; also keep the atmosphere always on the dry side. I hope some of these suggestions may, if followed, be helpful to you.

C. W.

LEAVES TURNING BROWN.

I am enclosing some geranium leaves which, I think, are diseased. All the leaves on my geraniums have turned brown in the same way. I would like to know the cause and the remedy for it.

J. W. N.

Occasional plants will not infrequently lose their foliage in this way, the whole plant being sometimes affected.

This may be due to some inherent weakness in these particular plants, or the trouble may be brought on by an overdose of manure, either in the soil or in liquid form. The best plan is to throw away badly affected plants. Isolate others; keep them picked over and carefully watered and they will usually grow out of it. Keep the atmosphere dry; don't shade the glass at all. Geraniums want full sunlight, at least for some time yet, and only a light covering is needed to protect plants in full bloom nearer bedding-out time. If the plants seem at all starved, feed them once in four or five days with weak liquid manure, or nitrate of soda given once a week will help to tone them up. Usually two doses of the latter will suffice.

C. W.

GERANIUM LEAVES TURN RED.

Enclosed you will find a sample of leaves picked from our young geraniums, which are now in 3-inch pots. There seems to be an increasing amount of this trouble; the older leaves turn red and in a few instances the whole plant is affected. We shall greatly appreciate your opinion as to the cause of this and the best remedy for it.

C. F. C.

This looks like a case of starvation at the root, from lack of both water and plant food. Sometimes an overdose of bone in the soil will cause it. If your plants are well rooted in their pots, I would start feeding them; a dose of soot or weak nitrate of soda would be good. A top-dressing, also, of some high-grade fertilizer should soon help to tone them up. Keep the plants fairly moist, but not wet; air freely on pleasant days; do not use any shade over them; let the night temperature average 50 degrees. These conditions should suit geraniums, and if your plants are treated thus they ought to improve rapidly.

FLORIST.....

SIX DAYS' WORK ENOUGH.

The article on Sunday closing in The Review for March 19 is all right. On the doors of my establishment the sign reads, "Closed on Sunday except for funeral orders."

A florist, or, in fact, any other man, has enough to do in six days; he is certainly entitled to rest one if he can. By the time we attend to the fires, watering, ventilating, etc., and go to church, as some of us do, it is about dinner time. I never lost financially by closing.

You will have plenty of visitors, but no customers, if you keep open for inspection. They will walk through and handle everything that is loose, but "nary a buy." There are exceptional cases where one is obliged to accommodate, but they are so few they do not count.

It's just owing to how you start and your greed for money. I have a business that allows me a good living, a month's vacation in Michigan and time for duties as a citizen, which I owe my fellow-citizens, church, etc. If you are not "money-mad," selfish or a crank, you will respect Sunday. There is no excuse for keeping open Sunday.

ALL STRANGERS NOT CROOKS.

On the Saturday following the date of issue, I was reading in The Review of March 5 an account of a person trying to flimflam the florists at Sandusky, O. Within an hour a strange lady came into our store and, after asking the prices of flowers, finally ordered some carnations. In payment she tendered a check for $5 on a bank about 150 miles away. Well, say! she had my goat! I was unable to cash the check for her, as it was Saturday and the banks were closed. So I gave her the carnations, thinking we were better able to lose them than the cash change. Her story was plausible enough; she even went so far as to give her mother's address, not over twenty-five miles distant.

The following Monday her brother came in, paid the bill and thanked us for our courtesy to a stranger, and we added a new customer. Now, I felt like Bill Nye when a friend asked him, "Whom can we trust?" Bill said, "That is not the question at issue. Who will trust us?"

ANNA SAWYER'S WINDOW.

At her store at 4044 West Madison street, Miss Anna Grace Sawyer, one of Chicago's most enterprising women florists, pays particular attention to the appearance of her window. She has a large space for the display of cut flowers and plants, and makes excellent use of it. The accompanying illustration shows only one-half of her window, as it appeared in Easter dress. A group of doves in flight was a sign of the season. Below the doves, arranged so as to make as effective a showing as possible, were blooming plants of all kinds for Easter—lilies, lilacs, hydrangeas, azaleas, hyacinths, etc., all combining in a strong suggestion to the passer-by to do his Easter flower buying here.

RETAIL STORE AT LOWELL.

In the accompanying illustration may be seen the front of the store of Morse & Beals, at Lowell, Mass. The window is filled with artistically arranged vases of flowers, strongly reinforcing the suggestion made by the large letters at the bottom of the window, spelling "Choice Flowers." In front of the store is the 1-year-old delivery car of the firm, which holds the unique record in that town of having traveled every day this winter, having made all deliveries, even on the day of the big storm, February 14. In the first year of the car's use, ending March 19, it accumulated a mileage of over 20,000 miles.

PUSHING THE TELEGRAPH END.

Following the idea contained in the description of Edward Sceery's window, published in The Review a few weeks ago, Holm & Olson, St. Paul, have sent the following letter to a considerable number of retail florists all over America:

We are members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and wish to make a window display featuring that part of the business. As we wish to make this display before Easter, we are writing to ask your cooperation by sending us one of your shipping tags and a box label by return mail.

We are in a growing city of 250,000 people, and have a territory of 500,000 square miles depending on this market. This territory, as you may know, is one of the richest in the country, including the famous wheat belt of the northwest, is growing rapidly and is very prosperous. The demand for flowers in this section is increasing all the time. Any orders that you may have for this city and the northwest we will be pleased to execute for you, and any orders that we may have for your town and vicinity we will be pleased to forward you for filling.

The possibilities of the Telegraph Delivery Association are almost unlimited, and we believe there is no better field for advertising our goods than this. A quick response will be greatly appreciated. We enclose herewith one of our shipping tags and a box label.

DRACÆNA INDIVISA.

Can I grow Dracæna indivisa from 3-inch pots large enough for Memorial day? I also have seedlings. Will they have to be planted out in the field next summer and kept over winter to have plants in 6-inch or 7-inch pots? F. B.

Dracæna indivisa in 3-inch pots at this date will not make large enough plants to be of much value for Memorial day this year. If the plants are well rooted, they may be shifted into 4-inch pots and will possibly make growth enough to be useful in window boxes or vases of mixed plants, but they would not be large enough for center plants.

The seedlings would better be planted out in the field for the summer and lifted and potted up before frost. They may then be kept through the winter in a cool greenhouse, and with proper attention should make good stock for the following season.

W. H. T.

SCALE ON CAMELLIA JAPONICA.

I am sending you some leaves of Camellia Japonica, which are infested with some kind of insect or scale. The plant is outside, seven or eight feet tall and is now full of bloom. The whole plant is affected, many of the leaves having turned yellow, and I am afraid it will die if it is not soon cleaned of this pest. Please let me know what to do for it. S. B.

The camellia leaf was covered with San Jose scale. In order to kill this scale, you must lose no time in spraying the plant with one of the soluble oil sprays. Apply at the rate of one part of the oil to fifteen parts of water, and dampen every vestige of wood and foliage. Another way to kill the scale is to cover the plant with a close, waterproof covering and fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas. The spraying, while it will kill the scale, will also burn the young growths. C. W.

Geraniums

LEAF SPOT ON GERANIUMS.

I am sending you a geranium out of my stock. I have one house with about 5,000 geraniums in it, and they are all beginning to show spots on the leaves and stems such as show on the one I am sending you. These spots keep spreading until the leaves turn and shrivel up and finally die. I am anxious to know what this disease is, and the cause and remedy for it. Any information will be greatly appreciated.

W. E. J.

This is a common trouble among geraniums. Outdoors it usually appears during hot, damp, sunless weather, when growths are soft, and most affects plants which are in rich soil. What soil did you use for your plants? If it contained much animal manure, more particularly any which was not well decayed, it would render such plants softer and more susceptible to attack. Any manure used should be quite old. A 3-inch pot of fine bone to a bushel of earth is good, and helps to create a stocky plant with firm wood which will flower freely.

Pick off the worst affected plants, throw away any badly affected and give the plants a spraying of Fungine, an excellent and reliable remedy for such fungoid attacks. Spray so as to damp every part of the foliage, selecting a clear day for the operation. Use a fine, misty spray nozzle in applying it. Give a second spraying a week later, and, if necessary, a third one. Bordeaux mixture is another good fungicide, but for greenhouse plants I prefer Fungine.

Do not syringe your plants overhead at all, but run them somewhat on the dry side, to harden up the growths. Air freely and leave a little air on all night; keep a dry, buoyant atmosphere and a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and your plants should soon show an improvement. Cleanliness, plenty of fresh air, full sunlight and a drier atmosphere—all these will help to put new life into your plants.

C. W.

GERANIUM LEAVES DISEASED.

Enclosed you will find some geranium leaves from plants in my greenhouses. The plants are now in 4-inch pots in good, rich soil and seem to be thrifty otherwise. What is the matter with them? Would you suggest using nitrate of soda, or is there something else I can use to remedy this trouble?

T. G.

Keep the affected leaves picked off. Throw away any badly spotted ones. Probably the cause of the trouble is too rich soil. If you used much decayed animal manure in the soil, it would promote a rank, soft growth and make the plants more susceptible to disease. Geraniums should have little animal manure, and such as is used should be old and well decayed. Bone, at the rate of a heaping 3-inch potful to a bushel of soil, is a good fertilizer for geraniums, keeping the plants hard and stocky and promoting floriferousness. On the other hand, the too free use of animal manures causes soft growths which flower but sparsely.

If your plants are well potbound and the growths are not soft, you might try an application of weak nitrate of soda water. Use it with caution, however, as it may improve the color but at the same time make the growths decidedly soft. Soot water, such as is obtained from the imported Scotch soot, is splendid for toning up sickly looking plants. Give the plants full sunlight, do not spray overhead, ventilate the house freely and give an average night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Keep bad foliage removed and give the plants a fresh stand as they crowd one another; also keep the atmosphere always on the dry side. I hope some of these suggestions may, if followed, be helpful to you.

C. W.

LEAVES TURNING BROWN.

I am enclosing some geranium leaves which, I think, are diseased. All the leaves on my geraniums have turned brown in the same way. I would like to know the cause and the remedy for it.

J. W. N.

Occasional plants will not infrequently lose their foliage in this way, the whole plant being sometimes affected.

This may be due to some inherent weakness in these particular plants, or the trouble may be brought on by an overdose of manure, either in the soil or in liquid form. The best plan is to throw away badly affected plants. Isolate others; keep them picked over and carefully watered and they will usually grow out of it. Keep the atmosphere dry; don't shade the glass at all. Geraniums want full sunlight, at least for some time yet, and only a light covering is needed to protect plants in full bloom nearer bedding-out time. If the plants seem at all starved, feed them once in four or five days with weak liquid manure, or nitrate of soda given once a week will help to tone them up. Usually two doses of the latter will suffice.

C. W.

GERANIUM LEAVES TURN RED.

Enclosed you will find a sample of leaves picked from our young geraniums, which are now in 3-inch pots. There seems to be an increasing amount of this trouble; the older leaves turn red and in a few instances the whole plant is affected. We shall greatly appreciate your opinion as to the cause of this and the best remedy for it.

C. F. C.

This looks like a case of starvation at the root, from lack of both water and plant food. Sometimes an overdose of bone in the soil will cause it. If your plants are well rooted in their pots, I would start feeding them; a dose of soot or weak nitrate of soda would be good. A top-dressing, also, of some high-grade fertilizer should soon help to tone them up. Keep the plants fairly moist, but not wet; air freely on pleasant days; do not use any shade over them; let the night temperature average 50 degrees. These conditions should suit geraniums, and if your plants are treated thus they ought to improve rapidly.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Marguerites.

Where a batch of marguerites are wanted for next Christmas, put the cuttings in now. Keep these potted along and constantly pinched back all summer. The best place for them after danger from frost has passed is plunged in a bed of coal ashes outdoors. These plants, if housed early in October, given a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night, well watered and fed, will be in full bloom before Christmas, at which time they will prove salable. Mrs. Sander and the large flowered white varieties are of no use for growing in this way. They are poor winter bloomers and do not make as shapely, bushy plants as the older and smaller flowered ones. The yellow marguerites, popular as they are for cutting, are of little value as pot plants, as their habit is not shapely.

Bougainvilleas for Easter.

If bougainvilleas are only showing color now, they will need hurrying. Give them 60 degrees at night until they are fairly well expanded; then move them to a lower temperature. Bougainvilleas are popular Easter plants, although their color is not such as to appeal to many people; others also object to the flowers as being too paper-like and artificial in appearance. They are really remarkable keepers when in bloom, and they are among the plants which should be fully expanded before being placed on sale.

Shade for Palms and Ferns.

The sun is now strong, and, if shade has not yet been given to palms, ferns and other foliage plants, it should be applied at once. Give a light coat of kerosene and white lead; a heavy shade is inadvisable thus early, as it only tends to draw up the plants, and we are still likely to get spells of cold, dark weather, when we may wish there was no shading on the glass. Take advantage of any spare time to do any necessary repotting of the foliage plants before the strenuous season arrives. Also, any sponging and trimming of the foliage should be done now, as there will be little time for it later.

Violets.

Easter comes a good deal later than a year ago, and it will not be easy to keep single violets until that date. They can be kept much cooler, however, and the flowers will hold their color better if the glass is given a shading of kerosene and white lead. In order to cover a large house quickly, where brushes would be entirely too slow, use a force pump with a fine spray nozzle, being careful to close the ventilators during the operation. There will be no trouble in holding double violets until Easter, as they bloom later than the singles, but they, also, will be benefited by some shade.

PLANTS FOR VACANT LOT.

A friend of ours has a small vacant lot on the main street of our town, located in southeastern Ohio. Some time ago we suggested to him that we furnish the flowers if he would plant them and care for them during the coming summer. He has retired from active life and would greatly appreciate something of this kind. Although we are in the trade, what we know about flowers would make an extremely small book. We would therefore greatly welcome a few suggestions as to what varieties we can start from seed for this purpose, when to start them, how to get them ready—whether in flats or pots—and a suitable arrangement for the plants in the beds. We want just a neat, plain plan, nothing elaborate, and shall be thankful for any suggestions you make make. The space to be planted is about 30x40 feet. A few seats can be placed in it, and it can be made an attractive little spot.

H. B.

I have drawn a rough sketch of the plot of ground, assuming that it is 30x40. I have run paths and made all beds on straight lines. This may not quite suit you, but you may get some ideas from it. The paths can be either of grass or stone. Grass would look the best, but more labor would be entailed in caring for it.

If you wish to use annuals altogether for this garden, the following are suitable: Petunias, verbenas, balsams, Salvia splendens Bonfire, asters, stocks, marigolds, Phlox Drummondii, Vinca alba and rosea, zinnias, salpiglossis, ageratums and ricinus. The foregoing should be started under glass. The ricinus you need sow only a few seeds of; one plant in each of the four central beds would give added height and a more tropical appearance. Any of the foregoing will do as well from flats as from pots, except the ricinus. Among annuals that can be sown outdoors, if desired, are these: Alyssum Little Gem, annual larkspurs, calendulas, Gaillardia Lorenziana, candytuft, mignonette, annual chrysanthemums and scabiosas.

It is difficult to give a planting plan which will provide for all the varieties I have mentioned, but I submit the following arrangement in the hope that it may at least contain some suggestions for you:

Bed No. 1.—One ricinus in center; balance of bed Salvia splendens Bonfire; border of light blue ageratums.

No. 2.—Ricinus in center; balance of bed yellow zinnias or mixed zinnias, with border of white ageratums.

No. 3.—Same as No. 1.

No. 4.—Same as No. 2.

No. 5.—American branching asters; border of white alyssum.

No. 6.—Giant ten weeks' stocks, dotted with salpiglossis; border of white alyssum.

No. 7.—Verbenas.

No. 8.—Vinca alba and rosea.

No. 9.—Asters; border of sweet alyssum.

No. 10.—French and African marigolds; border of alyssum.

No. 11.—Phlox Drummondii, dotted with balsams.

No. 12.—Calendulas or gaillardias.

A few taller growing plants dotted here and there will help to break up any flatness.

DEUTZIAS FOR EASTER.

What is the proper temperature for Deutzia gracilis, and how should it be treated to come in for Easter? Should the plants be in the house now?

A. G. S.

Bring Deutzia gracilis into a cool house now. It can be flowered in six weeks by forcing it in a brisk heat, but the quality of the flowers will be vastly improved if it is not grown too warm. You will find 50 degrees at night sufficient.

Plan for Planting a Vacant City Lot.

Truss House of Dobbs & Son, Auburn, N. Y., Built in 1911, Part of which Collapsed Early this Month.

DOBBS IS TAKING HEART.

William G. Dobbs, who is the sole owner of the business conducted under the name of Dobbs & Son, at Auburn, N. Y., is beginning to take courage and push ahead again, after the accident that befell him in the big storm of March 1, when a section of the roof of one of his truss houses, 42x250, gave way under the weight of the snow. Mr. Dobbs had just recovered from a long and expensive illness and the loss of all the stock, in addition to the damage to the big greenhouse itself, took the heart out of him. As he said: "Coming, as it did, after so many other setbacks and troubles, extending over three years, at first I felt like giving up and quitting, but after so many sincere expressions of sympathy and encouragement as have been received I feel like going at it harder than ever." What has appealed to Mr. Dobbs most of all was the action of some of his neighbors in offering young stock to help him restock the house. He needed the help and appreciated it. As he says: "We have put a wooden roof over the break and are planting the house to vegetables, etc., as fast as we can take out and clear the frozen stock. What we are the heaviest losers on are our cuttings for next season's stock, mums, carnations, vincas, etc. All our carnations, about 13,000, were in this house, besides a bench of stock mum plants with thousands of cuttings just ready to be taken off and put in the sand."

In addition to replacing the part of the house that went down, the entire structure will have to be reinforced, as "it shows weakness in other places," according to Mr. Dobbs, who apparently does not think so well of the style of construction as he did when he sent the photograph of his plant to The Review for publication with the following description, February 29, 1912:

"This house was built by the Geo. M. Garland Co., of Des Plaines, Ill. It is 42x250 and is said to be one of the finest greenhouses in the state. Especially noteworthy is the fact that a house forty-two feet wide can be built without posts or supports of any kind. Truss construction accomplishes this, and Mr. Dobbs says he believes the houses thus built are as strong as those on posts. If this is true, it is certain that much less shade is cast, and with sunlight at a premium, as it is during the winter, the truss method naturally holds great interest for the grower. The sides of the house are built of pressed concrete blocks, with rock face, and the offices, boiler rooms, stacks, etc., all have the same finish. There are ten beds in the house, each 6x120 feet and six inches deep, and all of concrete construction. The posts, sides and bottoms were poured in one continuous mass. The boiler room and coal cellars are all fireproof, being entirely of concrete; even the roofs are concrete, with expanded metal reinforcing."

THE TARNISHED PLANT BUG.

Will you please tell us the best way to fight the tarnished bug? Last fall we grew cucumbers and were greatly troubled with these bugs or flies. They sucked the sap from the buds or growing points, stunted them and sometimes killed them. New shoots came out below, but met the same fate, until the plants were badly stunted and hard to train up on the trellises. No fumigating or spraying that we could do seemed to harm this pest, but it gradually disappeared through the late fall and now we only find a bug occasionally. Did they disappear because of the lateness of the season or because the plants became too old for them to feed on? What is the life history of this pest? Does it breed outside the greenhouse and come in? If it does so, could we find its breeding place and destroy it? Will this pest start multiplying when the warm days come and infest the spring crop of cucumbers, or is it only a fall pest? Our greenhouses are next to an old garden patch and the benches were filled with soil from this patch last summer. F. T. F.

The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that the tarnished plant bug in sixty years has caused a loss considerably in excess of $350,000,000 to American farmers. It is more effectively destroyed during the winter months than later in the season, when it has left its winter quarters. The burning of dry grass, leaves and rubbish of all kinds on the margins of the woods and fields is the best way to fight it. Hedgerows should be cleaned out and all rubbish about them burned. Leaving ground quite bare of vegetation over winter exposes the bugs to the elements and kills them.

Most of the bugs pass the winter in thick bunches of clump-forming grasses and in waste places, pastures and meadows, along roadsides, railroads, etc. During late fall and early winter large numbers may be found in corn husks, kafir corn, etc. It is important when burning grass to be sure it is quite dry and yet to burn it slowly, so that the flames will penetrate the densest portions and reach the bugs. Winter is the best time to do the burning, as in fall and spring green and wet stems furnish protection to some of the pests. I would advise close cultivation around your greenhouses, and cleanliness will go far toward reducing the numbers of the pests. If you have facilities for sterilizing your soil, you would be sure by that method to get rid of all the bugs of any kind in the soil or in the herbage which might come in with the soil. C. W.

Merriam, Kan.—C. T. Reinhardt, who built a greenhouse, 25x75 feet, last summer, is growing carnations, which he wholesales to the Humfeld-Orear Floral Co., at Kansas City. Mr. Reinhardt plans to build more houses next summer.

BALTIMORE CLUB MEETING.

Owing to the favorable weather, a large number of members were present at the regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club March 23. The regular order of business was suspended while F. W. Beasley, state for-ester, gave an interesting talk on shade trees. He illustrated his remarks with some fine lantern slides depicting the different methods of trimming and planting trees and also of the way trees are destroyed in cutting by telephone and telegraph companies. President Johnston appointed Messrs. Moss, Boone, Perry, Kress and Hamilton as a publicity committee to further the flower interests in this city. The banquet committee reported on the financial end of our last affair and was discharged. William F. Bauer and R. Harrison were proposed for membership. Treasurer Fred G. Burger read a report of the financial condition of the club, which showed the organization to be in a flourishing condition. The financial secretary reported twenty-nine members in arrears for dues and assessments over one year. These names were ordered stricken from the roll.

G. Holloway, of Waverly, exhibited a double white snapdragon which he grew from seed and which looks to be a good thing for cutting, as the heads are large and full of flowers. The grower states it to be a good winter bloomer.

Treasurer F. G. Burger was present after being away for six weeks on account of illness. C. M. Wagner, one of the regulars, was absent on account of sickness. W. F. E.

COLUMBUS, O.*The Market.

Trade has been quite heavy for the last two weeks, with a good supply of stock coming in. There has been a fair cut of roses and the quality is quite good, as a rule. There are about enough to meet the demand. Carnations are only in fair supply, and at times there has been a scramble to get enough to supply the needs of all. There has been a good supply of bulbous stock on hand, and, as a rule, it is cleaned up closely. About the only things in this line that have been scarce are Paper Whites and double daffodils, but a good supply is coming on for Easter. Callas and Harrisii lilies have been a little scarce, not nearly enough to meet the demand. Beauties have been coming in poorly and the demand is rather light.

Cut ferns have been at a great premium here for the last week or two, and several times it was impossible to get a fern leaf in town. Other greens were scarce at the same time, and it was hard to get work out. Potted plants have been moving in good shape. A nice variety is to be seen and reminds one that spring is not far away.

Various Notes.

There was a great deal of stock used here during the automobile carnival, as nearly all the automobile stores decorated some.

The Columbus Floral Co. is cutting some good roses at the present writing and they find a ready sale.

The Munk Floral Co. reports business good at the main store and also at the branch store.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports business good in all branches. The members of the force are having their hands full with the new parcel post rates.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has a good supply of Easter stock in sight. J. M.

DETROIT.*The Market.

Roses are becoming more nearly equal to the demand, but, on the whole, the quality is only fair. Beauties are still a scarce article. Carnations are plentiful. The demand for white carnations was exceedingly heavy for March 17. Until a week ago sweet peas were to be obtained in abundance, but they appear to be off crop with most growers at present.

Bulb stock is plentiful. About the only blooms which clean up well are Murillo and double yellow tulips; these are in big demand. The market is flooded with poor daffodils. Lilies are plentiful and not of extra good quality. Callas are quite scarce.

Various Notes.

Blooms of Carnation Philadelphia are now in big demand at various shows. A number were shipped to the New York show and arrived in fine condition. Some recently shipped to St. Paul also arrived in good shape. Another lot were shipped to a florist in Bozeman, Mont., and a letter from there spoke of their good arrival.

Recent visitors were: S. S. Skidelsky; Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., and Wm. Craig, all of Philadelphia, and W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind. J. Breitmeyer's Sons were busy last week decorating the stores of the Crowley-Millner Co. and the J. L. Hudson Co. for their spring openings.

Hugo Schroeter has sold his bungalow and bought a two-family flat, the lower apartment of which is still to rent. H. S.

Charles H. Maynard states that he has incorporated the Flower Growers' Corporation and expects to be ready to open his wholesale house about April 1. Quarters have been secured at 118 Broadway.

CINCINNATI.*The Gateway to the South.

Last week proved a good one locally for business. There seemed to be a good quantity of funeral work and other work in this city, while shipping business continued strong. A few cloudy days tended to shorten the supply somewhat, but in general receipts proved ample for requirements.

The cuts of roses have increased materially in size. So far, however, the demand for them has kept pace with the larger receipts and all have been cleaning up well.

White carnations are selling better than the others. Giganteum lilies seem to be short of requirements. Callas are fully adequate for all demands. A large number of fine sweet peas are coming into the wholesale houses. The better grades sell well, but the poorer grades find a slow market, if any. Violets, valley and orchids are all in strong supply. Some fine snapdragons are offered. The demand for decorative greens of all kinds continues good.

Various Notes.

E. G. Gillett reports a busy week. C. E. Critchell has been receiving daily shipments of the fine sweet pea novelties from the A. F. Amling Co., of Maywood, Ill.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been receiving some excellent lilies of the valley.

J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, Ind., was a heavy buyer in this market throughout last week.

W. U. Stableton and sister, of Manchester, O., were recent visitors. C. H. H.

LOUISVILLE, KY.*The Market.

Louisville florists continue to have good business. All of the available small stock is used up, and stock suitable for funeral work is scarce. Local growers are showing a good supply of plants for the Easter trade, and all indications point to a good business in plants of all kinds.

Various Notes.

F. Walker & Co. are showing some fine rhododendrons, among them some fine plants of Pink Pearl.

Mrs. M. D. Reimers had an attractive window for St. Patrick's day. The window was well filled with a good assortment of plants, and in the center a large Irish harp was featured.

George Schulz, of the Jacob Schulz store, says that his sale for the Young Women's Christian Association building fund campaign was a big success. Everything that was on hand was cleaned up.

Fred Haupt, who has been fighting the local department stores' sales of cheap carnations, has practically put a stop to them. He has been advertising carnations every Saturday at 25 cents a dozen and now everybody waits for his Saturday sales. March 21 Mr. Haupt sold 25,000 carnations at this price.

The city park commission last fall started a plan for beautifying the business section of the city by hanging flower baskets on the lamp posts. This is a good idea and should be encouraged by the local florists. The plan was started at the wrong time, as the winter set in and practically destroyed these boxes. Now, however, spring is here and the idea should be brought forth and given a trial.

The next meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists will be held at the store of August Baumer Wednesday, April 1, at 8 p. m.

Alfred Gottwald, son of Frank Gottwald, has sold his farm at Evansville, Ind., and is now with his father. They have been doing a great deal of landscape work in the past and are waiting for spring to open up so that they can get to work. R. J. S.

Sedalia, Mo.—T. L. Berry has left the employ of the State Fair Floral Co. to become manager of the nursery department of the Archias Floral Co. Previous to his connection with the State Fair Floral Co. Mr. Berry was with the Archias Floral Co. for three years.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting March 19, at the Chamber of Commerce building. P. A. Chopin presided. Secretary Panter was at his desk and a fair number of members were present.

The committee on by-laws reported progress. The flower show committee reported that the Southern States Fair would not be opened by the middle of November, as previously reported, and therefore the society will be unable to hold a chrysanthemum show at the opening of the exposition. Many members are nevertheless in favor of making exhibits in conjunction with the fair, regardless of when it opens.

J. A. Newsham made a proposal to award a medal to the member who receives the most points on exhibits made during the year. A plan to that effect will be drawn up and brought before the society at its next meeting.

Harry Dressel, rose grower for the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., showed cut blooms of seedling hybrid tea roses grown by him, which included a red, pink and satiny pink. The last named was a fine flower on a stiff stem, two feet long, with fine foliage. Mr. Dressel's efforts in rose growing in New Orleans have been gratifying. Special mention was awarded his exhibit.

Richard Eichling, foreman of U. J. Virgin's nursery, made a large exhibit of seasonable flowering plants, such as Harrisii lilies, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, etc. All plants were of a high grade and much admired.

The society passed a vote of thanks to the exhibitors for helping to make the meetings interesting.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. are doing a rushing local and shipping business. Their stock is of large variety and well grown.

Henry Cook is cutting some fine callas and Swainsona alba. He reports a good store trade.

Rheinhardt Cook is cutting some fine Maman Cochet and Mme. Lambard roses, grown under glass, and some Italian pink hyacinths from the open ground. He is well satisfied with the spring trade.

C. W. Eichling receives big shipments of different kinds of yellow narcissi of fine quality from his Bayou La Combe place. He states that the sale of seasonable plants is gratifying.

P. A. Chopin's store always has an attractive appearance. He reports a good business, with a good number of funeral orders.

Henry Kraak has his place well stocked with all kinds of bedding plants, which are making rapid growth. R. E.

Westerly, R. I.—Geo. L. Stillman has completed a propagating house at his plant on Newton avenue. In connection with it is a building containing a large root cellar, an office, and packing and shipping rooms. Frank Earl James is in charge of the propagating plant.

Oswego, N. Y.—Feeley's Flower Store, in the D., L. & W. building, was burned out March 14 by a fire which started from an overheated chimney. It started at about 2:30 a. m. and got a big headway before it was discovered.

OBITUARY

Ernst W. Mack.

Ernst W. Mack, 61 years old, for nearly twenty-five years in the trade at Cincinnati, O., died March 13 at his home, 828 Enright avenue, after a short illness. He was born in Mannheim, Germany, and came to Cincinnati when 22 years old. He was a member of the German Pioneer Society, the Glenn Grove Mutual Aid, the Price Hill Mutual Aid, St. Martini's German Evangelical Protestant church, Sedamsville, and director of the Price Hill Building and Loan Association.

He leaves a son, George; five daughters, Mrs. Robert Koppenhoefer, Mrs. Edward D. Donovan, of New York City; Mrs. Otto R. Reller and the Misses Sarah and Hilda Mack; three sisters, two living in Germany, and five grandchildren.

Charles Ahrens.

Charles Ahrens, aged 57 years, died in the Homeopathic hospital at Reading, Pa., March 15, from complications. Since coming to this country from Germany several years ago he was employed by Fred N. Baer, a florist of Kutztown, Pa. He resided at the Berks County House. He was single and, as far as is known, leaves no relatives in this country. He was admitted to the Homeopathic hospital March 3.

John L. Horn.

John L. Horn, of New Haven, Conn., who was injured in an accident at Morris Cove March 14, when an express wagon in which he was riding with his son, Frederick, was struck by an automobile, died the following night, March 15, in a local hospital. When he was thrown from the wagon his head struck a telegraph pole so that he fractured his skull. His son was slightly injured. Louis Kautz, who drove the automobile, was arrested, charged with driving a motor car without a license.

Edward Meehan.

Edward Meehan, 78 years old, who had been associated with the firm of Thomas Meehan & Sons, of Philadelphia, ever since the firm started in business in Germantown sixty years ago, died March 18 at his home, 81 East Phil-Elena street, Germantown, following an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. Meehan superintended the laying out of hundreds of the beautiful gardens in Germantown and Chestnut Hill. He came to this country from England with his brother, Thomas Meehan, now dead. He had high repute as a landscape gardener. His widow and three sons survive him.

Mrs. Geo. T. Elliott.

Mrs. Margaret A. Elliott, widow of Geo. T. Elliott and mother of W. H. Elliott, of Boston, Mass., died at New London, Conn., March 15, in her eighty-eighth year. She was born at Kendal, England, in 1827. She lived for many years in Wisconsin, where W. H. Elliott was born, but later she returned to the east and settled in New London. She was at one time a member of the S. A. F. and attended many of the conventions.

Isaac W. Hoffman.

Isaac W. Hoffman, of Elizabethtown, Pa., died on Saturday, March 21. While riding in a street car in Harrisburg he had a stroke of apoplexy, and died before medical aid could be summoned. He had been in the florists' business for a number of years. He was a member of the Lancaster County Florists' Association.

H. K. R.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been rather quiet for the last week. Stock is sufficient to supply the demand. Roses are of fair quality, bringing $6 to $8 for the better grades and $3 and $4 for shorts. Carnations have had a good demand, numerous store openings calling for large quantities. The better grades are bringing $2.50 and $3; splits, $1.50. American Beauties are of poor quality. Jonquils, tulips and bulbous stock are finding a ready sale. Quantities of home-grown single violets are to be had. Valley, lilies and orchids are equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

Albert Pittet is enthusiastic over the outlook for his sweet pea, Rose Queen. He is having numerous inquiries and has already made several sales of the seed.

Bertermann Bros. and A. Wiegand's Sons Co. have had their hands full with palm decorations for the department store openings.

George Wiegand has been laid up with the grip for the last week.

Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., was a caller last week.

Joseph Hill, E. G. Hill and Earl Mann, of Richmond, were in this city last week.

Baur & Steinkamp are busy shipping carnation cuttings. They report heavy sales in this line.

John Michelsen, with the E. C. Ameling Co., Chicago, was a visitor last week. H. L. W.

SCALE ON JAPANESE QUINCE.

Enclosed you will find a branch of a Japanese quince, which is badly encrusted with some insect. I would be pleased to hear the correct name of the insect, and how to destroy it.

R. C. C.

The shoots were completely covered with San Jose scale. The Japanese quince is a shrub for which this pest has a marked partiality. Spray with a soluble oil solution on a dry, sunny day, at the rate of one part of the oil to fifteen parts of water. Be sure to damp every part of the wood and you will kill ninety-five per cent of the scale. It is probable you have other shrubs affected, and it would be good policy to spray any crataegus, lilacs, malus, cornus, willows, and practically all fruit trees and shrubs. These and other varieties are subject to the scale's attack. C. W.

Mt. Zion, Pa.—The greenhouse of Ezra Rozelle was destroyed by fire caused by an overheated furnace March 14. The loss, including the stock of vegetable plants in the house, amounted to about $1,000, partly covered by insurance.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1914: President, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, Patrick Welch, Boston; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.
Thirtieth annual convention, Boston, Mass.,
August 18 to 21, 1914.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE way baskets have come into general use for cut flowers as well as plants has been one of the interesting developments of the trade. It is safe to say ten times as many baskets now are used as was the case five years ago.

FROM the number of inquiries that reach The Review, regarding the treatment for cyclamens that have gone out of bloom, it appears that there must be considerable quantities of plants that failed to find the expected sale.

To show what "the sunny south" sometimes is like, C. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., has sent The Review a photograph of the roofs of his greenhouses taken March 17, just after a fall of nine and one-half inches of snow.

SUCCESS is not a plant that blooms over night; it is of slow growth. One may work tremendously and not achieve it for the reason that supreme effort usually is spasmodic. Plugging counts for more than plunging—especially in the florists' trade.

It is impossible to give something for nothing. A florist, or a man in any other line, who seeks patronage by such a method soon finds himself in a position where he must recoup by taking the value out of the customer by indirection. A man who wakes up to the fact that he has paid too much for one thing while getting another free feels far worse about it than as though the free service had been refused in the first place and a fair price charged for both. When you get something for nothing look around to see where the "soak" comes in on the article you pay for; it may not be apparent at first glance, but look long enough and you'll find it; it's there.

TEXAS FLORISTS' MEETING.

The meeting to be held at Waco, Tex., May 4 and 5, for the organization of the Texas Florists' Association, promises to be the largest and most important gathering of florists in the south. A program is being prepared that will be of interest to the florists of the state and some excellent speakers will address the meeting.

E. J. Kyle, head of the state horticultural department at College Station, will speak on "Coöperation of the State Horticultural Department and the Texas Florists' Association." J. S. Kerr, president of the Texas Nurserymen's Association, will talk on "Coöperation of the Nurserymen's Association and the Texas Florists' Association." Sam H. Dickson, commissioner of agriculture, will tell the florists how his department will coöperate with them. J. H. Arbenz, of Sarita, president of the State Horticultural Society, will have for his subject, "Coöperation of the State Horticultural Society and the Texas Florists' Association."

IT DOES, INDEED.

The following is from the Kallipolis Kronikle, published at Washington, D. C.: "Prophet Wm. F. Gude, F. A. A. M., M. O. V. P. E. R., P. of G. F., and the jolliest of entertainers, has accepted the general chairmanship of the committee for the reception of guests from visiting grottoes on their return from Richmond next June; his activity, coupled with the efforts of the sub-committees, bespeaks pleasure unbounded for the visitors."

MORE QUICK ACTION.

If you have the right stock The Review will sell it for you—quick, like this:

Please cut out my ad; one mail sold me out; seems as though everybody is hungry for stock.—Charles F. Rohr, Naperville, Ill., March 23, 1914.

That ad cleaned me out before I saw it. The Review certainly sells the goods.—J. E. Meinhardt, Webb City, Mo., March 22, 1914.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Spring, due last week, must have missed connections, as the weather, following one day of unseasonable warmth, was far colder than normal. Some said it was responsible for the extremely dull business in the middle of the week, while others pointed to it as the reason for the greatly improved demand at the end of the week. Looking back, however, at other years, it seems characteristic of the spring season that demand is dull on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, but quite active on Fridays, Saturdays and Mondays. If precedent is followed this will be more or less the case from now until summer, excepting, of course, the weeks in which Easter, Mothers' day and Memorial day exert an influence.

Stock continues abundant. The weather has favored the growers who wish to stretch their crops to Easter, but there have been plenty of flowers. There has been some increase in the supply of Beauties and some improvement in the quality. Several growers who have cut little since the Christmas crops are beginning to get their stocks under headway again. Roses in general are of excellent quality. The

We are booking orders for LILIES FANCY STOCK--FOR EASTER SHIPMENT

REALLY GOOD LILIES will not be plentiful this Easter—some that were too early and can not be held till Easter, and more that are late and will be over-forced and soft, but our lilies will be fine—none better—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even, just right as to time. They will run 3 to 5 flowers to the stem and will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100, for shipment without rehandling. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for.

Special long, fancy	$15.00	$125.00
Medium length	12.50	100.00
Short	10.00	80.00

FANCY ROSES

We never have had finer roses than right now, and the supply will continue large until the end of the season. We are not heavily supplied with short roses at this time of year—our specialty is a little better grade of roses than can be had elsewhere in quantity—and long stems and fine flowers go together. We offer a full line:

MILADY	KILLARNEY	RICHMOND
WARD	SUNBURST	BULGARIE

CARNATIONS

For years it has been recognized that we have the highest average quality of any large supply of carnations—almost all of our stock will meet the needs of the most exacting buyer. It not only is good stock when it leaves us, but it is good stock when it reaches the out-of-town retailer—and it pleases HIS customers.

SINGLE—VIOLETS—DOUBLE

We handle the cream of the crops, both Hudson River double and home-grown single. Write for prices on quantities for special spring sales.

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We are headquarters for the fancy winter-blooming Sweet Peas of the Spencer type. Light pink, Blanche Ferry pink, dark pink and lavender. They are wonderful sellers. Now in their prime. Prices reasonable. Try them.

FANCY CATTLEYA ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are home-grown and will give better satisfaction than the lower priced stock that is reconsigned by Eastern commission houses.

FANCY VALLEY

You always can get fine Valley here. We handle the Chicago Market brand exclusively.

brighter weather has improved the color and buyers have little to complain of. How well they are being treated is shown by some of the special sales the downtown stores are advertising, running each other. Of course, Killarney is the predominant variety, but a buyer can get anything he wants unless he waits until too late in the day.

Carnations sell at seasonable prices. The buyers who want only moderate quantities of strictly first-class stock are willing to pay the usual rates even though they see big trays being jobbed off at low rates to those who consider price ahead of quality. Pink Delight and Mrs. C. W. Ward continue much the best sellers, but there are so few red that when two or three good-sized orders happen to hit the market at the same time it is apt to create a flurry.

The growers of early sweet peas planted few white this season. Ordinarily there is little call for this color at this season, but with so few white being picked the market has given the appearance of an active demand. We are said to be past the height of the season for the winter-blooming Spencers, although there are, of course, large quantities still coming to market. Quality usually retrogrades with the supply, and it is quite possible that until after Easter we shall see advancing prices for poorer peas; certainly the winter Spencers have been superb and extremely cheap. Violets continue on the bargain counter; the March weather has favored the growers of singles, which frequently are pretty much run out at this date.

Bulbous stock is not especially overabundant. The buyers never want to pay high prices at this time of year, but anything really good in tulips, jonquills or daffodils is bringing as much as could be expected. Callas are overplentiful, Easter lilies are equal to the demand and rubrums at the moment are difficult if not wholly impos-

LILIES FOR EASTER

READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDER

Randall's Easter crop of Lilies is famous—everybody who ever has tried them knows that there never are any finer and seldom any as good. For years and years Randall's Lilies have been the Standard by which all other Lilies have been judged. Some years one grower and some years another will claim to have Lilies "as good as Randall's," but Randall's Lilies always have been acknowledged as the leader. These are true Giganteums—the best bulbs money would buy, forced by the best grower we know. Naturally, we have the best flowers. Those who have had them before will want them again; those who use them this year for the first time will become regular customers. They will be packed at the greenhouses in wooden boxes of 100 flowers each.

Association Meeting.

H. E. Philpott came a thousand miles, from Winnipeg, March 19, to act as installing officer for the Cook County Florists' Association. He had an audience of some thirty-five. A. C. Kohlbrand, who had been president since the association was organized, gave place to N. P. Miller, which keeps the presidency downtown, Mr. Miller being with Kennicott Bros. Co. The other officers were reelected. They are: Vice-president, A. Henderson, of A. Henderson & Co.; secretary, A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co.; treasurer, John Zech, of Zech & Mann. Mr. Kohlbrand became chairman of the board of trustees, who are instructed to plan a show for the April meeting. Each of the officers made the little speech usual on such occasions.

Fred Fischer, the new foreman of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, was elected to membership.

The Alphano Humus Agency had samples of the article, from Alphano, N. J., from which it takes its name.

A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co. showed cut flower boxes in a number of sizes and a variety of finishes.

H. N. Bruns showed his specialty, lily of the valley, in decorated pots and boxes, also three fine plants of forced lilac with the pots covered with Porto Rican mats.

Frederick Haase showed the Charles E. White wild bird feeder, which C. C. Wheaton, in charge, said is proving a good seller with florists, especially those who handle birds and goldfish.

H. R. Hughes had an attractive display of his special decorated cut flower boxes, three sizes and six colors.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. was represented by a large group of decorative, spring and Easter pot plants, including lilies, palms, pandanus, maples, azaleas, hydrangeas, aspleniums, crotons, ivies, variegated funkias, dracaenas, dieffenbachias, asparagus, etc.; also the Bulldog clip.

The Raedlein Basket Co. showed cut flower and plant baskets in many styles and sizes.

The A. L. Randall Co. had a special room and the largest display, including a big line of ribbons and chiffon, novelty baskets, glass and metal vases, Joseph Ziska had a table of the staples of florists' supplies.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association was represented on the second day by vases of excellent Ward, Midway and Sunburst roses, and a vase of excellent Mrs. C. W. Ward carnations. S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, sent an exhibit of Carnation Philadelphia, which arrived on the second day in good condition. W. L. Palinsky also came in with a group of good azaleas.

Various Notes.

Because a recent pink window sold so many baskets of Killarneys W. J. Smyth last week had two basket windows, one of yellow, using southern jonquils, and the other in pink, using butterfly peas. Arthur Weatherwax flagged many a passer-by by using quantities of Bayersdorfer's little celluloid cockatoos in the windows.

With its large outlet, when a good novelty appears Poehlmann Bros. Co. is able to buy the quantity of stock necessary to get the lowest jobbing price and to sell at the regular rates for smaller lots such quantity as is not wanted for its own planting. August Poehlmann says everyone has wanted Killarney Brilliant; no trouble at all to get orders for it.

In addition to the 90,000 feet of glass used for growing Beauties and roses for the Chicago market, the Batavia Greenhouse Co. has 35,000 feet used for the local retail trade at Batavia. There is glass on the place for a couple of new houses, but it probably will not be used this season.

Killarney Brilliant to the extent of 3,000 plants will find a home at Emil Buettner's Park Ridge establishment.

The Hobbs-Wagner stand at 3112 Indiana avenue is one of the oldest flower stores in the city. George Wagner has been there nearly twenty years and E. Hobbs as long before him. When Mr. Hobbs started it was a new residence

Both W. W. Barnard Co. and Winter-son's Seed Store have stocked Alphano humus and it is expected that considerable business will come at once, with an ever increasing demand as the supply of barnyard fertilizers decreases.

ing on a good market for a big batch of Golden Spur still outside.

Having sold to John Prochazka his carnation range, comprising eight houses, of an approximate area of 30,000 feet of glass, Adam Zender is growing roses exclusively in the remaining thirteen houses on his property. Nine of these houses are 200 feet long, and the other four 400 feet each. Killarney and White Killarney, Richmond and Sunburst are his varieties. Beauties he gave up four or five years ago, and Ward will be abandoned after this season.

Nick Reding says his spring crop of carnations will be of record proportions. He has thirteen houses.

Middletown, N. Y.—F. X. Dienst figures the recent storm put him out of business for almost two weeks, owing to the breakage of wires. Most of his trade is done over the telephone. He has a fine stock for Easter. Mr. Dienst expects to add a rose house this coming summer.

Fishkill, N. Y.—Wood Bros. report a heavy shipping business following the late setback, when they were practically snowed in for several days, affecting most the cut flower trade. They have a steady run on rooted cuttings and grow the largest assortment of roses in the Hudson valley.

DON'T FORGET

We are getting on towards Easter—you will need ribbons.

WHAT KIND WILL THEY BE?

Pine Tree ribbons show qualities that at equal prices cannot be duplicated elsewhere. These are beautiful ribbons and splendid help in making designs and all floral work.

You buy direct from the ribbon mill. Samples of Monarch, 1458 and other ribbons ready for you—just drop us a postal.

The Eastern Market.

The change from spring back to winter, with its snow storms and extreme cold, and from winter to a semblance of spring, has had the effect of making the supply of cut flowers irregular for this season of the year. The demand has slackened a little, making it necessary to resort to special efforts to market the cut flowers on the days when the sun is bright and warm. Values continue fairly good for mid-Lent; the market is able to absorb most of the stock at prices reasonably satisfactory. Southern daffodils have begun arriving in small numbers; as yet their quality is only medium.

The indications point to heavy crops of all varieties of flowers for Easter. It is predicted that the quality will be good and prices reasonable.

Pre-Easter Rambles.

The Easter plants for 1914 will be better and more numerous than in any previous season. The larger growers have confined themselves to a smaller number of species than in former years and it is only on the places of the smaller growers that greater variety can be found. This variety is almost invariably secured at the expense of the quality of some kind. The general run of lilies are a trifle shorter than usual, but, on the other hand, they are remarkably clean and evenly flowered. Many of the spiræas are lightly flowered, but to this there are notable exceptions. The roses, azaleas and hydrangeas have never been finer.

The Spring Show.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which opened March 24, was one of those quiet "among ourselves" affairs that please the true lover of horticulture more than they please the public. There were some splendidly flowered bulbs for the Dreer, Michell and Waterer prizes and some blooming plants of unusual merit. Notable among these was a magnificent purple wistaria in a tub, standing six feet high and covered with its graceful blooms. Lilac, Easter lilies, callas and spiræas were well done. The effect of the bulbs was heightened by the large number of perfect blooms grown in a single pan. Henry A. exhibited photographs of dahlias and gladioli, some seventy-five in all, while Henry F. devoted his space and energy to the display of lawn grass seed.

The Dinner on the Nineteenth.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting at the Poor Richard Club, Thursday evening, March 19, at 6:30, the affair taking the form of a dinner to which a number of wholesalers and others prominent in the business were invited. Last year's officers were reelected. Committees reported and matters pertaining to the welfare of the association were discussed. The affair was much enjoyed by all. Among those present were John Gracey, Eugene Bernheimer, Robert B. Bragg, A. M. Campbell, Charles Henry Fox, Charles H. Grakelow, Charles F.

Kruger, Robert Kift, Rupert Kienle, Henry F. Michell, Charles E. Meehan, Leo Niessen, Arthur A. Niessen, Joseph G. Neidinger, J. Liddon Pennock, Samuel S. Pennock, Edward Reid, Herman Reiseit, Frank M. Ross, John A. Rupert, Ernest Wannemacher and William Wyatt.

Norwood.

Cornelius van der Breggan was at the door of the great rose-filled shed to escort his visitor to Robert Craig, who was working among the dracænas. Such dracænas! Not strictly speaking an Easter plant, but such glorious stock as to deserve a space at the top. Aurora, De Smetiana, Kellieriana and a host of others, grown as I have never seen them grown in this city before. Passing, for the time, through the crotons, pandanus, that wonderful Ficus utilis, the tall arecas and the short Teddy Juniors, we come to the giganteum lilies, clean, well budded and well timed, a fine lot of French hydrangeas and a superb collection of roses. Some are trained as umbrellas, some as globes, and some as baskets. There is the red Dorothy Perkins, much favored here; Tausendschon, Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins. All are well grown.

Twenty Years at It.

Edward Reid had been in the wholesale cut flower commission business twenty years March 4. He commenced business within half a square of his present location, at 40 South Sixteenth street, in the basement. Later he moved to better quarters at 1526 Ransstead street and two years ago to his present fine quarters at 1619-21 Ransstead street. Some of Mr. Reid's growers have been shipping to him since the day he commenced business and some of his customers have been entrusting their orders to him since Easter, 1894. Mr. Reid puts his whole heart into his business now, as he did then. Stuart H. Miller has been with Mr. Reid through nearly three-quarters of his business career.

Ontario Street.

"People say my lilies and my spiræas are the best they have seen; I have a timing machine." So modestly and facetiously Godfrey Aschmann delivered himself on a sunshiny afternoon, the first day of spring. The azaleas are in six of the best varieties and form one of the main crops of the place; they are good. Cinerarias were fine, the colors just beginning to show brightly. Hydrangeas, part French and part Otaksa, were in fine time to harden and color nicely. Of hyacinths, King of the Blues, Grand Maitre, La Grandesse and Gertrude give purple blue, white and pink, while in tulips Murillo, Tournesol, Couronne d'Or and Rex rubrorum all are doubles. In daffodils, Double Von Sion is used. Mr. Aschmann's stock is evenly good and covers all the popular sizes. His timing machine clearly works well, as shown by the few plants that are early or late. His parting injunction to his visitor was to put the juice into it. Have I done so?

Second and Bristol.

Aschmann Bros. claim that the hustlers still hustle. This claim is borne out by the condition of the place. It is filled with good stock, carefully grown. Their spiræas are exceptionally fine this year, as, too, are their lilies. They have some good hydrangeas and daisies. In roses they have forced Beauties and Richmond successfully; both varieties are well filled with buds, not too far advanced. The azaleas are the pride of the place. Four-fifths of them are Madame Vander Cruyssen, the balance in four good sorts. They find this is the way people want them and both brothers are good judges of the market.

Forty-ninth and Market Streets.

There is keen rivalry between the two places of the Robert Craig Co., as to which can produce the best Easter plants. Despite the handicap of old houses, the parent place has no cause to fear comparison. The stock is excellent. The quantity is large and there are no weak points. The strong points are the Spiraea Gladstone in 11-inch tubs with thirty-five heads of bloom. Among the hydrangeas, Mouillere leads the French, while Otaksa is heavily flowered. The roses are well done, from the little Ellen Poulsen, described as peach-blossom shade, through the gamut of the baby class, Orleans, Phyllis and the rest, to that grand old stand-by of the hybrid class, Magna Charta. There are valley, daisies and many more, not forgetting that ferns have come to be important Easter plants.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Philo Masian Society, March 17, 250 women were present. Exhibits were made by the Andorra Nurseries, Conard & Jones Co., Henry A. Dreer and Thomas Meehan & Sons Co. Addresses were made by J. Otto Thilow, Robert Pyle and Edward J. Mathews.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The market has been well stocked with all varieties of cut flowers the last few weeks, owing to the warm temperatures that have prevailed. The demand is limited to a great extent by the Lenten season, although there has been a moderate demand for table decorations and other decorations for social functions of an informal nature. The celebration of St. Patrick's day occasioned a big demand, including decorations for the banquets. Green carnations met with a large demand and were plentiful enough to fill all orders. Funeral work has constituted a big part of the business at this season, several large funerals lately keeping many of the florists' forces hustling to get the work out.

Carnations are, for the most part, of good quality and exceedingly plentiful. In fact, all stock is in good supply, with the possible exception of roses, which, owing to the rather dark weather, are quite scarce. Antirrhinums are fine now. Spencer sweet peas, tulips, jonquils, freesias, pansies, forget-me-nots and mignonette are all crowding the market. Plumous and other green goods are scarce.

Various Notes.

A new rose, a sport of Richmond, has been produced by A. Shive, grower for the Flick Floral Co., and is known as Pink Richmond. It is an exceedingly soft shade of deep pink and quite like Richmond in size and contour. The Flick Floral Co. is busy making preparations for Easter. They have some handsome 5-foot lilacs, rhododendrons and ramblers in variety. They are booking Easter orders and have several decorations for openings after Easter.

The Doswell Floral Co. is cutting some fine carnations, Spencer sweet peas and bulbous stock. They have been kept busy with funeral work lately.

The Bradley Flower Shop is showing some pretty Japanese maples and hydrangeas. They are busy making preparations for the Easter trade.

H. Zur Muhlin, of the Auger Flower Shop, has some nice bulbous stock and will have a fine showing for Easter.

A good garden article appears in the spring number of the Wildwood Magazine, entitled "Town Gardens," by Ruth R. Flick. The article is attractively illustrated by views of Waldron, the beautiful suburban Flick home.

Among recent visitors to this city was Mr. Harrie, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Nothing is so interesting this week to the New York florists, wholesale and retail, as the flower show. There is not much change to record in values, nor any change in conditions. If anything, the market displays a hardening tendency, the natural result of the rapidly approaching Easter. Great hopes are entertained of an old-time success. Surely the trade in all its branches deserves it. Saturday developed an old-fashioned clean-up, and while values did not advance, a better demand developed, and the first day of spring, let us hope, marks the advent of better times for all.

Beauties and all roses hold their present quotations encouragingly, the novelties especially developing strength and never being in oversupply. Hadley, of the reds, easily is the leader. Carnations now are perfect and abundant. Prices have not advanced. There are plenty of orchids to go around and still enough for belated buyers at lower prices than they deserve. Mosses commands the higher values.

No shortage appears in the gardenia supply, nor in lilies or valley, the ruling prices of several weeks past still prevailing. There is no lack of supply in callas, tulips, and bulbous stock of every kind. Violets have been a drug; Friday there was an accumulation of half a million, and prices were unmentionable. The street merchants had their innings. The usual assortment of so-called spring flowers is large and the demand below normal. Improvement in all departments is now anticipated.

Plantmen Restrict Credits.

The secretary of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers announces that the association has adopted a new credit system, under the terms of which the members cannot extend credit for a period beyond the fifteenth day of the second month following the date of sale. "All accounts must be paid by that date, and all accounts remaining unpaid by that date must be turned over to the association for collection, and the firm owing such account will thereafter be dealt with by members of the association on a cash basis only." The new system will go into effect April 1, 1914.

Various Notes.

A cold wave, much belated, arrived Saturday, March 21, for the spring opening, doing much damage to plant shipments. Then snow began falling at 3 a. m. Sunday, and there were two inches on the level by morning. Winter is dying hard this season. All business was depressed because of the sudden drop in temperature.

FORT DODGE, IA.

C. De Meester, of the Park Floral Co., has received notice from a firm of lawyers to cease fumigation and spraying in his greenhouses, as he has been killing bees from a neighbor's hives. Only a few days before the receipt of the notice he had asked the owner of the bees to try to keep them away from his houses, because they were coming in through the ventilators and ruining his carnations, so that he had not been able to ship any stock for a week. The owner's reply was that Mr. De Meester must screen his ventilators. Mr. De Meester believes the responsibility lies with the owner of the bees and will probably file a counter claim for damages to his stock.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Publishing Co.,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1912, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders .....	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.. ..	113.20
Net value of orders.....	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

The Southwestern Market.

Market conditions have not changed much in the last week. Prices are lower in some cases, owing to the increased quantity of stock. The wholesalers have cleaned up remarkably well, considering that we are in the midst of the Lenten season. The bulk of the stock received at the five wholesale markets last week consisted of sweet peas and violets. These came in, mostly from the Kirkwood growers, in many thousands, with quality of the best. The lower grades in these sold cheaply, while fancy grades held their prices. Roses are more abundant and will be plentiful from now on. There is some fancy stock coming in, but the bulk of it is in the second grade. Beauties are not overplentiful. The market has been overloaded with carnations, extra fancy grades going down to $3 per hundred, and in all other grades the price is much lower when taken in thousand lots. Enchantress is supreme at present. There is a lot of good bulbous stock coming in, but the sale is slow. Lilies, valley, tulips and Dutch hyacinths are among the best sellers.

In greens, the market has become easy again. A good supply of asparagus, ferns and smilax was noted last week.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting March 17, at the Washington hotel. President H. Young presided over the meeting, which was fairly well attended. During the evening considerable important business was transacted. It was decided to invite the local wholesalers to make exhibits at the next meeting. After adjournment, a nice lunch was spread and the members spent a pleasant evening.

Mrs. M. M. Ayres showed a splendid lot of snapdragons and other fancy stock last week. She says blooming plants have been selling well of late.

Andrew Hoffman, of George Waldbart's, says they have had a busy week in funeral work. The boss was down a few days last week, but again is confined to his room.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle will meet next week, April 1, at the home of Mrs. J. J. Beneke, 3648 Humphrey street.

Grimm & Gorly, Alex Siegel and the Riessen Floral Co., downtown retailers, say they had splendid business for St. Patrick's day and that green carnations sold better than ever. A big run on violets and sweet peas was on all week.

The Vandevoort and Grand Leader florists' departments sold thousands of violets and sweet peas last week at cheap prices.

Frank Windler, chairman of the Florists' Club trustees, says he will have an important feature up for discussion at the next meeting of the club. Arrangements for the club's anniversary banquet are almost complete.

George Angermueller says that shipping trade in supplies to the southwestern Missouri trade has been good of late.

A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, Mo., is consigning quantities of fancy carnations to this market. He will be right in line with a fine lot of lilies for Easter.

W. J. Pilcher's Mazzura violets are now at their best. While other violets are selling cheap, these bring top prices at any time. Mr. Pilcher will

The Market.

Business for the Lenten season is unusually good. The weather has been fair, and that always helps business. We had fine spring weather for a time, but the latter part of last week we had cold, snowy weather, which put a damper on business. Trade for St. Patrick's day was excellent, and all kinds of novelties, also green carnations, sold well. Roses are scarce and the daily supply is used up each day, so that there are none left from one day to the next. Killarney roses in pink, white and red are somewhat small and seem to lack strength of flower. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Milady are the best of the roses at present. There are good Shawyer, Sunburst and Richmond. Hillingdon is poor.

Carnations are still in good condition. Pansies, myosotis and schizanthus are among the specialties. Harrisii and Formosa lilies are arriving in great quantities. Sweet peas and valley are improving right along. Violets are growing smaller as spring comes on, and sales of these are in order now every Saturday. Bulbous stock is a drag on the market.

Various Notes.

The decorations for the spring opening of J. N. Adams' store were unusually fine this spring. Arches of wild smilax and pink roses from pillar to pillar adorned the entire store, making a fine show. Azaleas, genistas and

QUALITY FLOWERS

JOHN A. KELLER

128 E. 6th Street

Member F. T. D.

Boston ferns were used in great quantities. The decorations of Anderson, Meldrum & Anderson, H. A. Meldrum and Hens & Kelly were all good.

Recent visitors are: J. Berg, of Lion & Co.; Robert Hall, of Wertheimer Bros.; J. Ramsfelder, representing the Manhattan Ribbon Co., and William Lake, all of New York city.

Thomas Tobin, of W. J. Palmer & Son's branch store, is an expert swimmer. He has entered the swimming contest for the championship of western New York, which will take place in the near future.

Leon W. Neubeck and Cecile Baker were united in marriage March 15. The bride and groom did not go on a wedding tour, but intend doing so later on. The trade extends congratulations.

The firm of Slattery & Beyer has dissolved. Mrs. Beyer is now running the store, with A. Kowalski as manager. Mr. Kowalski has just had an operation for appendicitis, but is now doing nicely.

Lenten corsages and week-end boxes of cut flowers are finding a big sale with W. J. Palmer & Son these days.

George Asmus and August Poehlmann, of Chicago, were in town calling on the trade last week. They were en route for New York for the flower show.

A number of the Buffalo florists were in attendance at the New York flower show March 25.

Fred Brown, who is with the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., spent a few hours with old friends March 17. He was on his way to the New York show.

S. A. Anderson is building an addition in the rear of his store, which will increase his floor space considerably.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was quite good.
On the whole, conditions have been considerably better than during the first week of Lent, and the first week was not bad by any means.

Carnations are plentiful, but not so abundant as they were several weeks ago. The better grade of carnations still hold a good price and will for some time, as they are scarce. There are plenty of splits and of the second grades. White carnations are scarce.

American Beauties were scarce until last week, when the market became loaded. Good roses are still scarce and they bring a good price, while the smaller grades demand a fair price.

Violets are plentiful, and the prices are so low that it hardly pays to pick them and bring them to the market.
Bulbous stock is not quite so plentiful, but still there is enough to meet the demand in all varieties. Sweet peas are abundant, selling at a low price, and a fine lot of them comes to the market every day. On the whole, there were plenty of cut flowers at all times during the last week.

Club Meeting.

A meeting of the Florists' Club was held March 20, at the establishment of the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant
Co. Twenty-one members were present, and two more were admitted and four applications received. The prospects for the club are good, and it is continually growing. The next meeting will be held Friday evening, April 3, at W. J. Barnes' greenhouses, at Thirty-eighth and Euclid avenue. Everyone who is connected with the trade is welcome.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell reports business quite good in all lines and never before so good during Lent.

The trade regrets to hear of the accident that happened to Mr. Drummond. He was tightening a bolt on the gasoline engine, when his hand slipped and caught in a cog-wheel and was smashed and torn on the outer side. It will be some time before he can use his hand again.

T. J. Noll & Co. report business increasing continually. Mr. Noll says that his list of consignors is increasing continually and he is able to fill more of his orders, but that he can handle more stock, as he has not yet enough stock to supply the demand.

Costello & Moore have bought out the Twelfth and Main street florists, Messrs. Golmes and Grokaris. The new firm expects to do a big business at this place.

W. J. Barnes had a big decoration last week at the Emory, Bird & Thayer dry goods store, on the first three floors, for the Easter opening.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports a big week in funeral work, both in and out of town. Stock is still rather scarce at their greenhouses at Pleasant Hill, Mo.

H. Kusik & Co. report business good and that Easter supplies and wire work are going fast. They had a fine

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A fair amount of business has been transacted during the last week, including the St. Patrick's day trade, which was in advance of that of last year. Large quantities of potted shamrocks were sold and the call for white carnations for coloring was heavy. Some white sweet peas and white roses were also colored, but carnations seem to color best and are as satisfactory as can be wished for. The market is well supplied with about all kinds of stock, and most of it is arriving in fairly good condition. Roses are fine, except some of the yellows, which after the second day take on a faded, washed-out appearance. Beauties are fine in color and fancy stock brings fancy prices.
Lilies are plentiful and meet with a fair demand. Sweet peas are arriving heavily, but in some cases they are almost too short to be used except in funeral work. Violets are selling well, retailing in most stores at $1 per hundred. Single California violets are beautiful, but there is not much call for them here. Carnations are in great plenty and the demand is big. Jonquils, daffodils, Romans, Paper Whites and tulips are all plentiful. Pansies and forget-me-nots are used extensively for corsage work. Smilax is still scarce and there is little hope of any good shipments for some time to come. Other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

H. E. Wilson had a great number of designs for the funeral of one of Rochester's foremost suffragists, Mrs. Clark. The pieces included a large wreath of galax, with a cluster of daffodils arranged on the side and tied with yellow ribbon, with the word "Victory" suitably inscribed in gilt letters.

An army of salesmen and visitors invaded the florists' stores here last week, including Wm. B. Lake, of the Wm. B. Lake Co., New York city; the representative of the Climax Mfg. Co., Castorland, N. Y.; Leopold L. Joh, Syracuse, N. Y.; Julius Berg, of Lion & Co., New York city, and Mr. Ramsfelder, of the Manhattan Ribbon Co., New York city.

Harry E. Bates has been at Ashtabula, O., on a business trip. It is pleasing to hear that his wife is steadily improving and is now able to walk in her room.

The store force of Henry P. Neun have put in a busy week. The business included two or three good wedding orders and lots of funeral work.

The local office of the Lord & Burnham Co. is doing good, brisk business this month and the contracts include an iron frame house, 40x21, for the Baker Floral Co., Syracuse, N. Y. Prospects look good for the entire season.

Arthur Elder is away on a business trip to the southern part of New York state.

drangeas in full bloom. Their trade keeps up well. Last week they were rushed with funeral work.

Most florists carried a special on violets on Saturday of last week at 25 cents per bunch of fifty. A large quantity was shipped into town and had to be cleared at low figures. H. J. H.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. O. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

As the mail orders fall off the counter trade will pick up.

THERE still is four feet of snow in Vermont and New Hampshire.

THE South Carolina legislature adjourned without taking action on the seed bill which was vigorously opposed by the seed trade.

A NEW seed store has been opened in Portland, Me., by E. L. Thompson, at 21 Free street. Field, garden and flower seeds are to be carried.

WITH certain exceptions, there are seeds enough this season. What will the practice of overcontracting lead to in case of a full crop in 1914?

IT is reported that the N. J. Olsen Seed Co., of Fargo, N. D., will erect a four or five-story building on Front street at a cost of about $60,000.

WHERE were the committees of the American Seed Trade Association when that parcel post amendment was being slipped into the postoffice appropriation bill?

THE New York seedsmen have been devoting a great deal of time this week to the spring flower show in the Grand Central Palace. Several houses made elaborate displays for advertising purposes.

THE peak of the mail-order seed season no doubt has been passed in the last week. While orders will now be on the down grade, business must continue good for some time, as the spring is late in many important seed buying sections.

THE new 4-story fireproof building erected by Clem H. Kimmel, Dayton, Ohio, at Third and St. Clair streets, is ready for occupation. Mr. Kimmel, who has been in the seed business for the last twenty-three years, will, with his son, open a store in this building.

ABOUT FACE, DOUBLE QUICK.

March 24, the Senate passed the Pomerene bill, referred to in another column in this department. If it becomes a law it will restore the rate of 1 cent for each two ounces up to eight ounces on all parcel post shipments of seeds and plants. E. H. P.

"OUCH" IS RIGHT.

The seed trade echoes the "Ouch" in last week's issue of The Review, wherein the new postage rates on seeds and plants were stated—the deal didn't work out at all the way the trade had expected it to and the increases in postage on small parcels will go far toward overcoming the decrease on larger parcels to near-by zones. Communications that have reached The Review indicate that the trade is making a vigorous protest.

Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., wrote March 19, as follows:

"We had today a practical illustration of the 'benefit' to the seed trade from the new parcel post law which went into effect March 16. We are sending out this week about 2,500 to 3,000 small packages containing a collection of plants. These packages weigh about six ounces and would ordinarily require 3 cents each for the postage. Under the new parcel post law just passed, we are obliged to pay for each package the same as though it weighed a pound, and the average cost of sending these packages is a trifle over 8 cents each. This makes an imposition of nearly three times the present postage rate, or $200 for sending out 2,500 packages which before the passage of the new parcel post bill would have gone through the mails for $75, or an increase of $125.

"While it is true that the parcel post bill gives us a lower rate on large packages going to nearby points, it doubles the postage on small packages weighing less than four ounces and greatly increases the rate on large packages to California or other distant sections. I am in correspondence with our senator and representative to try to have this discrimination against the seed trade corrected."

The trade had expected to get the same rate on seeds and plants as on catalogues; namely, 1 cent for each two ounces up to eight ounces without regard to distance, and the pound zone rates on heavier parcels. The postoffice department had recommended this and has the authority, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to put such rates into force. Without doubt there will be a strong demand that it be done. No doubt the department would acquiesce, for there has appeared to be of late no disposition there to increase any rates, but any such move is likely to meet the opposition of other interests using the mails. A good many people are unable to see why seeds should be favored with a lower postage rate than other merchandise. Now that the seed trade has lost that advantage there will be a great many factors to reckon with when it comes to getting it back.

PROTESTS REACH HOME.

The seed trade has set up a roar that has reached the ears of Congress, Senator Pomerene, who wrote the amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill that doubled the rates on 4-ounce parcels of seeds and plants, having, March 20, introduced a bill to undo that part of his work. It provides as follows:

"That seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants shall hereafter be embraced in and carried as fourth-class matter and for the same rates of postage: Provided, That all packages thereof containing eight ounces or less shall be charged for at the rate of 1 cent for two ounces or fraction thereof: Provided further, That the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, by order, fix the time within which all parcels of the fourth class shall be delivered."

In explaining the bill the senator

Johnson Seed Company

217 Market St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

submitted an amendment providing that seeds, cuttings, etc., should be carried as fourth-class mail matter at parcel post rates. The intention of the amendment was to give the farmers and others who might be interested the better rates provided for in the parcel post system. It seems, however, that small packages of eight ounces or less can be carried as second-class matter at a less rate than the parcel post rate, and this proposed amendment to the law is intended for the purpose of continuing at second-class rates those packages which weigh eight ounces or less. I hope the bill will be taken up and considered at an early date by the committee on postoffices and post roads."

Just how little the men know about the vital subjects they legislate on is well shown by the above statement. Seeds never were second-class matter; the only matter embraced in the second class is newspapers and periodicals. All the trade cares, however, is that seeds and plants get the lower rate, regardless of what the honorable legislator calls it.

GLADIOLUS GROWER'S LOSS.

The Stevens Gladioli Co., Saginaw, Mich., has met with what is thought to be a total loss in the destruction of three warehouses and their contents, gladiolus bulbs and planting stock. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an overheated stove and what stock the fire spared was ruined by frost and water. It included quantities of seedlings difficult to value, but F. H. Stevens, Jr., president of the company, puts the loss at $13,500 on stock and $1,500 on buildings. The insurance was $4,200. The business will be continued.

SEVEN DEAD AT ST. LOUIS.

The loss of life when the building of the St. Louis Seed Co. was crushed under the falling walls of the adjoining structure, as reported in last week's issue of The Review, was found to total seven, the fatalities being among contractors' laborers at work in the basement at the time of the catastrophe. What had been left of the stock of seeds and implements, following the fire, was pretty much destroyed.

The company has secured two large stores at 406 and 408 North Broadway and is hard at work; it will take more to stop them than two catastrophes only a week apart.

It is reported that the fire loss of the St. Louis Seed Co., March 9, was $85,000, approximately $50,000 on stock and fixtures and $35,000 on building. The company carried $63,000 insurance.

SEEDSMEN GREET CANNERS.

There was a goodly representation of seedsmen at the meeting of the Western Canners' Association at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, March 19. One of the canners' seed specialists reports it was "more of a social gathering than anything else" and another adds that it was "the last canners' meeting until next November, for which let us be thankful; there are too many of them these days." The seedsmen whose presence was noted were: Arnold Ringier and W. W. Barnard, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; John C. Leonard, of Leonard

Oriental Orchids

Without perusing all the Blue Books of Horticulture, and without consulting the opinion of critics, we are going to nickname Lilium Magnificum by calling them Oriental Orchids.

They are improved Rubrum, cultivated extensively on the hilltops in Japan, and found wild on islands south of the mainland. The bulbs are used largely by the Chinese as food, but they will be used much more hereafter as a good substitute for the rose for decorative purposes.

Oriental Orchids are of a bright scarlet color, spotted slightly, with recurved petals and dark brown pollen. They have a vigorous growth and flower profusely. You can force them in a greenhouse or plant them outside in any climate. They keep well in cold storage and make excellent plants, especially for winter flowering. Bulbs planted in June and July will flower for Thanksgiving and Christmas and during the winter months.

The flowers are usually cut short and bunched. They are good for funeral work, bouquets, tables, mantels, and other decorative work. They are especially useful for large room decorations, owing to the absence of strong odor. It is the coming flower for many purposes. It is profitable, useful and much appreciated. In a few short years all florists will need them—modern stores have them now, at all times of the year. Horseshoe Brand bulbs are sold as follows, for 1915 delivery—all absolutely of first-class flowering capacity:

ORIENTAL ORCHIDS

Size 7 x 9 inches .... $16.00 per case of 220 bulbs	Size 10 x 11 inches.....$16.00 per case of 120 bulbs

KEEPING THEM IN LINE.

Everybody recognizes that the manufacturers of the standard insecticides mean to deal with absolute fairness with the people whose patronage they seek. There is no question that when the goods fail to come up to the claims made for them nobody feels so badly about it as does the man at the head of the concern that has its name on the label. But it seems an extremely difficult thing for the insecticide makers to deliver a uniform article. That so many reputable concerns eventually get caught shows what the chances of error would lead to if there were no insecticide law.

For instance, in a government press sheet released March 19 the Department of Agriculture records that the Kentucky Tobacco Product Co., Louisville, Ky., was charged with shipping a quantity of Nico-Fume Liquid to Baltimore, Md., "examination of which showed that the cans contained considerably less than the proportion of nicotine and considerably more than the proportion of inert ingredients stated on the label. It was charged that the product was adulterated because it fell below the professed standard. Misbranding was alleged in that it was labeled so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, and in that the presence of inert and active ingredients was not plainly and correctly disclosed on the label." A fine of $10 and costs was imposed under the insecticide law.

Winterson's "Worth While" Quality Dahlias

The cream of the lists in each class of Dahlias. No florist can use ALL the innumerable varieties that have been named. Here is a selection of those sorts that have proved their special merit. Those marked with an asterisk (*) are especially recommended.

PLEASE NOTE: All of the Dahlias listed below are furnished in large, undivided clumps, many of which will furnish several plants. Our prices should not be confounded with offers based on divided roots.

Decorative Dahlias

DELICE (True)

Its beautiful, soft yet lively color, a glowing rose pink, together with its perfect shape, stout stiff stems, which hold the flower well above the foliage, and the fact that when cut it retains its freshness for a long time makes this one of the most valuable for cutting or decorative sorts in the garden. Each, 20c; per doz., $1.75; per 100, $12.00.

KAISERIN AUGUSTA VICTORIA

The grandest white decorative Dahlia yet introduced. It is a very early and profuse bloomer, producing its gigantic flowers on long stiff stems well above the foliage. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

*SOUVENIR DE GUSTAVE DOAZON

Under ordinary cultivation this variety will produce flowers 6 inches across and can be grown to measure full 9 inches—free blooming—pure red. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.25; per 100, $8.00.

*JACK ROSE

In color a brilliant crimson-red, rich and glowing, and which has suggested its name Jack Rose on account of the close approach in color to the popular Gen. Jacqueminot Rose. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.25; per 100, $8.00.

CLIFFORD W. BRUTON

A beautiful bright yellow and free bloomer. Each, 10c; per doz., $1.00; per 100, $8.00.

HENRY PATRICK

A beautiful white variety and hard to improve upon for its color. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.25; per 100, $8.00.

VIRGINIA MAULE

Grand shell pink which goes to make up the superior collection of colors and shades in the decorative class. Each, 17c; per doz., $1.75; per 100, $12.00.

Show or Fancy Dahlias

A. D. Livoni. A splendid clear pink, beautifully quilled, of perfect form and very free flowering.

John Walker. An elegant pure white.

Queen Victoria. A popular light yellow.

Lemon Beauty. A beautiful soft shade of lemon-yellow. The flowers are borne on long, straight stems, making it invaluable for cutting.

Red Hussar. Intense scarlet crimson. The plant is an early, free, and strong, vigorous grower.

Price, each of the above, each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

Cactus Dahlias

*COUNTESS OF LONSDALE

Rich salmon tipped apricot. Splendid under electric light. If you plant but one dahlia, let this be "the one." Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

MASTER CARL

One of the largest of Cactus Dahlias. Color a bright amber of perfect form with petals of graceful curve. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $11.00.

COUNTRY GIRL

Base of petals golden-yellow suffused with salmon-rose, which is deepest at the points. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

PIUS X

A beautiful large white with slight sulphur tint. Very double with nicely quilled petals. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

COCATOO

Lemon-yellow shaded with rose, with pure white center petals; sometimes the flowers coming all yellow and at other times pure white. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

The Market.

Winter has arrived at last and is doing his duty. Last week was the coldest and the snowiest that we have had this year. In fact, we have not had as heavy a fall of snow for five years as fell last week. The damage done does not amount to much, though daffodils were in full bloom. The day before the snow came outdoor-grown daffodils were selling on the streets at 5 cents per dozen.

Business has been picking up the last few weeks, though no one finds that he has more than he knows how to handle, by any means. The outlook is good for the spring trade, however. The growers seem to have things in good shape for Easter. The peddlers' wagons appeared some days ago selling pot plants, but they have disappeared since the cold snap. Bulbous stock is better than it was earlier, though it is by no means up to the standard of last season.

The spring sales of hardy plants and shrubs have been good thus far. Seeds in packets are handled by most of our florists, and they have been selling pretty well of late. There is little change in the cut flower supply, though roses are rather more plentiful. The one real change is the largely increased

"Peony" Flowered Dahlias

A new departure in Dahlias and which have found great favor. They are very free blooming and borne on long strong stems, making them excellent for cut flowers as well as for garden decoration.

*KING LEOPOLD

Semi-double primrose shading. Extra fine for bouquets. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

GERMANIA

Brilliant strawberry-red. A very fluffy, artistic flower standing well above the foliage. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

QUEEN EMMA

A magnificent sort that appears almost artificial. It is of a charming shade of mallow or artificial pink, the inner petals banded with gold. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

QUEEN WILHELMINA

Immense fluffy flower of pure white with yellow center. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

STANDARD BEARER

Bright iridescent scarlet. The plant is of a rather dwarf growth, being fairly covered with blooms at all times. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

Single Flowered Dahlias

Single Dahlias are now grown extensively for cut flowers because of their handsome colors and the fact that they bloom continuously throughout the season. These grand Dahlias should be in every collection.

PINK CENTURY

Delicate soft pink. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

ALBA SUPERBA

Fine large white with a dash of Canary yellow at base of petals. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

ST. GEORGE

A pretty primrose yellow. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

SNOW FLAKE (Single Century)

The most free blooming Dahlia ever introduced without a doubt, and for cut flowers cannot be surpassed. Each, 25c; per doz., $2.75.

*GORGEOUS

A brilliant scarlet; 3 or more inches in diameter; long stems. A good keeper. Much admired. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

*JACK

Flowers vary from a reddish salmon to a fiery scarlet, on long stems. Very free. Don't miss it. Each, 15c; per doz., $1.50; per 100, $10.00.

number of sweet peas and the great improvement in quality. Carnations continue the one flower that is in large supply.

Various Notes.

The Hillcrest School Farm was planting bulbs till the snow stopped operations.

There is a new florist in the city, located not far from Haury & Sons' plant. He has his first houses ready and is filling them with stock.

Although Mr. Latel has built only one small house as yet, he certainly has a good location, just across the road from the National cemetery. He says that he does not purpose growing cut flowers to any extent, for the present at least. He will grow a few pot plants this season, however.

Frank Cornell has some good pot plants on the market at present. He has a wagon on the street and a stand in the street car transfer station. He says that he is preparing for the heaviest business that he has ever done. His place is in good condition.

J. F. Corbitt cleaned out all his surplus plants last week by The Review classified ad route. He says that it was a real surprise to him how quickly everything went.

The Joy Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the Jonas-Kaufman wedding last week. The ceremony was performed in the Hermitage hotel parlors, and the decorations were elaborate. Sweet peas were the central feature.

Haury & Sons had a fire in their engine room last week. It occurred early in the morning, but fortunately it was detected and extinguished before serious damage was done. The loss was reported in the daily press as $1,000, but I am informed that it does not reach this amount.

McIntyre Bros. are cutting some unusually good orchids. Last week I saw some of the best cattleyas that I remember ever having seen.

Geny Bros. are cutting a pretty even supply of everything at present. I saw an unusual shade of deep dark-red snapdragons at their place, which should prove good sellers.

Joe Browne, proprietor of Lischey's Gardens, has a fine line of stock ready for his spring trade. From the activity of his wagons, he is doing a good business.

McKay, Reese & Co. have been doing a heavy business of late. The last few days showed a great slump, but the rest was needed. They are not handling a full line of flower seeds this season. They report that they have never before found it so hard to secure a supply of cow peas as this season. The price seems to be on the rise.

Lee Geny, of Geny Bros., has been seriously ill for several days. A council of several of the leading doctors of the city March 23 pronounced the malady rheumatism of the bowels.

F. B.

Corpus Christi, Tex.—D. E. Curtis, formerly of Webster City, Ia., has ordered the material for the three greenhouses he will build here. They will cover a total area of 10,000 square feet and will be devoted to roses, carnations and potted plants. The concern will be known as the Corpus Christi Greenhouses, although for advertising purposes Mr. Curtis will christen it Casa de Flora, Spanish for house of flowers.

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YELLOW CACTUS DAHLIA GOLDEN GATE

No grower or florist can afford to ignore the Golden Gate Dahlia and be up-to-date. The public today craves for dahlias for either garden or floral use, and they simply go wild when they see the Golden Gate Dahlia in bloom. Examine an old catalogue of any of the large seed houses of say ten or more years ago, note the few varieties of dahlias listed, not much doing in dahlias at that time, but by examining any of today's seed house catalogues you will find several pages devoted to dahlias. Some houses issue special dahlia catalogues, which all goes to show the great demand for this popular flower. Look up any trade paper of fall 1913 and see the market quotations. Compare chrysanthemum prices of 1913 with prices of 1912, note the low prices for 1913. Mr. Totty, of chrysanthemum fame, in his speech at the annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in Chicago, November 5, 1913, stated that the public's demand for dahlias caused the slump on mums; result, mum growers began to sit up and take notice of dahlias. Watch them and growers of other kindred stock add dahlias to their stock for the coming season. Why not follow suit, start right, plant Golden Gate Dahlia, the Queen of them all?

After having grown dahlias twenty years for cut flowers and for the last five years have grown hundreds of novelties, we have yet to see a dahlia

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS.

Mr. Wm. A. Finger, Jr.,
Hicksville, L. I.
Dear Sir: From all appearances up to the present time you have in Dahlia Golden Gate one of the best varieties that has come under my attention. The character and habit is ideal, and the color is one of the richest I have seen. Without a doubt you have one of the best seedlings that has been raised in this or any other country, and I believe that there will be a great future for it.
Yours very truly,
I. S. HENDRICKSON.

that has the good qualities of the Golden Gate. Most of the visitors to our grounds last year were of the millionaire class, who as a rule grow all the dahlia novelties. One and all declared the Golden Gate the most wonderful of them all.

We wish to call your attention to the testimonial of Mr. I. S. Hendrickson, ex-president of the Gladiolus Society, whose worldwide reputation and experience makes his judgment very convincing. Mr. Hendrickson has been observing this dahlia for years, and was one of the first to book an order with us.

Now is the time to start bulbs of the Golden Gate dahlia for cuttings to work up stock for the coming season. Bulbs started now are a big advantage over plants bought in spring. Don't fail to take advantage of this opportunity to procure tubers of this grand dahlia at half other dissemination charge for plants delivered in May. A little money invested now will bring you big returns in the fall. You can make your own price to your customers for the bulbs or blooms of this grand dahlia; and by placing your order at once, you can have them in quantity in season.

Price to the trade for field-grown tubers, $1.00 each, postpaid; $10.00 per dozen, $75.00 per 100. 25 at 100 rate. Packed frost-proof. No tubers sent out that do not show sprouts.

Vegetable Forcing

LETTUCE TOUGH AND UNSAVORY.

I am sending you a lettuce plant under separate cover. I have 12,000 feet of glass. My lettuces are hard and harsh and somewhat curlier than they should be, and they grow unevenly. Will you please tell me what to do for them?
A. J. K.

The sample lettuce plant came to hand in fresh condition. The flavor is certainly much below par and the leaves are tough. This would be caused by an insufficient supply of water at the roots more quickly than by any other condition. The temperature also has some bearing on it. Plants grown unusually cool make slower growth and are generally tougher in texture than the same lettuces would be if kept 5 to 10 degrees warmer. About all good lettuce growers run their night temperatures for head lettuce at 45 to 50 degrees. At 40 degrees the plants will grow, but slowly; it is much more profitable to keep them somewhat warmer. The variety sent seems to be Grand Rapids. Why not try Hittinger's Belmont or Forcing Tennis Ball, white seeded? These are sure headers and bring the highest prices in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other big markets.

It is difficult to tell just what would cause your plants to grow so unevenly. Poor quality of plants and uneven distribution of plant food are possible causes. If you grow lettuce in the same house year after year, you should sterilize the soil. This insures practical freedom from fungoid affections, root pests and weeds. Always sow your seed in fresh loam which has not previously been used for lettuce. In preparing the soil before planting, give it a good dressing of half rotted horse manure and fork it in thoroughly. While lettuce likes a somewhat low night temperature, the day temperature in winter can run up to 70 degrees on clear days and 60 degrees on dark days.

BODDINGTON'S QUALITY CANNAS

F. O. B. NEW YORK OR CHICAGO

A SHORT STORY

Occasionally you hear a "KNOCK" regarding our Cannas, but when you trace and run it down, you will find that the "hammer is out" from the fellow who has Cannas to sell.

During the past ten years we have sold over 5,000,000 Cannas and our trade for this stock is increasing every year; doesn't look as if our Cannas were poor or untrue, does it?

This year our growing stock was inspected by Mr. Boddington personally. No, we don't grow them ourselves in New York city; they are contracted and grown for us by—
(To be continued in our next).

Also, we were the first to popularize the Canna and to put King Humbert within the reach of all. We put the "Can" in Cannas and we are going to keep it there.

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices on Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business. Our Cannas are true to name—two and three and sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box. Two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices on quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Funeral work continues to be the principal outlet for flowers, and without it many retail stores might as well be closed up. The weather is so fine for outdoor amusements of all kinds that the beaches look like midsummer and indoor entertainments are not much in vogue. The hills and country generally are clothed with green, and many varieties of wild flowers and shrubbery that usually do not make their appearance until much later in the season are now seen in the principal stores. California lilac, ceanothus, is one of the most beautiful flowers in existence, the soft gray-blue harmonizing well with almost any surroundings. Outdoor flowers are beginning to come more rapidly and the street fakers' cards with the old, familiar legend, "Carnations 5 cents a dozen," are again making their appearance. Retailers are busy looking up stock for Easter. There is every prospect of a large supply of fine Easter lilies, which will be ready at least a week before the great day. In plants both rhododendrons and azaleas will have to be held back considerably, the warmth of the last two weeks having brought them on rapidly. There is no shortage in anything at present.

Various Notes.

Polder & Groen are shipping in fine cut flowers and nursery stock. The lumber is on the ground for a new lath house, 80x250 feet. Each year sees some considerable addition to the plant and much credit is due these young men for the progress they have made.

Things are booming at the Los Angeles Flower Market and I am glad to say that both partners are much improved in health. C. E. Morton and Mrs. Morton started for an auto trip to Imperial Valley by way of San Diego on Sunday, March 15. They expected to be gone for ten days or a couple of weeks at least.

The crop of Asparagus plumosus seed appears to be good this year, the unusually mild spring allowing the fullest development. Calling at Harry Bailey's place at Montebello, I found he had just gathered forty-five pounds at one picking. His freesia beds are unusually fine this year; the flowers are just going over, but the vigorous appearance of the plants betokens a fine crop of well-developed bulbs.

The Germain Seed Co. has an especially brisk business, both in the nursery and in the retail store. Many improvements have been carried out here of late, making this probably the finest seed store on the Pacific coast. The advance orders for import stock are already heavy and seem to presage a banner year for 1915.

Fred Howard, of Howard & Smith, left recently for Porterville, where he has large landscape contracts in hand. Records for February show that business has been fully twenty-five per cent greater than that of last year. New propagating houses of rather unusual character have been built at the firm's nursery at Montebello. These are built almost entirely of concrete and under the shade of the lath houses. Planting of rose stocks is practically complete at the new grounds on the Whittier road, almost opposite the trial grounds of the Germain Seed Co. Hundreds of thousands of stocks have been planted in a few days.

The H. N. Gage Co. is going more largely into the nursery end of the business and is shipping considerable quantities of stock direct from the Montebello ranch.

Frank Wilhelm has been growing large lots of various vegetable plants and Asparagus plumosus, for which he reports a spirited demand.

Morris Goldenson is not seen around the store much these days; having got rid of the trouble with his lame ankle, he is busy breaking in a new Studebaker.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

People in San Francisco and about the bay have often experienced three successive warm days and are perfectly willing to tolerate three such, but after four hot days last week the retailers began to feel uneasy. It is a well known fact that no line of trade suffers so much from the excessive heat as the florists' business. We have not had such a hot spell during the month of March for many years.

Violets and daffodils have been wiped out by the heat, and it is rather a relief to see the supply of daffodils diminished. Violets have also been on the market long enough to be dispensed with. Sweet peas have been forced out by the heat and are in abundant supply. The best rose during last week was Bridesmaid, followed closely by Richmond and American Beauties. There are few yellow roses offered. Radiance is quite popular, and so also are the few Milady that are brought in.

Cattleyas are slightly on the wane, and have not been shown much during the hot spell; in fact, all the retailers have endeavored to make as good a showing as possible with a few blooms, because more than fifty per cent are a dead loss, owing to the difficulty of preserving them.

We saw some fine peonies last week of mammoth size. Particularly attractive are the pink ones, and for corsages they bring 50 cents each. One of our Los Angeles brothers who happened to be stopping in the city the other day could not expound forcibly enough on the wonderful merits of the peonies in San Francisco, and we are certainly proud of our climate's productions. Tulips have not been coming in heavily as yet, and those that have come move well; they bring $1 per dozen downtown. Lilies of the valley are in good supply and have been featured in some of the larger stores as a sale article. We have fruit blossoms as an item of adornment yet, but last week they did not arrive in such great quantities as heretofore. The blossoms of the crab-apple are the most popular, although there has also been a fair demand for the double white-flowering peach. An item of unusual interest was the arrival of a fine lot of Spencer sweet peas that were probably forced for the occasion.

Flowering plants are still at a premium. The first Pink Pearl rhododendrons of the season arrived March 18, and they were a welcome commodity. We have for several months experienced a lack of something really high-class, something that would attract the man who wishes to make a lavish plant gift. Azaleas are practically unprocureable, a few of last year's plants being all that the market offers. Unusually good is the supply of Bermuda lilies; fine long stems containing five flowers may be seen anywhere. They retail for $4 and $5 per dozen, but will probably drop if the warm spell continues. While there is a profusion of calla lilies available, the call for them has not yet commenced. Our wild California iris has made wonderful strides, owing to the warmth, and has been a great attraction to the many easterners who are in town. A full line of wild flowers is seen generally.

Trade conditions may be summed up as normal, taking the weather into consideration. A great many easterners are in town and undoubtedly there will be a large transient population from now until the opening of the 1915 exposition.

Various Notes.

Daniel Raymond, of the Garden City Pottery Co., reports the completion of a large order for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Co. More than 500,000 pots were placed in one order. Mr. Raymond, who has the matter of the next field day for the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in view, reports that his firm has decided to make arrangements to entertain the society every second year at the Garden City pottery plant. A year ago the members had an extremely instructive visit and look forward to a repetition of the affair.

The Luther Burbank Co., which is making wonderful strides in its new locality, stimulates the interest of florists and growers by inviting them to a field day at Broadmoor, San Leandro, where the new nurseries are located.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition Co., which now shows the most interesting lot of nursery stock to be seen on the Pacific coast, has just completed arrangements for a greenhouse over thirty feet high. The building will be used exclusively for growing bougainvillea, which will be one of the main attractions in the color scheme of the exposition.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co., on Kearny street, have made extensive alterations in their establishment. The old floor has been torn out and replaced by one of white tile. This adds greatly to the general appearance. The show windows, which formerly covered considerable floor space, have been cut practically in two and also finished with a tile floor. The workroom has been screened from the main store with attractive fittings. The whole atmosphere presented by the new alterations is one of refreshment and shows Mr. Rossi's general good taste.

The Fairmount Floral Co. has made a few alterations in its store, screening off the workshop from the view of the customers. The company's automobile, we understand, is to have a new body, unique in design, and painted white. This firm featured green carnations for St. Patrick's day, and Mr. Avansino reports having sold 125 dozen.

Mr. Garbitt, of Darling's Flower Shop, in Los Angeles, has been inspecting Easter stock at the different nurseries around the bay. He seemed immensely pleased with the progress of the growers and florists in San Francisco, this being his first real tour of inspection.

J. R. Fotheringham, who is now permanently established on the Pacific coast, representing several of the leading eastern houses, has just booked an extensive order for ribbons, etc., for the Francis Floral Co., a new establishment launched by Mr. Schlottzauer, on Powell street.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is sojourning in Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, where he is trying to secure stock for his many large orders.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Conditions are improving slightly and the call for flowers has been brisker during the last week. There is not the same glut in stock of some varieties and trade is certainly better. Carnations are in fair demand and the quality is all that could be desired. Roses are fairly plentiful and home-grown violets are having a short period of brisk demand before their season closes. The market for bulbous stock never was worse than this year and now outdoor-grown narcissi are flooding the market, to the detriment of inside stock. An early spring has brought these flowers into bloom three weeks earlier than last year. The supply of lilies for Easter appears to be plentiful, although some growers will have to keep them fairly warm to get them in in time, but with an unknown quantity in the hands of the Japanese growers, it looks as if high prices would not prevail this year. The Japanese are becoming a serious proposition in the flower trade here; they are satisfied with lower prices than a white man can grow stock for in most instances, and judging by some of their products seen this year, they are not behind the white man in the matter of producing good flowers.

have discarded their plants and have put in cucumbers, to the betterment of the carnation business.

Rosaia Bros. have been showing some grand plants of azaleas this season.

The nurserymen and plant salesmen are having a busy season just now. The early spring has stimulated business considerably along these lines.

Ralph Richardson has some fine looking Easter lilies this year and has them all in good season to bloom right.

George Antenen was up to his eyes in funeral work when the writer called on him recently. The stock in his houses all looks excellent.

There does not appear to be much increase in the greenhouse construction business in this district lately, and there is good reason why. The owners of several places I know of are anxious to rent their houses, and over-production is the trouble with the trade more than anything else. Last season the demand was good for shipments to British Columbia. This season, with that outlet practically gone, the supply of all ordinary flowers is generally excessive. I hear of one grower who is going to raise chickens in his houses as soon as the cucumbers are done; so there is little need for more glass around Seattle. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

A slight falling off in trade has been noticed in all the stores, probably due to the bright and pleasant weather and to the many flowers blooming outside, which distract attention from the stores regardless of what their quality may be. Comparing business with that of a year ago, we find this year's slightly ahead. The market is showing a full supply of stock. Carnations seem to be overplentiful; it is almost impossible to find an outlet for all the receipts. Daffodils are at their best, with prices dropping to the bottom. Orchids, valley, violets and sweet peas are plentiful and move at remunerative prices. Freesias, fancy tulips, mignonette and anemones are splendid in quality and are novelties just now. St. Patrick's day showed considerable activity, but not so much as in former years. It seems that the florists are at fault to a great degree. They do not push it and make the necessary display. Those things must be kept in the eyes of the public to get results.

Various Notes.

Roake & Crewe are located at Castle Rock, Wash., gathering moss and green goods for the local and shipping trade.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held March 17. Considerable business was transacted. It was decided not to hold a spring flower show, as it is impracticable, especially this year.

The Routledge Seed Co. has found it necessary to enlarge the store to take care of the increasing business. In addition to seeds, the company now has all accessories, ferns and blooming plants.

L. Goodfriend, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, was calling on the trade last week.

The recent change in the parcel post rates, applying them to seeds, plants, bulbs and cuttings, is gratifying to the local seedsmen and nurserymen. Under the old rate, the eastern nurserymen could undersell and get a great deal of business which would otherwise go to the local firms.

A carload of trees and specimen plants arrived a few days ago from Europe, via the southern route, to be used for the city. A large percentage of the stock was dead when the car was opened, the temperature being about 100 degrees.

Martin & Forbes are displaying a choice lot of dwarf wistaria plants and rambler roses in the windows.

The Swiss Floral Co. reports trade satisfactory, especially in the landscape department, which keeps a force of about thirty men busy all the time.

Camellias and magnolias are in bloom in the various sections of the city.

The Market.

Business has held up well, showing something of an increase over the last month. Stock has been plentiful, but there has been no great surplus, the extra stock being shipped to outside points. Carnations are of good quality and are holding a better price than has been the case in former years. Outdoor violets are now on the market and find a ready sale, as does much of the bulbous stock. A forward, warm spring is helping this stock along, somewhat earlier than is usual for this climate. Sweet peas are now becoming plentiful and are finding a ready sale.

Green goods are none too plentiful, much of the stock used being shipped in from outside points.

Various Notes.

The florists' dance was well attended, and the hall was taxed to its full capacity. During the dance refreshments were served. Prizes were offered for the most graceful dancers, and George Seaverns and Louis Gammersvik were so closely tied that no decision could be made by the judges. There is talk of a contest to settle the matter in the near future.

Some of the local florists made a display at the home products show last week.

At the regular club meeting, April 2, a paper on landscape gardening will be read. Much interest is being taken in this part of the club meetings; the papers read in the past have been quite interesting and instructive.

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade?
Is it moving as it should?
No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

REPORT of the death of Edward Meehan, of Thomas Meehan & Sons, Philadelphia, will be found in this week's obituary column.

THE landscape department of G. L. Welch & Co., of Fremont, Neb., is now in the charge of M. E. Roesch, who has moved from Fredonia, N. Y., to take this position.

ALTHOUGH the critical period has not yet passed, reports from the southwest indicate favorable conditions in the apple orchards. Peach orchards, however, have been seriously damaged by weather conditions and many are almost a failure.

THERE is a steady increase in the business done by the nurseries that have well organized landscaping departments. The only drawback is the difficulty of finding men who can take hold of a prospect and stay with it until the check is in the bank.

HENRY T. MOON, treasurer and manager of the William H. Moon Nursery Co., at Morrisville, Pa., was shot in the shoulder March 14 by burglars whom he surprised in his uncle's home. A posse of 100 men followed and captured the burglars.

FRANK SPINNEY, proprietor of the Merrimac Valley Nurseries, at Haverhill, Mass., has added to his land by the purchase of the Cogswell farm. He has already set out an acre of shrubbery on it and is making changes so as to allow more planting space.

THE Meneray-Omaha Nursery Co., which recently incorporated in Nebraska with $175,000 capital stock, has moved its headquarters to Omaha. It has large nurseries and warehouses at Crescent, Ia., and Council Bluffs, Ia. G. H. Keyes is president of the company.

KELSEY NURSERIES TO BUILD.

The following account of the building activities of the Kelsey Nurseries, at St. Joseph, Mo., is taken from the News-Press of that city:

On nearly two acres of ground, north of Alabama avenue and between Lake avenue and the railroad tracks, recently purchased from the street railway company by the Kelsey Nurseries, will be erected within the next sixty days a frost-proof building, where stock trees and shrubbery can be stored and goods received and shipped in refrigerator cars during the winter. Material for the warehouse will begin to arrive soon and preliminary work of construction will start about May 1. The new structure will be of brick and tile, 18 feet high, 140 feet wide and 180 feet long, and will be absolutely frost-proof. It will extend east and west and will be near the tracks, where the Rock Island system will furnish switching facilities. A brick office, 20x30 feet, will be built on Lake avenue, and the total cost of the improvements will be between $20,000 and $25,000. The company is contemplating a transfer of its entire business to the south end, where the facilities are adequate for development and where it will be closer to the large tract of land used for nursery purposes, lying just south of the street railway tracks. The tract contains between 125 and 150 acres, part of which the company owns. When spring opens nearly forty men will be employed in the south end nurseries.

NURSERIES IN SUIT.

The Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, of Huntsville, Ala., and L. R. Taylor &

Sons, of Topeka, Kan., have brought suit in the Knox County Chancery court against the Home Nursery Co., of Knox county, Tenn., and the L. & N. Railroad Co., seeking judgments of $178.15 and $96.90. On fiat of Chancellor Will D. Wright, the defendant railroad company is enjoined from paying out $400.50, for which amount it is claimed that the Home Nursery Co. has a judgment against the railroad company.

MAIL IMPORTATIONS OF PLANTS.

In news-letter No. 7 issued by the federal horticultural board G. C. Marlatt, chairman of the board, gives the reason for the order issued by the second assistant postmaster general December 16, 1913, prohibiting the importation from foreign countries through the mails of all plants and plant products for propagation, including seeds, except field, vegetable and flower seeds. "This prohibition," says the news-letter, "applies to bulbs, roots and tubers, and to all seeds of trees, shrubs, or other plants, except only field, vegetable and flower seeds."

"Under the order issued by the second assistant postmaster general, nursery stock and other plant products for propagation, except as noted, received in the mails from foreign countries are to be returned from the postoffice of receipt, as prohibited, to the country and place of origin."

"This restricts the carriage of such products from foreign countries to other means, such as express or freight. Importations by these methods pass through the customs office in the normal way and are under complete control. Postal sendings are entered under an entirely different system and necessitate examination at any little post-office throughout the United States.

"It is possible to transmit many injurious insects and plant diseases in lots of plants or seeds sent through the mails, and the inspection of such mail sendings is an impossibility without a vast army of inspectors. It was, further, found necessary to make the restriction quite broad, much broader than the original definition of nursery stock, for the reason that foreign shippers, and postmasters as well, were quite unable to make the distinction between nursery stock and herbaceous plants, etc., and the only safe course was to exclude all plants from mail sendings with the exception of the seeds noted, which are deemed to carry comparatively little danger of introducing insect pests or diseases."

THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION.

Preparations for the thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held in Cleveland June 24 to 26, are under way and present indications point to an unusually large attendance and interesting meeting. The Hotel Hollenden, the headquarters for the convention, has the best of accommodations, and nurserymen of Cleveland and the Ohio State Nurserymen's Association are working to make the visitors' stay one of more than usual pleasure and

The Market.

Last week business was not so good as in the preceding one. For one thing, the weather was less pleasant, the temperature on the first day of spring running down as low as zero or a few degrees above it. This has seriously affected the fakers' trade. Roses are gradually accumulating and the prices show recessions; the quality leaves nothing to be desired. Beauties with long stems continue scarce, but they are hardly missed when we have an abundance of splendid Russell, Shawyer, Killarney Queen, Hadley and Richmond. Both Killarney and White Killarney are fine. The old varieties are still much more widely grown than the Double Pink and White Killarney. Sunburst is good. This, as well as Ward and Hillingdon, is selling well. My Maryland is losing favor and will be largely dropped another season.

Carnations are not abundant and they sell at excellent prices; in fact, they have sold exceptionally well the entire season. Violets are in overwhelming supply. Some first-class flowers, well bunched, realize 50 cents per hundred, but large numbers go at $2 to $2.50 per thousand. Sweet peas have shortened up, as several large growers have finished for the season, and first-class Spencers bring $1.50 per hundred. Bulbous stock is abundant and the prices show declines. A few Spanish irises are seen on one or two stands. Valley is somewhat too plentiful. Lilies are chiefly Formosas; these for Easter are being quoted at $10 to $12.50 per hundred.

Pink snapdragon is now quite good. Fine spikes realize $1 to $1.50 per dozen; sales of other colors are more limited. English primroses are now coming in freely and sell well. Yellow marguerites move quickly. Double cornflowers continue popular. Cattleya Trianae is nearly over, but there is a good supply of C. Schrederae; some C. Mossiae has also appeared. Cypripedium villosum and Harrisianum, phalaenopsis and dendrobies are other orchids seen. Gardenias are selling well and there is a better supply of them. Trade in green stock is quiet, but rhododendrons, rambler roses, acacias, lilacs and other pot plants are in good demand.

Dinner to S. A. F. Directors.

A banquet was tendered to the visiting S. A. F. directors and some others at the Parker House, March 19. There were sixty gentlemen present. The table decorations included Hadley and the Mrs. Moorfield Storey roses; also a new variety from S. J. Reuter, and other choice flowers. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, president of the Horticultural Club, officiated as toastmaster and cordially welcomed the guests to Boston, predicting a banner convention next August.

Among the numerous speakers were Theodore Wirth, for the S. A. F.; Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, for the United States government; Thomas Roland, who urged cooperation and work for the success of the coming convention, and John Dillon, the new superintendent of public grounds, who was introduced as a great addition to Boston's practical superintendents. Mr. Dillon spoke for the city of Boston, in the unavoidable absence of Mayor Conley.

J. B. Shea responded for the park department of Boston, and J. J. Hess of Omaha, and J. F. Huss, of Hartford, another park man, added their quota. Alexander McGregor, of the governor's council, made a fine address for the commonwealth of Massachusetts. August Poehlmann made a splendid address and was warmly cheered. Patrick Welch got an enthusiastic welcome and spoke in his usual inimitable way. John Evans, of Richmond; George Asmus, W. J. Stewart and E. A. Peirce each made addresses.

W. P. Rich spoke for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and W. J. Kennedy for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. There was a feeling of good fellowship and optimism throughout the meeting, all predicting a wonderful convention. The convention garden was given a great send-off. It was a late hour before the meeting terminated, and many left for late trains before adjournment.

Various Notes.

Thomas Roland is this week pulling up his big house of winter Spencer sweet peas, which have given him wonderful returns. He will plant the vacated house with tomatoes. Among roses he is cutting a fine lot of Sunburst, Russell, Shawyer, Ward, Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney. The latter are of superb quality.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, has 2,500 giganteum lilies in fine shape for Easter. He has a house of Spencer sweet peas, which is now giving a splendid crop. He is growing candytuft between the sweet peas, for a Memorial day crop.

The question of affiliation with the S. A. F. was discussed at the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. As it was taken up at a late hour, it was voted to continue the discussion at the next meeting of the club, April 21, when prominent S. A. F. members will be asked to attend and tell what advantages would come from affiliation. While the S. A. F. has not asked the local club to take any action on this question, it is felt that it would be well to settle the matter one way or the other.

J. R. Comley, of Bedford, is sending

Price Reduction

The strenuous weather of February completely disarranged our plans, and now everything comes at once. Two lots of plants ready to go out and another lot ready to go in. We shall give you the benefit of a reduction in price to quickly make room. Our plants are branched and stocky, and were never better. The price is only \$20.00 per 1000; \$3.00 per 100; 200 for \$5.00. These plants, if benched, will blossom from Memorial Day throughout the summer. If potted on and pinched, they will make you a leader for spring sales. Potted into 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  or 4-inch pots and set on the back side of carnation benches, will yield a surprising profit. While you can get fine plants at a small price make room somewhere. No other plant will do the amount of business in so short a time as our

Silver Pink Seedling.

Every shoot of the 40 or 50 that it throws is a flower spike. Make room today and secure your plants.

Now is the time to sow seed for plants to bed out. Snaps are fast coming into favor for garden use.

ENCOURAGE IT—PUSH IT—PREPARE FOR IT.

You will fuss with a geranium for nine months and sell at $1.00 to $1.50 a dozen, while you can get the same money for our SEEDLING snap plants in THREE months, and at one-tenth the cost of production. This is not theory, but a plain fact. Pure seed at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. All orders cash. Free cultural directions.

in fine smilax, a crop now handled by few, in addition to single violets.

The Boston Rose Co., now comfortably located at the Boston Flower Exchange, is handling a fine lot of Hadley, Killarney, White Killarney and Russell from the Montgomery Co., Hadley, Mass. This firm will grow Killarney Brilliant and Sunburst another season.

At the West Street Greenhouses, of Reading, there is a grand lot of double bachelor's buttons with 18 to 24-inch stems. They will have a fine house of giganteum for Easter. In carnations, White Wonder, Beacon, Pink Delight, Mrs. Ward, Benora and the old Queen are all good.

The Boston Market Gardeners' Association visited the establishments of W. W. Edgar Co., Frank Edgar and Peirce Bros., March 21.

There are a good number of visitors from here at the New York show, the first party going as judges March 20. The number, however, is not nearly equal to that of a year ago.

Kidder Bros. are noted for their single violets and the attractive manner in which they are bunched. At this time, when violets are something of a glut, the flowers of Kidder Bros. are eagerly bought.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report business as good. They are prepared for a big Easter trade. They will, as usual, handle a big lot of lilies in pots direct from their growers' establishments.

William Sim's establishment is well worthy of a visit now. The houses of new Spencer sweet peas just coming in are grand. A house of pansies is an eye-opener for those who may never

THE LEEDLE FLORAL COMPANY
SPRINGFIELD-OHIO.

Elliott, died at New London, Conn., March 15. Mrs. Elliott was born at Kendal, England, in 1827. She lived for many years in Wisconsin, where W. H. Elliott was born, later returning east and settling in New London. She was in her eighty-eighth year. She was at one time a member of the S. A. F. and attended many of the conventions.

E. J. Ahern, of Wellesley, is strong at present on English primroses and calendulas.

Harry Quint, at 164 Tremont street, keeps making improvements in his store, until now it is a thoroughly up-to-date one. He does a large business in baskets of flowers, putting these up attractively and selling the baskets at reasonable prices. I am glad to see this bright and progressive young man doing so well. He had a large decoration March 19, at Whitney hall, Brookline.

The club field day with the W. W. Edgar Co., March 28, promises to be largely attended. Members and friends are asked to take Cambridge tunnel trains so as to reach Waverley at 2 o'clock; the running time is thirty minutes.

Frank J. Dolansky, in addition to his crops of cattleyas and gardenias, is sending in fine lots of sweet peas and callas. He will have a splendid crop of cattleyas and gardenias for Easter.

Carl Everburg, of Woburn, who is a leading bulb specialist, has a grand house of Spencer peas coming into crop.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, went to the New York show March 20, taking some of his splendid bachelor's buttons with him.

F. H. Houghton reports trade as exceptionally good. He has had some heavy funeral orders of late. The new French hydrangeas are popular here; also Rhododendron Pink Pearl.

The first mayflowers of the season were noted in H. R. Comley's window March 20. Hedgehog-shaped receptacles of Asplenium Nidus-Avis were also noted.

In MacMulkin's large show window a handsome display of standard double pink cherries and Mrs. Cutbush roses were noted.

H. F. Woods, of Brookline, and Edward Bingham, of Dedham, are two violet specialists whose flowers are worthy of special note.

Wax Bros. report trade as highly

New Rose, Killarney Brilliant

THE MOST VALUABLE ROSE INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

We consider this new rose—a sport from the original pink Killarney—the most valuable rose that has been introduced in many years. It is well named Killarney Brilliant, on account of its brilliant color.

It is a great improvement on the original pink Killarney; first, because of its much more brilliant color, it being almost crimson in bright weather, while in midwinter—in dull, cloudy and foggy weather,—when the original pink Killarney loses its brilliancy and becomes badly faded, Killarney Brilliant is as bright and deep a pink as the original variety at its best. In addition to its great superiority in color, the flower is almost twice as large, having from twenty-five to forty full-sized petals.

It has the same desirable color that Killarney Queen possesses, but has double the number of petals, making it a very double and a fuller flower; and it is also very much more productive, having the same habit of growth and the same freedom of bloom as its parent.

We have watched Killarney Brilliant growing during the past winter, planted in the same house with the original and the double pink Killarney, and when those varieties faded so as to be almost unmarketable, Killarney Brilliant was superb. We are thoroughly convinced that it will immediately supplant the original Killarney as the standard market variety, and that every up-to-date grower will be compelled to plant it, on account of its great superiority. A prominent rose grower, who has seen it growing, says it is the only rose he has ever seen that needs no advertising; it sells itself.

satisfactory. They do a heavy business in high-grade sweet peas, double cornflowers, violets and choice roses, which are always attractively displayed.

Theodore Wirth had an appreciative audience at Horticultural hall Saturday morning, March 21, when he lectured on the parks of Minneapolis. Stereopticon views added interest to the lecture. The same afternoon Dr. Perley Spaulding, Washington, D. C., lectured on "Some Undesirable Foreign Plant Diseases." The lecturer failed to enlighten his audience as to what he considered desirable plant diseases.

Mrs. George Shawyer

We are growing this splendid rose this season with most gratifying results. As a free and vigorous grower and great producer it has no equal. It has not shown the slightest symptoms of mildew with us. It sets buds freely in the short days of winter and is now coming in with a fine midwinter crop. It does equally well on grafts or own root.

We intend planting Shawyer heavily this season, but still have a splendid stock of fine young plants in 3-inch pots, ready for immediate delivery—on own root.

We also offer a splendid lot of Sunburst, Ward, Richmond and Killarney, all own root stock. For prices and further particulars write

The Market.

St. Patrick's day made the first part of last week extra good, as there was a strong demand for colored plants and flowers. Stock is quite plentiful. There were Saturday sales on roses at 50 and 75 cents a dozen in a number of the stores. Locally grown violets sold at 25 cents a bunch. Bulbous stock is quite plentiful, but a great many of the bulbs came blind. Locally grown Easter lilies will be quite plentiful for Easter.

Various Notes.

William Schlatter & Son are turning out some fine bulbous stock and are cutting some fine snapdragons, some stems being about five feet long.

JOY!

This is a Carnation that did not get a reputation over night. We have been handling it for a little over two years and ought to know something about it.

IT'S A REAL RED

It is the kind of Carnation that proves the florist's friend. Shipped over a distance, it will look as good on arrival as when sent. This feature appeals to us because we know what it means to the man who is depending on us.

JOY has been described by Mr. E. H. Blameuser, of Niles Center, Ill.—the man who raised it—as “a strong grower, early, very free and continuous bloomer, with strong calyx and good stem.” That should be good enough for anybody.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business was a trifle slow last week, but everybody is preparing for the Easter rush. There has been a general overhauling and brightening up of the retail shops and among the growers there has been an increasing activity in forcing potted stock. In many instances the results of the excessively cold spells in January and February are noticeable in the limited supply.

Various Notes.

The motor truck belonging to Joseph Koppelman, operated by Aaron Cohen, was struck by an electric car March 22 and somewhat damaged. Mr. Cohen had a narrow escape.

John Goodwin, for thirty-one years foreman for the North Burial Ground greenhouses, has retired and has been succeeded by John Simpson, formerly on the estate of Sir Henry Pellatt, Toronto, Can. Mr. Goodwin began work as a florist and gardener with Johnston, on Rochambeau avenue, forty-one years ago.

Wilbur A. Fiske, of the W. E. Barrett Co., who has been at the Rhode Island hospital for several weeks, is slowly improving.

H. H. Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, is contemplating a trip to England the latter part of this month to meet his wife, who has been visiting her parents, who are missionaries in India, for the last seven months.

The fourth annual meeting of the Greystone Horticultural Society was held last week, when the following officers were elected: President, E. Hodgson; vice-president, S. Wood; treasurer, J. Briggs; secretary, T. Brooks. The annual exhibition will be held in July and the annual dahlia show September 12. W. H. M.

DAVENPORT, IA.

John Staack, of Moline, Ill., was re-elected president of the Tri-City Florists' Association at the annual meeting held here March 9. All the other officers of the association were also re-elected, as follows:

Vice-Presidents—Chris. Sorensen for Moline, R. M. C. Rohlf for Davenport and Edward Patton for Rock Island.

Secretary—William Goos, of Bettendorf, Ia.

Treasurer—William Knees, of Moline.

Financial Secretary—Arvid Anderson, of Moline.

The membership of the Tri-City Florists' Association now comprises twenty-two members of the trade in the three cities. Most of them were in attendance at the meeting. The discussion of the evening was on insect pests and methods for their extermination.

Jewett City, Conn.—A. A. Young is growing the winter-flowering Spencers and predicts this strain of sweet peas will be the only one worth while for the specialist. The carnation crop has been quite satisfactory and will total up fully equal to the average.

The Market.

Trade has been decidedly good during the last week for both wholesale and retail stores. There has been a heavy call for funeral work, as well as for decorations. Carnations have been plentiful in all grades; the best, at $3 per hundred, were all cleaned up, while there was some oversupply in the cheaper grades. Sweet peas are arriving in greater quantities and are of good grade, selling for $4 to $6 per hundred. There has been a shortage in daffodils on account of the florists holding them for use during display week, from March 23 to 26. Violets, valley and marguerites are all in good supply and sell quite well.

A heavy call was made upon the florists for the opening performance of a play called "A College Hero," at the leading theater of this city. This was run for the entire week and was given by some local people for the benefit of a local hospital, and numerous bouquets and baskets were sent to the leading members of the play.

Various Notes.

At the greenhouses of Bellamy Bros. everything is in fine shape for Easter. They have a case of Jamesii lilies in fine shape, worthy of particular mention. All bulbs came with little disease, quite strong and well filled with buds. The general report of lilies is that they are short-stemmed this year. The giganteums are strong and well budded, but not over eighteen inches in height.

At the store of the Pierce-Christian Co. the writer found the members of the new company in exuberant spirits over their opening. By special efforts they succeeded in getting the store in shape Friday night and arranged their plants and flowers, and were ready for business Saturday morning. The store was quite attractive, with a choice collection of plants and cut flowers in good selection. They received visitors during the day and gave each lady a rose as a souvenir. In addition to the sales of plants and cut flowers, they had considerable funeral work to do, among which was a large pall.

The Chamber of Commerce is inaugurating an opening week for all stores in the city, calling it "display week," and selecting daffodils, tulips and hyacinths as the representative flowers for the week. The purpose is to have all the stores make a special effort for the display of spring goods at this time. The merchants have taken hold of the proposition in good shape and have made a heavy call on the florists for decorations. The call has been for potted plants and baskets. ## LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

On Thursday evening, March 19, the Lancaster County Florists' Association met in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The ladies were also present.

E. Morrell, superintendent of the landscape gardening department of the Berryhill Nursery Co., gave an illustrated talk on "Hardy Plants," speaking in particular of hardy flowers for cutting. The pictures thrown on the screen were fine. He spoke of the desirability of having an abundant supply of peonies, irises, pyrethrums, and the endless list that more of us should be acquainted with.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr, on behalf of the ladies, expressed their appreciation of meeting with us.

The ladies were consulted as to their choice of a place in which to hold our annual picnic, in July. A vote showed Wildcat, on the Susquehanna, and Peryn to be equal favorites. The matter will be decided at the next meeting.

A special committee, with H. A. Schroyer as chairman, reported that the Conestoga Traction Co. has agreed to carry flowers on any car leaving Lancaster with the dispatcher's O. K. thereon, and that florists residing in the country had the same privilege without having the O. K. mark.

An invitation was received from the Scranton Florists' Club to visit its spring flower show, March 31 and April 1.

Two new members were elected.

Preceding the meeting, twenty-one florists visited the Hostetter establishments, at Manheim. The Hostetters are wholesale growers of cut flowers. Their specialties are carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons, yellow and white marguerites, Primula Forbesi and Asparagus Sprengeri. E. P. Hostetter has houses of a white sport of Primula Forbesi, which is a valuable acquisition to the list of spring cut flowers.

The next meeting will be held April 16. At 1:45 p. m. on that date the club will leave Center Square, on the Coatesville trolley, to visit Elmer and Charles Weaver and Ira Landis, at Paradise. The meeting will follow in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 7:30.

Various Notes.

A report of the death of Isaac W. Hoffman, of Elizabethtown, Pa., a member of the Lancaster County Florists' Association, will be found in this week's obituary column.

AND THE FACT THAT WE PAY THE EXPRESS

EVERY PLANT that we send out is a good one, as letters from satisfied customers from all parts of the country abundantly prove. The reason that our plants reach you in better condition than plants from other greenhouses is because of our scientific packing, also the fact of their being raised at a high altitude, 5721 feet above sea level, which gives them lots of fibrous roots. They start quickly. They are not soft.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

John F. Horn, of Horn & Bro., predicts a banner Easter business. The long, bright days now with us will bring both cut flowers and plants along in splendid shape, following the long dull spell.

Ernest Ashley voices the same sentiment and is making preparations for handling a large volume of trade. He has an option on one of the largest stores in town for display purposes.

The daughter of A. L. Yeager, the Sixth street florist, is ill with typhoid. She is a bright girl, a great favorite with all who know her, and it is hoped her recovery will be speedy.

John Sykes is building a house, 30x150, for general purposes. He has a snug retail place and keeps it in apple pie order. W. M.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

The only severe damage in the recent storm was sustained by the Newburgh Floral Co. as the result of a pole falling across the range of glass. Dr. Wait threatens suit if the telephone company does not settle otherwise.

Percy Herbert, superintendent of the Yuess Gardens Co., enjoys a day off now and then, hunting on the extensive Cathcart estate. Just now he is busy preparing for Easter with a promising lot of stock.

Geo. F. Chadborn, of Schaefer's, Inc., has no kick coming, for funeral work and decorations have been unusually brisk of late. W. M.

Kearney, Neb.—The Kearney Floral Co. has added a line of flower and vegetable seeds to its stock in trade.

Cyclamen Giganteum, just coming into full bloom, all colors, 4-inch, 20c; 5-inch, 25c to 50c; 6-inch, 50c to 60c.

Cinerarias, 5-inch, 25c; 6-inch, 50c.

Obconicas, 5-inch, 25c.

FERNS—Boston, 4-inch, 20c; 5-inch, 35c.

Pierstoni, 4-inch, 20c; 5-inch, 35c; 6-inch, 50c and 60c.

Whitmanii, 4-inch, 20c; 5-inch, 35c; 6-inch, 50c and 60c.

Plumosus Nanus, 3-inch, 8c; 4-inch, 12½c; 5-inch, 25c.

We also have choice stock of following:

New Am. Beauty Geraniums, 2½-inch pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-inch, $8.00 per 100; 4-inch, $12.50 per 100.

Carnations, out of 2½-inch pots, up to April 20, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000—Washington, White Enchantress, Enchantress, Beacon, White Perfection, Victory, Harlowarden.

White Swainsonas, 2½-inch pots, $3.00 per 100.

Shasta Daisies, 2½-inch pots, $2.50 per 100.

FREY & FREY, 1338 O Street LINCOLN, NEB.

PREPARE FOR EASTER!!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

he shall be our man in the future.

From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.

Why! ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show

Of all the best that florists need, found in one place to grow. The Lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter Day, Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.

The Araucarias, matchless are the Ferns all green, With bulbs and plumed Spiraeas, the best you've ever seen; And Aschmann gives a challenge: "Let every florist hear!

For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear;

If you wish to gather dollars like Violets in the Spring,

Then send your largest order—his plants the cash will bring."

A Photo of a House of Lillium Multiflorum, with Godfrey Aschmann, the Grower.

We have the genuine EASTER LILY, Lillium Multiflorum. We have the genuine stock, true to name, raised from selected bulbs, furnished by our grower in Japan; 9 to 12-in. bulbs; now in bud, in fine condition for Easter sale; 5½ to 6-in. pots, having from 5 to 10 buds to a plant; 10c per bud; plants having less than 5 buds, 12c per bud. Order Now. Buds now showing; plants of medium height, just right for Easter.

HEADQUARTERS for AZALEAS FOR EASTER BLOOMING EASTER GREETINGS

Azaleas are all the go. Everybody's buying them.

Bear in mind we are headquarters for Azalea Plants.

10,000 now ready of our so well-known specialty, Azalea Indica. The Easter plant of this century—a rival of all Easter plants—the talk of the country.

GET THEM AT GODFREY ASCHMANN'S

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Vander Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Vander Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tiptop condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each.

NOTICE.—A portion of large size Mme. Vander Cruyssen must be ordered in connection with small sizes, because we were able to get only a limited amount of this variety in smaller sizes.

ALL OUR AZALEAS are potted in 5½, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots.

Niobe, double white, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Paul Weber, double rose, white border, 75c, $1.00, $1.25.

De Schryveriana, double variegated pink, white border, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Vervaeneana, double variegated rose, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Apollo, double red, $1.00, $1.25, $1.75 to $2.00.

John Llewellyn, double pink, white border, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Simon Mardner, double pink, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Empress of India, double variegated rose, white border, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Deutsche Perle, double white. Stock limited of this variety, 75c, $1.00, $1.25.

About 6 more best assorted varieties, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

If you leave the varieties to us, we shall give you a good assortment in best varieties and sizes according to price. If we are out of variety and size mentioned in your orders, we shall send the next best variety and size as near as possible. During the big Easter rush, when thousands of boxes must be packed in a very short time, we have no time to look up references, hence must ask for cash with order.

PALMS

We are well provided this Easter with a big stock of Palms. To make room for the new importation coming in from Belgium in April, we will be able to give you excellent good value in them. Just look at these low prices—a bargain seldom offered:

KENTIA Forsteriana and Belmoreana, 5½, 5½ and 6-in. pots, made up of 3 plants, 40c, 50c, 60c and 75c; single, 5½-in., Forsteriana or Belmoreana, 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c; Forsteriana, 12-in. tubs, 65 to 75 in. high, $4.00 to $5.00.

COCOS Weddelliana, 4-in., 25c; made up, 30c; 3-in., 15c.

ARECA lutescens robusta, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 25c; 5-in., 35c.

CINERARIA HYBRIDA GRANDIFLORA, Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

RHODODENDRONS, 10-in. pans, full of buds, $1.25 to $1.50.

HYDRANGEAS

We have a whole house in Hydrangeas, finer than ever, in fine shape for Easter; every branch staked up.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA, full of foliage, all have buds, just right for Easter sales, 5½, 6 and 7-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

FRENCH HYDRANGEAS, Mme. Mouillere, best white, and Gen. de Vibrate, bright rose, 40c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

BEGONIA GRACILIS LUMINOSA, deep red, in bloom and bud, 5½-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

BEGONIA ARGENTEA COMPACTA, 4-in. pots, 15c.

Our specialty, the world wide known pure white MOONVINE, Ipomoea Noctiflora, is now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

ARAUCARIA Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 4, 5, 6, 7 tiers, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50.

SPIRAEA GLADSTONE. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

PRIMULA Obconica. In bloom, 4-in., 15c; 5½-in., $3.00 per doz; 8-in. pans, 75c each.

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, DAFFODILS

HYACINTHS are scarce this Easter, but we put in last fall an immense stock of our own importation, which will make large spikes and cannot be compared with the cheap stuff that is now floating on the market. Gertrude, best pink; La Grandesse, best white; King of the Blues, best dark blue; Grand Maître, best lavender blue. 4-in. pots, staked up, $12.00 for 100 pots. In bloom for Easter week.

TOURNESOL TULIPS, best double red and yellow variegated; Murillo, double rose; Imperator Rubrum, bright red double; Couronne d'Or, double yellow, new, three bulbs planted in a 4-in. pot, $15.00 per 100 pots, $1.80 a doz., in bloom one week before Easter.

DAFFODILS, Von Sion. Best double yellow NARCISSUS in existence, three double-nosed bulbs, planted in 5½ to 6-in. pot, $3.00 per doz. pots, out of cold frame, will bloom one to two weeks before Easter.

While we pay the highest price for our Bulbs of Hyacinths, Tulips, etc., from Holland growers, you must bear in mind that we can sell them no cheaper than we do, and we assure you that there is no profit in it for us for the fine stock we sell you.

FICUS Elastica (Rubber Plant), 4-in., 5-in., 5½-in., 6-in., 7-in., 25c, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

NEPHROLEPIS OR FERNS, Scottii, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in. pots, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Harrelli, 7-in., 75c to $1.00.

Glatrasii, 5½-in., 35c to 40c. Smithii, 6-in. pans, 35c, 40c, 50c.

NEPHROLEPIS CORDATA COMPACTA, 4-in., 25c.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI, 4-in., 10c; 2½-in., 4c.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh is still holding on to cold weather, with little sun, and spring was ushered in with the temperature down to 14 degrees. The result was that there has not been much of an increase in the receipts of cut flowers, just about enough coming in to supply the demand nicely. The cut of lilies is increasing every day and stock of all kinds is fine, especially roses. Beauties continue scarce, and not too good, but, to use the language of one man, "there are so many other good things we don't need them." Bulbous stock is fine but not plentiful. The first lot of southern stock arrived last week, but was not worth the express charges. Good ferns are scarce and violets are having their own troubles, but all in all the supply and demand are about evenly balanced, which is quite unusual at this season of the year.

The retailers are beginning to show more blooming plants. One can see a gathering in of baskets intended for plants and a general preparedness for Easter is showing all around.

Various Notes.

Ben Elliott says there will be more and better plants offered by the Pittsburgh growers than ever before at Easter. The John Bader Co. has several houses of azaleas which will be just right, also several houses of primulas and other blooming plants. This concern is doing its best to make come true the prediction that Easter will become a plant day.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. last week made a delivery of 1,000 strings of plumosus on one order. This is the largest single order the company ever filled.

Pittsburgh this week opened a new department store, the largest in the city, and it made an unusual demand for flowers, as there were several hundred baskets and bunches besides numerous horseshoes sent by friends in and out of the city. The opening of the new store stirred up all the older establishments and there were decorations for spring openings in all of them, which called for flowers and plants. The John Horne Co. spent about $2,000 for the week's floral decorations. That sounds big, but they were doing big things in a big store.

Fred Burki arrived last week from his trip to Arizona and California, coming home to find the temperature near zero.

Allen Langhans was in the city this week, gathering up his belongings, which he is going to take a little farther north and build a new nest, into which we understand he will take a partner.

The florists want to remember that May 10 is Mother's day. Make this a day for special boxes and relieve the unfillable demand for one color of any one flower. The retailer with just a little tact can do this by suggesting to send a suitable box of assorted flowers.

GERANIUMS

We need not tell you how we stand on the Geranium question; our name has become synonymous with Geraniums, and to think of Geraniums is to think of Vincent, to think of Vincent is to think of Geraniums; it has become our middle name. We have over a million in 2-in. and 3-in. pots, ready for immediate shipment, in the best assortment of standard varieties in the country, representing the cream of thousands of varieties. Good standard varieties from two-inch pots, at $2.00 per 100; $18.50 per 1000; from three-inch pots, at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. Good collection of Novelties listed in our catalogue at reasonable prices.

SPECIAL

For $18.00 we will send 1000, 50 each of 20 varieties, our selection, either single or double. We have been sending out these collections for a number of years, and they have given general satisfaction. 6000 for $105.00; 10,000 for $175.00. These assortments are made up of all good kinds, and will make a collection that will be hard to beat.

CANNAS

We are not Dealers but Growers, and by handling our product, it being grown, cured and packed under our own personal supervision, we know just what our customers get and do not have to put the blame for poor stock, wrong varieties, etc., on some one else, but stake our own reputation on every package that leaves our place. The following sorts are all distinct useful varieties, select stock, two, three and more eyed divisions—250 at thousand rate; less than 250 of a kind at hundred rate.

500,000 CARNATIONS.

We are devoting our whole plant to the production of carnation rooted cuttings. Our conditions are the very best and we are producing the finest stock we ever sent out. The rooted cuttings we are now shipping are superior to most 2-in. stock sent out. Will be glad to send you samples so you can see just what it is. All cuttings from stock plants grown for cuttings only, and are large and very fine. We also have fine potted stock, for April, May and June delivery. Place your orders ahead for this if you want to be sure of it.

CYCLAMEN.

200,000 GIANT FLOWERING CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS AND BLOOMING PLANTS.

For the last 16 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be potted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first prize at the Cleveland show and first and second at Toledo, early November, when blooming cyclamen were scarce.

STRONG AUGUST SOWN SEEDLINGS, once transplanted, $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000. Cash with order. Cultural directions with all orders.

O. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

Giant flowering from very best strain obtainable; these are twice transplanted and are sure of giving satisfaction. Early planting will make best plants for next Christmas.

	100	1000
Bright Christmas red.....	$3.50	$30.00
Bright pink .....	3.50	30.00
White with red eye.....	3.50	30.00
Pure White .....	3.50	30.00
Salmon (Wonder of Wandsbek)...	4.50	40.00

250 or more at 1000 rate.

Send for 1914 complete catalogue.

Roman J. Irwin, 71 W. 23d St., New York.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers to date. Hardy, field-grown plants from seed sown in August, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong with extra good roots; just right to transplant for blooming in May. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, $4.00 per 1000. Cash with order.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

Paper Pots and Dirt Bands

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

The above was taken from the following report in the Market Growers' Journal January 1, 1914, page 6.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots.....	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots.....	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27th, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading.

There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-hand, Pa., 45,000 2-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2 1/2-inch dirt bands and 6,000 5-inch dirt bands.

Greenhouse Heating.*TROUBLE WITH TWIN BOILERS.

We have two tubular boilers; No. 1 is twelve feet long and forty-eight inches in diameter; No. 2 is fourteen feet long and forty-eight inches in diameter. They connect with a 4-inch overhead feed. There is a globe valve in the stand pipe of each, so as to run each independently, and there are swing ells to take care of the expansion when both are used at the same time. The return main, 2-inch, runs in front of No. 1 to No. 2. At the far side of No. 1 a tee is placed; from this the 2-inch pipe is continued horizontally for about two feet; in this pipe a check valve is placed. Then there is a drop to below the lower tube and in this vertical pipe is placed a gate valve; then the pipe enters the boiler head near the hand-hole. No. 2 is connected in the same way; there is a passageway of about six feet between the boilers. The piping is run on the gravity system.

Either boiler works satisfactorily when run separately, but when both are under steam No. 1, the smaller, takes all of the return water, so as to make it necessary for a man to be there continually to close and open the valves. We have about 13,500 square feet of glass. I am enclosing a rough diagram. Either boiler alone has taken care of the place, but we think it more economical in severe weather to run them in battery. A pressure of thirty pounds is the limit. E. E. H.

It is not possible to get a perfectly clear idea of just how the piping is arranged, either from the sketch or the description, but if the return pipe is carried above the water level in the boiler it would be possible for all of the return water to go to boiler No. 1 and still there might be no trouble with the return water when only one boiler is being fired. To correct the difficulty so that the return will feed both boilers, drop the return so that it will be below the water level. There may be some other complication, not indicated in the inquiry, but this is the only one which seems to account for the difficulty.

iron construction or the all-cypress style of house? Of course I do not expect you to attempt to give the exact prices, but only to give me a general idea as to the difference in cost. Is it customary in glazing greenhouses to bed the glass in putty and also to use putty on the outside, along the sashbar? Is it better to butt the glass or to lap it? The size of the glass is 16x18. J. D.

To heat the greenhouse described to 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees above zero, run the 4-inch pipes so as to give one flow and two returns on each side of the house. To supplement the 4-inch piping, run a 2½-inch flow pipe about four feet below the ridge to the farther end of the house, and there connect it with two 2-inch pipes running in each direction on the walls back to the boiler, or four 2-inch returns.

The cost of the two forms of construction depends largely upon the style of iron frame used and the extent to which it is employed. Ordinarily the iron-frame construction does not add more than twenty-five per cent to the cost of a commercial greenhouse. This would include gutters and posts. When a full iron frame is used the cost might be fifty per cent higher than when cypress only is used. Of course the relative expense of the two styles of construction varies somewhat in different parts of the country.

Glass should always be bedded in the putty, and the putty should never be used over the glass in greenhouses. Lapped glass is almost universally used, as, compared with butted glass, it makes a warmer and drier roof and requires less care in sorting and laying the panes.

ONE NEW JERSEY HOUSE.

I am building one greenhouse, 21x 160 feet and five feet high to the eaves. It is a detached house, running east and west, and has twenty-four inches of glass in each side. The east gable is glass; the west end adjoins the workroom and boiler shed. The boiler pit cannot be more than about three feet deep. I wish to keep a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees when the outside temperature is at zero. Here, in central New Jersey, the temperature sometimes falls as low as 3 to 5 degrees below zero, but not often. What size of boiler will be needed and how should the piping be arranged in the house, for best results?

E. C. M.

To heat the house described to 60 degrees in zero weather, it will be well to use a twenty horse-power boiler, although this will be large enough to heat another house of the same size. For radiation put in a 2½-inch main about three feet below the ridge and connect this with ten 1¼-inch pipes as returns. Part or all of these should either be on the walls or under the side benches. Unless the lower end of the returns is three or four feet above the water level in the boiler, either a steam trap or pump should be used to elevate the water.

E. A. LIPPMAN

MANUFACTURER OF
GREENHOUSE SHADING

No. 6 High Street, MORRISTOWN, N. J.

AFTER twenty-five years' experience in Greenhouse work, with Lord & Burnham Company, in the glazing and painting department, I am convinced that what is most needed in this line is a good shading, and I am pleased to advise you that I have the real thing, which I am sure you will find to be just what you are looking for.

This shading is beneficial to the painted wood, as it does not contain any gasoline or naphtha which would destroy the paint. In addition, it is beneficial to the glass also, for you will find that when the shading is removed the glass retains its former brilliancy.

As to its application, this is a very easy matter. It can be either sprayed on or put on with a soft brush. For real good work, however, I would recommend the use of a soft brush.

Another advantage of this shading is that when it is no longer needed it can be removed without any difficulty, leaving the glass, as before stated, with its original brilliancy.

I am making this up in gallon cans, in three shades—light green, light blue and pure white. When ordering, kindly mention the color desired.

I trust that you will kindly favor me with a trial order to prove its worth, after which I have no doubt whatever but that you will continue its use.

The Market.

Market conditions show practically no change from those of the last few weeks. Carnations are still plentiful and they are in fine condition. Roses are much more abundant than they were and the cut is exceptionally good. They are coming into crop and it is a great relief to be able to supply the trade with first-class stock. Violets are holding out well and are arriving in quantity. There is also an abundant supply of sweet peas, the quality of which is unsurpassed. The Butterfly sweet peas, especially, are in prime shape and are having a good sale.

Bulbous stock is showing up nicely and the quality is such that a ready market is always found for the entire cut. American Beauties are the only flowers that are scarce, but it is hard to secure enough good stock of these to take care of even a portion of the orders.

Various Notes.

John Zech, of Chicago, was in this city March 18. He took his daughter to Chicago with him. Miss Zech had been ill at the Sacred Heart sanitarium for some time.

The Market.

Business is good and each florist seems to be getting his share of it. Flowers are in good demand for all occasions and the supply is about equal to the demand. Roses and carnations are good, but the cut is a little off. There will be a good supply of plants of all kinds for Easter. Some lilies and hydrangeas will not make it, owing to the continued cold weather and small amount of sun. Considerable forcing will be necessary unless the weather becomes warmer. Bulbous stock, however, will be in strong. E. L. F.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We have been treated to some balmy weather and also to some wintry weather during the last week, and business has been like the weather, extremely uncertain, but as a general rule it has been fair. Roses and carnations are moving slowly. Violets are unusually plentiful and are sold at any figure to dispose of them. Sweet peas are also moving slowly, with a plentiful supply. White carnations were scarce during the early part of the week, being in demand for coloring.

It is to be regretted that this practice has become universal among florists, to willfully destroy the beautiful flower merely to satisfy a short and small demand. A so-called green carnation looks anything but natural, and does not deceive anyone. They should be classed with artificial flowers. Let some one take up the sword against this barbarous practice and see if it can not be stopped by appealing to the finer sense of the flower-buying public.

Asparagus and smilax are quite scarce; anything that looks like either is assured of a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Berman & Miller, formerly of the Liberty Florists, will shortly open a retail store in the basement at 308 West Saratoga street.

Arthur Richmond, of East Erdman avenue, is cutting some fine Dorothy Gordon and Enchantress carnations.

E. A. Seidewitz had a fine plant decoration in his store window on North Charles street.

St. Patrick's day was well observed by the florists, nearly all the stores displaying green carnations and shamrocks.

L. L. Lancaster, formerly with Lohr & Fritze, on Frederick road, has left this city to accept a position at Edgely, Pa., with a well known rose growing firm there.

H. J. Quick is cutting some good carnations and sweet peas. W. F. E.

The Market.

With Easter looming up on the florists' calendar, trade is already showing a marked change for the better. Heavy orders for the large churches are helping out a great deal. Hyacinths, tulips and daffodils are moving fast and at a somewhat better price than a few weeks ago. Carnations, roses and sweet peas are likewise going well. Some of our florists are falling short of lilies necessary to fill the orders already placed for Easter altars and Easter weddings.

Fancy cut flower baskets are sure to sell well this year. They are handsome and attractive, as arranged in the florists' windows. Funeral work is keeping a few of our florists quite busy.

The Flower Show.

The flower show held in the Mayer building during the last week proved a great success. The trade exhibit was a drawing card, with beautifully decorated booths. Our florists spent much valuable time and energy in their exhibits. Those taking part in the show were: John V. Laver, Chas. Offerle, Miles R. Miller, Erie Floral Co., Hill Floral Co., Schluraff Floral Co., Baur Floral Co., Trost & Steinfurth and Fred Hermann.

Financially the whole affair, given for the benefit of the Humane Society and visiting nurses, was a success throughout. It will net the societies approximately $4,000. M. W. M.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The local florists are now feeling the extreme quiet of a Lenten season, coupled with other more local conditions which have tended to make the month an unsatisfactory one from a business standpoint. Prices have dropped considerably; where 5 and 6 cent roses predominated last month, a good quality can now be had at 3 cents. Gardenias can be had at any price, although the best still bring $3 per dozen. Jonquils are holding up and are bringing $2 and $2.50 per hundred. Snapdragon is $2 per dozen. Carnations are plentiful and are moving fairly well at from $10 to $30 per thousand. There has been an overstock of violets and sweet peas, with the result that these could be had at $5 per thousand and less.

Various Notes.

William F. Gude returned March 21 from a conference of the S. A. F. at Boston. He left March 22 for the New York show, accompanied by Adolphus Gude, George H. Cooke, and Fred H. Kramer.

Fred H. Kramer is cutting some of the best Richmond roses seen in the local market. These have stems four and five feet long, plenty of good foliage and large flowers. While the Queen

IF YOU ONLY KNEW what a good cave the METROPOLITAN PATENTED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the cove is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. ## Scotch Soot

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

The Market.

The heaviest snow storm that has visited this city for thirteen years came Thursday night, March 19, after two weeks of bright, spring weather. The heavy fall of snow alarmed the florists; it was nine and one-half inches on the ground, and was so wet and fell so fast that it piled up to the depth of eight inches on the greenhouses. With the exception of A. J. McNutt's violet house, however, no injury resulted.

Business has been exceptionally good for Lent, and far ahead of last year. All cut flowers except red and white carnations have been in good supply. Sweet peas of all kinds are plentiful and of good quality. The supply of orchids exceeds the demand.

Various Notes.

Forty sashes in Addison J. McNutt's violet house, 20x200, caved in under the weight of the heavy fall of snow last week. Mr. McNutt is cutting fine pink snapdragons and Kaiserin roses, and reports trade good and stock in full supply.

C. L. Baum is enjoying a fine business and ships large quantities of stock to neighboring towns. He will have a fine stock of blooming plants for Easter, and will force 6,000 valley. He says the pips are opening up finer than ever this year.

Funeral work and flowers for social affairs have kept Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno busy.

A. H. Dailey finds business good, but stock short. He has a good deal of landscape gardening work on hand, and reports ornamental shrubbery in heavy demand.

Weather conditions have hampered the Howell Nursery Co. in getting out orders, which are numerous now.

D. R. Mayo is busy night and day getting out the seed orders for spring planting. Flower seeds are in strong demand.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, Ind., a former Knoxville man, was a visitor here last week. He now owns an up-to-date plant of 75,000 square feet of glass in Knightstown.

Other recent visitors include: W. C. Lawrence, of the Lawrence Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga.; Clem. Kamphaus, of the Herrlinger Paper Co., Cincinnati; John Bubach, of Schloss Bros., New York, and Ross E. Adgate, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh.

The President Points Out Some Cypress Points

If I could take you out to our lumber piles and throw down a few boards and point out blue sap and white sap in the cypress, and then show you cypress with the shakes and cypress that is pecky, and then take you into our wood-working mill and show you the kind of cypress we were actually running through the machines for our greenhouses—you would then begin to appreciate why a really good, enduring house such as we make is worth every cent we charge for it. You would begin to get a line on the kind of materials we use and the careful way they are handled.

You would see us cutting out and discarding sappy parts. You would see our foreman refusing to pass rough milled parts. You would see on every hand inspections of materials from the raw to their finished state. You would finally begin to wonder how we can build so good a house for so reasonable a price.

Put this down in your memory box that entirely sap-free "cypress" is next to impossible to buy nowadays, just as is knot-free or clear pine. The only way you can get sap-free materials is to get materials from cypress with their objectionable sappy parts cut out.

There's no greenhouse concern in this country today that sells materials whose cypress is any freer from sap than ours.

The other day I overheard our wood working foreman saying I am a regular crank about the cypress that goes into the materials. He has got the right idea about me and I'll see to it that he keeps his idea right.

If you want a house built of materials made by men with the right idea back of them—from one end of the house to the other—we have a notion you will find a talk with some one of us to your advantage. Write us. Or "we go anywhere for business."

N early Easter, such as that of 1913, is not a guide by which plans for a late Easter, like that of 1914, can be laid by rule of thumb. Those who keep notes of the business from year to year, as every florist should, must bear in mind that Easter last year came March 23, while this year it is three weeks later. It has been remarked that three inches does not make much difference on the end of a fishpole, but that it would count for a good deal on the end of a man's nose. It is the same way with those three weeks; they would not mean much to Weary Willie, but to a florist in the spring of the year they mean a great deal.

Late for Plants.

For certain classes of plants Easter this year is too late. Of all the Easter stock, the bulbous plants really are the most important of all. Even in the high class stores more tulips, one way or another, are sold than any other plant. Hyacinths once cut a big figure, but they have rather dropped out in recent years. With Easter coming as late as April 12 the tulips, hyacinths and daffodils will be pretty well out of bloom and the supply of low priced pot stock will be much less than last year. Azaleas, too, have been retarded with difficulty and many a florist is just now awakening to the fact that he will have less than his usual supply of plants; it's much easier to have a good supply of plants for a March Easter than it is for one in the middle of April.

The difference is one of large importance, because of late years the sale of low priced pot stock has increased much faster than have the sales of other lines. The flower stores that have been selling this stock in quantity at recent early Easters will find it necessary to fill the gap.

Of course there will be increased supplies, this Easter, of such high priced plants as roses. Growers are finding out how to do these better and better and the present season seems to have been a specially good one for them, but the average run of flower store does not have the trade to take the costly plants. Even the finest stores, except, perhaps, in one or two of the largest cities, find the call running more and more to the things that can be sold at moderate prices.

A Cut Flower Easter.

If low priced bulbous plants are not abundant at a late Easter, the date favors the cut flower growers. Even if a grower has not timed his crops perfectly, he is almost sure to be cutting heavily in April. Consequently there is no possibility of any general shortage of cut flowers and prices will be such that the retailer can push cut flowers, charging about the same prices he has asked all winter and working with about the usual margin of profit.

Sales Records Invaluable.

Every florist should have a record of what he sold last year, and for years before. Memory is a most unreliable guide for business transactions and it is next to impossible for a retailer to gauge his requirements except by referring to an accurate record of what he has sold, and what he has failed to sell, in the past. This, bearing in mind special conditions that affect this season and make it different from last one, will afford a fairly dependable index to the character and quantity of stock that can be sold next week. Last year's record will show a number of items that may not be available in equal quantity this season, and it will show what substitutes are necessary. Bearing in mind the general increase in sales since last year, a study of the records of previous Easters will make it possible for a buyer to estimate pretty closely what he will be able to sell this Easter, so that he will neither heavily overbuy nor run short.

A record of the Easter sales should show what was bought, what was paid for it, what the quality was, how it sold, the items that were overbought and the ones that were short, also the daily sales for the week, and the state of the weather. Weather is a big factor. One may be stuck solely because it rained; it may be safe to buy as much again. Another important point is the daily sales. The effort should be to increase the early sales. Practically everybody has all he can jump to the day before Easter, but the preceding days are lighter and lighter, until the average store's record shows the Monday preceding Easter as not giving even an average day's business. A study now of the year-old sales records, including orders and tickets, will afford many a hint as to how the sales in the early, quiet days in the week can be increased.

HANGING BASKETS.

In this issue of The Review there are two novel Easter baskets. The one on page 37 is simply a willow hanging basket stained dark green, with its liner planted with lilies, cyclamens and ivy. The man who made up one of these last Easter as a sample found it was a good seller. The other is a wall pocket, useful only as a decoration, but salable for the reason that the florist's customers frequently have blank wall spaces where such a novelty fits in as well as it does on the wall of a flower store. Southern jonquils were used for filling the pan of the wall pocket shown on page 50, with light blue ribbon.

EASTER DELIVERY.

It is to be hoped that the late date of Easter this year, while not generally considered as in the interest of the trade, will prove of advantage in the matter of deliveries; there should be little danger of frost and the laborious and expensive wrapping of plants will be saved. But it does not pay to take too many chances. The extra wagons should have tight bodies, so that a cold snap will not work serious harm. Otherwise, much heavier wrapping will be necessary.

The extra delivery facilities demanded at a holiday deserve as careful consideration as any of the problems connected with doing a month's business in three days. The average florist has as many deliveries to make Saturday afternoon and Easter morning as are made in all the rest of the month and unless the delivery system is carefully planned the work is likely to become what is technically described as "all balled up." The man who has some greenhouses back of the store has a tremendous advantage at Easter. No better system has ever been devised than the one modeled on that used in the big express office or department store. It will pay any retailer who has trouble with the shipping department to visit and study the systems used where large numbers of packages go out daily.

The department store has the city divided into sections, with a wagon for each. The florist who has a large number of deliveries for Easter morning will do the same thing. He may not have a different wagon for each route, but may send the same wagon on more than one trip. When the department store's packages come to the shipping room the shipping clerk has the floor marked off, in some cases with permanent partitions and sometimes merely with paint, with a space for each trip each wagon is to make. Each package as received in the shipping room goes direct to the proper space on the floor.

Consequently, when the wagon is ready to start everything that has reached the shipping room is ready to go on the wagon; nothing is left behind. If the florist adopts this system, it will obviate the exasperating special trips to deliver the one plant that did not get on the right wagon; the problem then will be to get the orders put up before the wagon starts.

In case there is a wagon for each route, so that all can start at once, the florist will bend his efforts to getting all the orders put up at the hour at which deliveries are scheduled to start. If the wagons, or some of them, are to make two trips the florist will sort his orders and put up the orders first that go on the early route, putting up those for the second route while the wagon is out on its first trip.

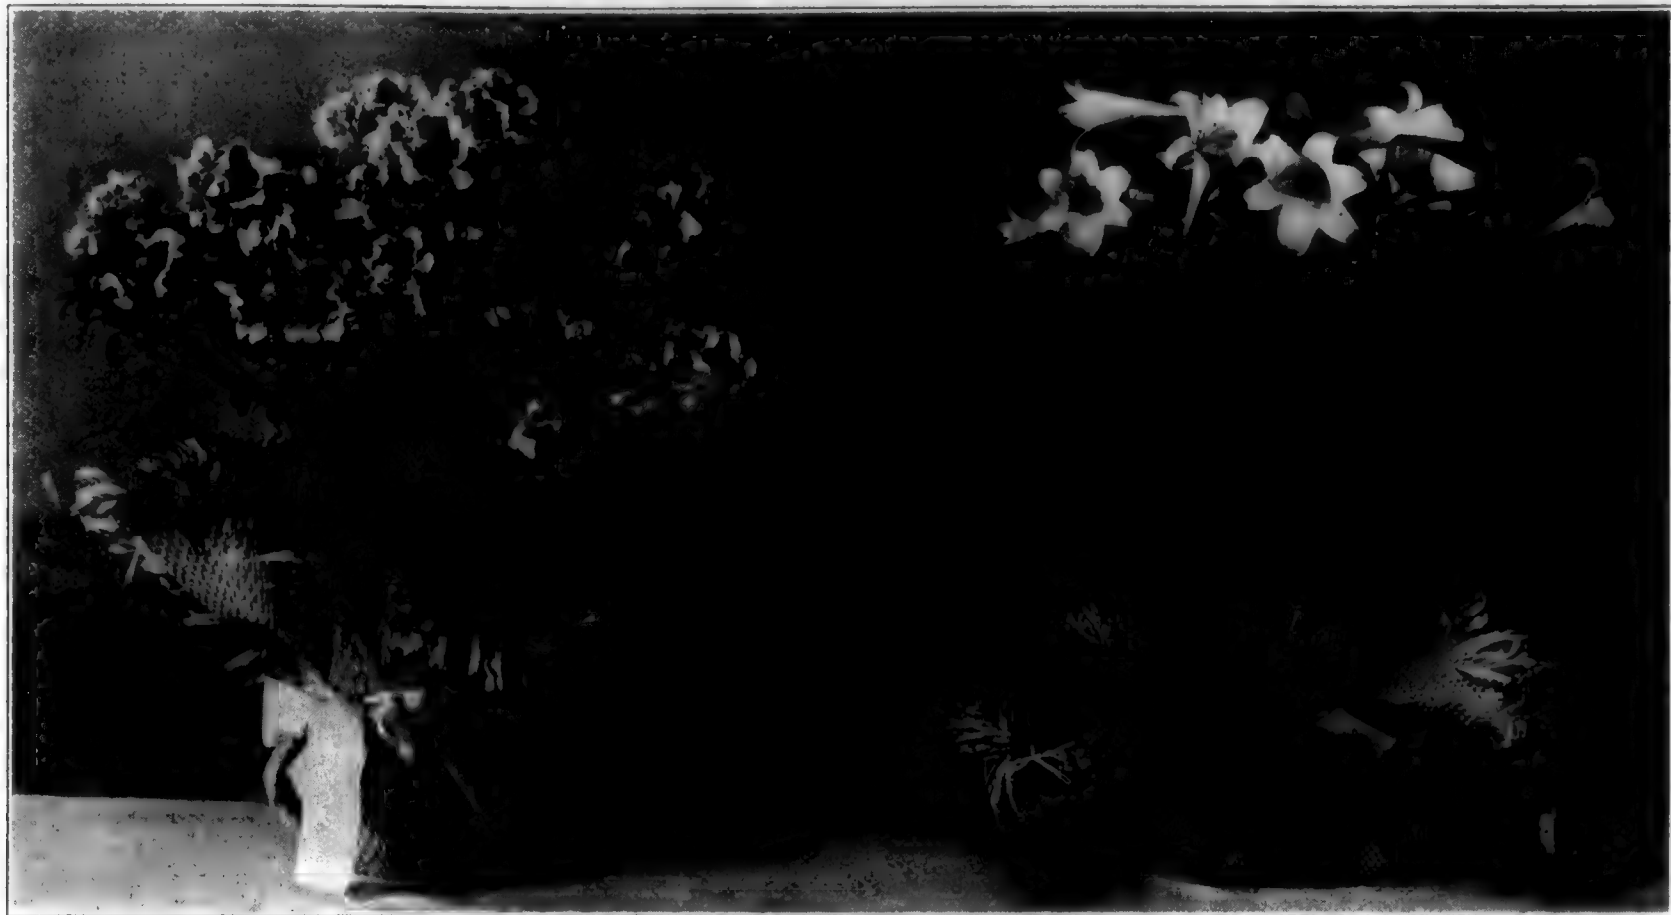

With greenhouses at his back, the florist's preparations for delivery are greatly simplified. A bench can be set apart for the plants that can be delivered Saturday, and others for Sunday's deliveries, and space in the greenhouse probably can be provided, as the plants move out, so that the sales for each section of the city for each day can be set away by themselves. The man who has neither greenhouses nor unused floor space back of the store, as is the case with many of the stores in city business blocks, can do little more than tag his plants "Sold" as his customers pick them out and then work up his deliveries as he gets the chance.

BASKETS OF CUT FLOWERS.

This will be a basket Easter. One of the notable features of the trend of the trade in the last year has been the increase in the use of baskets. Tremendous quantities will be used this season. And not all of the Easter baskets will contain plants—far from it. In the last few months enterprising retailers have found it possible to sell hundreds upon hundreds of small baskets filled with cut flowers, the selling price including the basket, ribbon and flowers. The Easter sales of these will be enormous and the retailer can arrange just the character of basket that his trade will take; it is possible to make up baskets so large and containing such choice stock that nobody but the wealthy can buy them, but it is equally possible to arrange small, inexpensive baskets of cut flowers to sell for not more than a dollar or two. From $2 to $3 has been found a popular price.

There is Nothing that Sells Better than Tulips when Appropriately Dressed for the Easter Shoppers.

Here are the Two Great Staples, the Bread and Butter, the Meat and Potatoes, of our Easter Diet.

In this issue there are a number of illustrations of baskets of spring flowers sold in a leading Chicago store last Easter. It has been found that the only way to sell these baskets is to have a display of them in the store; the clerk cannot sell except by sample. Fill a window with them and see to it that the flowers are kept fresh. Fill the window early in the week and scatter similar baskets through the store. Then let everybody take orders for delivery Saturday afternoon or Sunday morning. By getting a sufficiently early start a big bunch of good business can be accumulated before the real Easter selling begins.

THE EASTER PLANTS.

A florist who likes to believe he does a first-class business would as soon think of going out to lunch without his hat as of delivering the Easter plants without a pot cover.

Of course the greater part of the Easter plants will have the red clay covered merely with crepe paper, and another large part will have a little tonier spring suit in the way of Porto Rican and chiffon mats. But the swell plants this year will either have basket pot covers or will be shifted from the red pots and planted in the tin liners with which practically all baskets now are fitted. An occasional plant will be sold in an earthenware jardiniere, but not many—this is the day of the basket.

A great many stores still will sell considerable numbers of the big baskets of mixed plants, an excellent example of which is shown on page 47. Five years ago such arrangements were the acme of the Easter plantman's art and, large or small, each basket contained a number of varieties of plants. Today, however, the style is different, for floral fashions change, the same as fashions in skirts or bonnets. This season there will be, in most cases, only one variety of plant in a basket. If it is lilies, lilies alone will be used, and a rose plant in a basket will not have its beauty hidden by crowding around it a lot of miscellaneous stock. As the quality of the Easter plants has improved, the tendency has been toward giving each specimen a chance to show its merit. Just as the landscape man puts his choice tree out on the lawn where it can be seen, so the retail florist puts his fine plant in a harmonious receptacle and brings it out from the mass so that, like a true specimen, its beauty can be seen and appreciated.

When it is said that the fashion is to plant only one variety in a receptacle, it is not meant that the bottoms of the plants should be left bare. If the receptacle does not cover, as usually is the case where crepe papers or mats are used, it still is the proper thing to use small ferns for low plants, or primulas and similar plants for taller growing ones. Nothing detracts more from the appearance of a first-class plant than to have the soil bare. If the soil is not obscured with such stock as is used for fern dishes, then by all means cover it with green sheet moss, the greener the better.

Ribbons will be used this season more extensively than ever before. A year or two ago it was chiffon that everybody wanted, but the vogue for chiffon has run its course. Not that chiffon will be dropped, for large quantities of it still will be used, but the tendency is toward ribbon, and the better grades of ribbon.

PUTTING UP THE ORDERS.

After the close of business, the night before Easter, the retail flower store becomes a hive of industry. Taking the orders is only one detail of the Easter work. True, if the selling is not successful the night work will be light, but it seldom happens that a flower store does not find it necessary to keep its force working far into the morning hours of Easter.

Some of the big stores do business enough each day so that they can carry help to divide the work. Certain employees are salesmen only, while others put up the orders the salesmen take, and another department attends to delivery, each crew being responsible only for its own part of the work. In the swell store the Easter rush is handled without much change in the ordinary daily routine, but such stores are not numerous. The average store requires the sales person to put up the orders taken, and to see to their delivery. In such a store the closing of the door Saturday night before Easter is the signal but the preceding days are lighter and lighter, until the average store's record shows the Monday preceding Easter as not giving even an average day's business. A study now of the year-old sales records, including orders and tickets, will afford many a hint as to how the sales in the early, quiet days in the week can be increased.

HANGING BASKETS.

In this issue of The Review there are two novel Easter baskets. The one on page 37 is simply a willow hanging basket stained dark green, with its tin liner planted with lilies, cyclamens and ivy. The man who made up one of these last Easter as a sample found it was a good seller. The other is a wall pocket, useful only as a decoration, but salable for the reason that the florist's customers frequently have blank wall spaces where such a novelty fits in as well as it does on the wall of a flower store. Southern jonquils were used for filling the pan of the wall pocket shown on page 50, with light blue ribbon.

EASTER DELIVERY.

It is to be hoped that the late date of Easter this year, while not generally considered as in the interest of the trade, will prove of advantage in the matter of deliveries; there should be little danger of frost and the laborious and expensive wrapping of plants will be saved. But it does not pay to take too many chances. The extra wagons should have tight bodies, so that a cold snap will not work serious harm. Otherwise, much heavier wrapping will be necessary.

The extra delivery facilities demanded at a holiday deserve as careful consideration as any of the problems connected with doing a month's business in three days. The average florist has as many deliveries to make Saturday afternoon and Easter morning as are made in all the rest of the month and unless the delivery system is carefully planned the work is likely to become what is technically described as "all balled up." The man who has some greenhouses back of the store has a tremendous advantage at Easter. No better system has ever been devised than the one modeled on that used in the big express office or department store. It will pay any retailer who has trouble with the shipping department to visit and study the systems used where large numbers of packages go out daily.

The department store has the city divided into sections, with a wagon for each. The florist who has a large number of deliveries for Easter morning will do the same thing. He may not have a different wagon for each route, but may send the same wagon on more than one trip. When the department store's packages come to the shipping room the shipping clerk has the floor marked off, in some cases with permanent partitions and sometimes merely with paint, with a space for each trip each wagon is to make. Each package as received in the shipping room goes direct to the proper space on the floor.

Consequently, when the wagon is ready to start everything that has reached the shipping room is ready to go on the wagon; nothing is left behind. If the florist adopts this system, it will obviate the exasperating special trips to deliver the one plant that did not get on the right wagon; the problem then will be to get the orders put up before the wagon starts.

In case there is a wagon for each route, so that all can start at once, the florist will bend his efforts to getting all the orders put up at the hour at which deliveries are scheduled to start. If the wagons, or some of them, are to make two trips the florist will sort his orders and put up the orders first that go on the early route, putting up those for the second route while the wagon is out on its first trip.

With greenhouses at his back, the florist's preparations for delivery are greatly simplified. A bench can be set apart for the plants that can be delivered Saturday, and others for Sunday's deliveries, and space in the greenhouse probably can be provided, as the plants move out, so that the sales for each section of the city for each day can be set away by themselves. The man who has neither greenhouses nor unused floor space back of the store, as is the case with many of the stores in city business blocks, can do little more than tag his plants "Sold" as his customers pick them out and then work up his deliveries as he gets the chance.

BASKETS OF CUT FLOWERS.

This will be a basket Easter. One of the notable features of the trend of the trade in the last year has been the increase in the use of baskets. Tremendous quantities will be used this season. And not all of the Easter baskets will contain plants—far from it. In the last few months enterprising retailers have found it possible to sell hundreds upon hundreds of small baskets filled with cut flowers, the selling price including the basket, ribbon and flowers. The Easter sales of these will be enormous and the retailer can arrange just the character of basket that his trade will take; it is possible to make up baskets so large and contain ing such choice stock that nobody but the wealthy can buy them, but it is equally possible to arrange small, inexpensive baskets of cut flowers to sell for not more than a dollar or two. From $2 to $3 has been found a popular price.

In this issue there are a number of illustrations of baskets of spring flowers sold in a leading Chicago store last Easter. It has been found that the only way to sell these baskets is to have a display of them in the store; the clerk cannot sell except by sample. Fill a window with them and see to it that the flowers are kept fresh. Fill the window early in the week and scatter similar baskets through the store. Then let everybody take orders for delivery Saturday afternoon or Sunday morning. By getting a sufficiently early start a big bunch of good business can be accumulated before the real Easter selling begins.

THE EASTER PLANTS.

A florist who likes to believe he does a first-class business would as soon think of going out to lunch without his hat as of delivering the Easter plants without a pot cover.

Of course the greater part of the Easter plants will have the red clay covered merely with crepe paper, and another large part will have a little tinner spring suit in the way of Porto Rican and chiffon mats. But the swell plants this year will either have basket pot covers or will be shifted from the red pots and planted in the tin liners with which practically all baskets now are fitted. An occasional plant will be sold in an earthenware jardiniere, but not many—this is the day of the basket.

A great many stores still will sell considerable numbers of the big baskets of mixed plants, an excellent example of which is shown on page 47. Five years ago such arrangements were the acme of the Easter plants man's art and, large or small, each basket contained a number of varieties of plants. Today, however, the style is different, for floral fashions change, the same as fashions in skirts or bonnets. This season there will be, in most cases, only one variety of plant in a basket. If it is lilies, lilies alone will be used, and a rose plant in a basket will not have its beauty hidden by crowding around it a lot of miscellaneous stock. As the quality of the Easter plants has improved, the tendency has been toward giving each specimen a chance to show its merit. Just as the landscape man puts his choice tree out on the lawn where it can be seen, so the retail florist puts his fine plant in a harmonious receptacle and brings it out from the mass so that, like a true specimen, its beauty can be seen and appreciated.

When it is said that the fashion is to plant only one variety in a receptacle, it is not meant that the bottoms of the plants should be left bare. If the receptacle does not cover, as usually is the case where crepe papers or mats are used, it still is the proper thing to use small ferns for low plants, or primulas and similar plants for taller growing ones. Nothing detracts more from the appearance of a first-class plant than to have the soil bare. If the soil is not obscured with such stock as is used for fern dishes, then by all means cover it with green sheet moss, the greener the better.

The average store requires the sales person to put up the orders taken, and to see to their delivery. In such a store the closing of the door Saturday night before Easter is the signal for starting the heavy work of the day. Everybody gets busy putting up orders, probably turning them over to a shipping clerk, someone who knows the town and who has been placed in charge of the delivery.

The illustrations on page 53 are typical of the scene in an average flower store Saturday evening before Easter. In one picture the full force is busy as it only skims on the surface of the problem.

minds one of Thomas Carlyle's remark about electricity. He said: "We call that fire of the black thunder-cloud electricity, and lecture learnedly about it, and grind the like of it out of glass and silk; but what is it? What made it? Whence comes it? Whither goes it?" Even the wizardly Edison cannot yet answer Carlyle's questions. It has been decided that electricity is probably not a subtle fluid, as it was formerly defined, but a subtle something else, which will not keep still long enough to be properly photographed or submit to any other process of identification, but nevertheless will work for us "like lightning" if we provide proper channels for it to work in. It is practical experiment that has brought electricity under control, and practical experiment can also do much in controlling and improving the fragrance of flowers, though we cannot, to save our lives, tell just what fragrance is.

PELARGONIUM EASTER GREETING

I receive so many letters asking how to propagate Easter Greeting pelargoniums that I thought the subject might be of general interest. The number of inquiries might lead one to think that there had been trouble in propagating it, though that seems scarcely probable when one takes into account the vigor of the plants. Whether the propagation of over 50,000 plants from eight rooted cuttings in just three years can be called an achievement, I can not say. Personally, I should say not in the case of Easter Greeting.

In reply to an inquiry for stock of Easter Greeting, a pelargonium specialist said: "Yes, I have Easter Greeting, but, owing to its persistent blooming, I find that it is difficult to propagate it rapidly." Now, I think that is the trouble, if there has been any trouble. In the case of many plants, when a flower stem appears behind a leaf there is no growth bud, and this is true of Easter Greeting. I have reason to believe, too, that some growers have forced it both in the stock bench and in the cutting bed—an unwise thing to do with any plant. Pelargo-

FRAGRANCE—WHAT IS IT?

Why do certain varieties of flowers have an odor, and others not any? For instance, some varieties of carnations are strongly scented, while others have no fragrance whatever. Is it a law of nature that cannot be explained? Any reply will be gratefully received.

S. J.

It is a relief to know that S. J. will be grateful for "any" sort of answer, as this answer is not likely to be especially definite or decisive. S. J.'s own words, "a law of nature that cannot be explained," is perhaps as applicable to the case as anything that can be said. The question can be partly answered, no doubt, by stating that flowers, like all plants and animals, are subject to the law of natural selection or the survival of the fittest. Other things being equal, fragrant flowers are the fittest and therefore have the best chance of survival. To be more explicit, flowers owe their existence largely to their fragrance; their fragrance not only wins the favor and protecting care of the human race, but also attracts the insects that aid in propagation. Hence the tendency is for fragrant species of flowers to increase in numbers, while odorless flowers tend gradually toward extinction, except in cases where their exceptional beauty, or their great hardiness, or some other quality compensates for their lack of perfume. But that theory, though it has the sanction of evolutionist science, is really about as much of an evasion as an explanation,

They say that fragrant substances seem to produce their effect by emitting a vapor, or aërial or extremely minute particles, and yet they acknowledge that "a few grains of musk or other strongly odorous substance will scent an apartment for a long period, and at the end of the time no loss of weight can be detected by the most delicate experiments."

The question under consideration re-niums delight in a cool, dry atmosphere, particularly at night.

I have found Easter Greeting easy to root, and the smallest cutting will quickly shape itself into a symmetrical little plant. I have never seen any other class of plants grow so evenly and with so few culls as these. They delight in a rich, sweet soil, settled firmly in potting and kept rather on the dry side. Water always at such a time that the foliage will become dry by night; be especially careful about this in dark, cloudy weather. If geranium growers would watch this point carefully they would escape much trouble.

EXPOSITION COMMITTEE MEETS.

At the request of G. A. Dennison, chief of horticulture of the Pan-Pacific exposition, a meeting of the advisory committee which he had previously appointed was held Friday, March 27, at the Grand Central Palace, New York, at the time of the flower show. There were present: John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists; M. C. Ebel, secretary of the National Association of Gardeners; A. F. J. Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society; Benj. Hammond, secretary of the American Rose Society; Harry A. Bunyard, secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society; Chas. H. Totty, of the National Flower Show committee, and G. A. Dennison.

Mr. Dennison outlined the object of the meeting, requesting the committee to recommend some one to be superintendent of floriculture. The committee organized, with Charles H. Totty as chairman and John Young as secretary. Mr. Totty was elected chairman to serve until the close of the exposition. The name of William Plumb, of New York, was recommended to Mr. Dennison as the unanimous choice of the committee. Later in the day Mr. Dennison made the appointment, and William Plumb will be superintendent of floriculture and serve until the close of the exposition. He will enter upon his duties at once. John Young, Sec'y.

PAPER WHITES IN BENCHES.

I have recently had some discussion about Paper White narcissi and I would like to have the views of some of the subscribers on this matter. If you will kindly publish the following, with such answers as you may be able to get, I shall appreciate it very much:

Has anyone ever grown Paper White narcissi by planting them directly on benches? I would like to have the experience of someone who has forced this popular narcissus in this manner, instead of flattening them up and putting them outdoors and bringing them in as needed. I am told that it is not necessary to flat them at all, but put them directly in the benches. This of course would occupy the benches for a longer period of time, but where this is no consideration would the flowers be just as good as those grown in flats?

MIND YOUR EASTER PLANTS

CAREFUL HANDLING NEEDED.

Weather a Big Factor.

Weather conditions have been such for the last three months that growers have been kept guessing and on the anxious seat. The severely cold weather which continued through February and March, accompanied, as it was, by much cloudiness, has made the exact timing of plants a more than usually difficult proposition, and the man who can get all his plants in flower is to be congratulated. With an Easter coming as late as April 12, it would naturally have been thought that it would be a simple matter to time plants to a nicety, but all such calculations have been rudely upset, and only by the use of more fire heat than usual has it been possible to flower many plants, and it is a safe bet that with increased firing the cost of production for nearly all Easter stock has been considerably higher than in 1913, when Easter came three weeks earlier. We naturally expect mild weather in April, but it is never safe to bank on anything of the sort and, while we may be favored with clear skies, we may, on the other hand, have bitter winds, accompanied by sleet or snow, which will make careful wrapping of all plants a necessity. It is well, therefore, to be fully equipped with an ample supply of stakes, twine and paper. The demand for plants is so great that it is impossible to accommodate them in the average store, and it is, in many cases, found necessary to hire a vacant store for a week or ten days before Easter.

The Lilies.

Lilies are, and probably will continue to be, the most popular of all Easter plants. It is an advantage to do any making up at least a week before Easter. Large pots or pans often are used, and in them are placed six, twelve or even more plants. Shake or wash the soil away pretty clean, but save the roots; work the soil in well about them, soak with water and cover the surface with sheet moss. Be careful in overhauling these lilies not to bruise the flowers; also be sure all pollen masses are removed. This latter duty must be religiously attended to daily if clean flowers are wanted.

Plants which are a little early can be retarded in a cold house or cellar, but be sure they are not allowed to become dry at the root. Any that are late, and on which the buds are not yet showing any white, should have the hottest house at one's disposal. Give little air, even in the daytime; spray and water freely, keep a moist atmosphere and, if heat and moisture can do it, the flowers will open. Be careful to remove all pollen masses before doing any spraying, and remove the plants with expanding flowers to cooler quarters.

In sending out lilies, if the weather is mild it is better not to cover the flowers at all, for no matter how carefully these may be packed, there is always danger of some being cracked or bruised.

Giganteum continues the Easter lily par excellence. With many it is dwarfer than ever this year, especially in light, modern houses. Some have not yet discovered that to lengthen the stems the house must be darkened, either by shading the glass or by covering the sides of the house with cloth shades. This makes a decided difference to the length of the stems.

The Roses.

Roses are, probably, next to lilies, the most popular of Easter plants. The advent of the ramblers made them rise wonderfully in favor. Colored varieties have for some years sold far better than white ones, pink being the favorite shade. That old-time leader, Crimson Rambler, now occupies a minor position, the pinks, such as Tausendschon, Dorothy Perkins, Newport Fairy, Lady Gay and others, being in much greater demand. Tausendschon undoubtedly has the largest call of any Easter pot rose today. American Pillar sells well, as do such pink baby ramblers as Mrs. Cutbush. Nicely flowered hybrid perpetuals, if they can be timed to have one or two flowers open, are good sellers, especially such sorts as Frau Karl Druschki, Magna Charta, American Beauty, Mme. Gabriel Luizet and Ulrich Brunner. Then we have such varieties as Clothilde Soupert, Wedding Bells, Hiawatha, White Dorothy and many more almost too numerous to name. The baby ramblers are deservedly popular, as they can be sold at a much lower price than the tall ramblers, which need tying and training.

Be sure all the roses are well supplied with water. Unless the weather is cold and windy, it usually is safe to stand some of these outside the store. Always endeavor to elevate at least one plant of each variety in your display in order to show its individuality.

The Azaleas.

The selling season for azaleas practically ends with Easter, so an effort should be made to have as many as possible of the plants in bloom. A few of the favorites at this season are Prof. Wolters, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Ver-væneana, Schryveriana and Niobe. Here again the pinks are the sellers, in preference to whites and reds.

Azalea mollis is a somewhat more fragile subject than A. Indica for shipping purposes, but for trade near home its delightful colors make it extremely popular. Shades of orange, salmon, apricot, gold and cerise are particularly pleasing. Flowers of these azaleas should not be too much opened out, and when sending them to customers instruct whoever is delivering them to handle with care. For filling boxes and hampers these azaleas are delightful and are sure to please critical buyers.

The Genistas.

While genistas have a large Easter sale, they are among the plants which cannot be carried long in the store. Even if carefully watered, they soon turn to dull yellow and begin to fall. Therefore it is unwise to mass a lot of these together, as we often see done; rather keep a smaller number on hand and get fresh supplies frequently. Also, it is well to bear in mind that genistas must have an abundant water supply. Some other plants wilt badly and can be freshened up, but in the case of genistas if they are once dried out they may almost as well be thrown on the rubbish heap, as many flowers will never freshen up and others will soon commence to fall. The smaller sizes of genistas, in 4-inch to 6-inch pots, will be found quite salable.

The Hydrangeas.

While the old Hydrangea Otaksa never was a great favorite at Easter, it being a much better seller at Memorial day, the advent of the new French hydrangeas has once more brought them into the front rank of Easter subjects. These plants are more graceful in habit and far more floriferous than H. Otaksa, being obtainable also in quite a number of beautiful shades. Plants in 6-inch pots easily may carry a dozen or more heads; some in 7-inch pots are now seen with eighteen to twenty-four heads each. A few of the best are: Radiant, beautiful rich pink; Mme. Mouillere, pure white; La Lorraine, bright pink; General de Vibraye, rich rose, and Bouquet Rose, bright pink. It is safe to say that the grower or retailer who is without these French hydrangeas this season is sadly behind the times. They were one of the sensations of the New York show last week and a complete revelation to many who had persisted in the belief that nothing could beat or equal H. Otaksa. The last named is far from obsolete, but many venture the prediction that several times as many of the French varieties soon will be sold as of the good old Otaksa. These are plants which will last splendidly in the dwelling; all they need is an ample water supply, and always tell purchasers to attend to this.

Ericas and Acacias.

Ericas and acacias are two great favorites among hard-wooded plants. This season, owing to Easter being a little late, acacias will be fewer than usual, but a fair number of A. armata and A. armata pendula will be procurable. Be sure the acacias are not too fully opened before Easter; the flowers soon turn brown, and once they become discolored it is difficult to remove such flowers and render the plants salable.

In common with all hard-wooded plants, acacias and ericas must never be allowed to get dry at the roots; a bad drying out may mean not only spoiled flowers but dead plants. Erica melanthera still is to be seen in fine condition; then there are nice plants of E. persoluta alba, persoluta rosea and codonodes. The small sizes sell remarkably well. E. melanthera is really a wonderful variety. It was to be had in fine flower for Thanksgiving and Christmas, and yet plants kept cold are in perfect condition for Easter.

Bougainvilleas and Metrosideros.

Bougainvilleas and metrosideros have a fairly good Easter sale. Neither have flowers of a particularly attractive form or coloring, but there always is a sale for a moderate number of odd shades of color or fantastic form. Both have splendid lasting properties and can be depended on to give purchasers full value for their money if intelligently cared for. As specimen plants in windows or stores, both these plants are be sold at a moderate price. It packs up easily and there is little fear of injury from careless handling. Queen Alexandra, with its beautiful peach pink spikes of flowers, is of a color much in demand for Easter, and more of it is to be seen this year than ever before. Remember that these spiræas are decidedly thirsty subjects; one watering a day is not sufficient, and it is well to provide saucers for them. Never mind if some water stands in the saucers; there is not much danger of the plants becoming stagnant and losing foliage, as in the case of marguerites or hydrangeas.

Dutch Bulbous Plants.

Usually it has been an easy matter to flower Dutch bulbous plants for Easter by simply standing them on a bed of coal ashes in a good coldframe, laying board shutters over such plants as are well opened in order to retard them. The weather last month, however, has upset all such calculations, and fire heat has been necessary in some sec-greatest favorite of all. Hyacinths in pans always meet with a good sale, the pink, pale blue and white being more in favor than the red and dark blue. None of these bulbs, if grown cold, will need any supports. Hyacinths, however, if at all drawn, must have a short stake to each spike or they are liable to bend over and break. All Dutch bulbs can be stood in a cool place. Outdoors is all right if it is not too frosty.

Rhododendrons.

While there always has been a good sale for rhododendrons at Easter, since the coming of the large-flowered and trussed Pink Pearl and its delicate pink companion, White Pearl, which, by the way, is not pure white, as might be thought from the name, they have risen surprisingly in favor. In fact, there are not yet enough of these two varieties to supply the demand. The trusses are so immense that a Pink Pearl carrying six or eight makes a more impressive show than one of the ordinary hybrids with double that number. No one who keeps an at all up-to-date store can afford to be without these rhododendrons. The question is sometimes asked, Can these be planted outdoors later and are they hardy? They are not hardy, and it would be necessary to lift and store any leftovers in a cool cellar through the winter. No matter how well they may grow after forcing, they will fail to set many flower buds the first season. Most of the other rhododendrons are fairly hardy varieties, but, of course, need protection during the coldest months.

MECHANICS HALL IS HIRED.

Following the meeting of the S. A. F. board of directors at Boston March 17, Mechanics building has been leased for the August convention. This is the largest building in Boston, with three floors available, giving a ground area equal to the needs of the largest trade's display in the history of the society. It is the same building in which the second National Flower Show was staged, in 1911.

BOSTONIANS BUSY.

Since the board of directors of the S. A. F. met in March the Bostonians have been busy with their preparations for entertaining the society in August. Plans for the convention garden are well under way and the prospect is that this will be made an even more, conspicuous feature than was the case at Minneapolis, although it cannot be located adjoining the convention hall, as was possible last year.

desirable. Do not mix them with other plants; keep them severely by themselves. Bougainvilleas will show up well with a base of white flowers, and so will metrosideros, but if they are associated with pink the clashing of colors will be most distressing.

The Spiræas.

Spiræa Gladstone is, perhaps, the best of the white-flowered spiræas, or astilbes, for Easter. It is an inexpensive and easily grown plant, and can tions to have the plants in season. Of course the cooler all these bulbous plants are grown the stockier and more salable they will be. Dutch bulbs, whether they be in pots or pans, always have an immense sale, purchasable, as they are, at a comparatively low price. The leading favorites in narcissi still are double Von Sion, Golden Spur and Victoria, with smaller lots of the short trumpet varieties. In tulips, Rose Luisante, Murillo and Keizerskroon are popular, the double Murillo being the

Advertiser who failed to keep faith with Review readers, at this paper's complaint, gets prison term at hard labor

TWO years at Joliet." It was Judge Kenesaw M. Landis who spoke, in the United States Circuit court at Chicago March 28, and his words closed the incident of August Miller, La Grange, Ill.; Albert Frei, Pittsburgh, and Fred Klein, of Colona, Pa., whose real name is August Pajonk.

The charge against Pajonk was using the mails to defraud; his mistake was in not keeping away from The Review.

Over the names of Albert Frei and Fred Klein, another trade paper printed Pajonk's ads after they had been refused by The Review, but his arrest, indictment and conviction was solely on evidence placed in the hands of postoffice inspectors by The Review.

After Pajonk had disappeared from La Grange, Ill., and been located by The Review as operating under the name of Frei at Pittsburgh, the postoffice inspector at Chicago sent two men to the Pennsylvania city to make the arrest. They there found evidence that the man also was operating a matrimonial swindle, but the case presented by The Review was so clear that no use was made of anything else. Pajonk's great mistake, therefore, was in not keeping faith with the readers of The Review.

The Trial.

When Pajonk was arrested he had a sum of money on him that the United States Commissioner permitted him to use to employ an attorney and to obtain bail. But Pajonk jumped his $5,000 bail bond in Pittsburgh; when wanted, his attorney could not produce him. Knowing a number of banks in which Pajonk had trifling balances, the postoffice people watched these until they found their man, rearrested him and brought him to Chicago.

At the trial, March 27, Pajonk pleaded guilty to the charge. The judge was the man who attained world-wide celebrity by assessing the famous twenty-seven-million-dollar fine against Standard Oil and Pajonk undertook to mitigate the severity of his sentence by telling a long story about some florist he could not name who had told him how to build up a nice, profitable and easy business by taking orders and then buying the stock to fill them with. The court was incredulous. Enough evidence was introduced to show the extent of the man's operations, and their duration. The judge took a day to look over the papers and March 28 fixed the punishment at two years in the Joliet penitentiary.

Pajonk's Story.

Pajonk's story is that of a florist who found easy money too great a temptation. Apparently Pajonk, who perhaps is better known under the name of August Miller, had intended doing an honest business; he advertised and took orders with the idea of picking up the stock to fill them. But it was not so easy or so profitable as it had promised to be—the temptation was great, with a pocketful of other people's money and no home ties, to pull out, change names, and try it over again somewhere else. Pajonk did not have strength to resist.

Pajonk knows the trade thoroughly. He made just one mistake; he overlooked the zealotry with which The Review guards the integrity of its advertising columns. That was what got him the term in the penitentiary.

When Pajonk slipped he rented a postoffice box at La Grange, Ill., just outside of Chicago, under the name of August Miller. He sent a small classified ad to The Review, accompanied by cash, for publication over the La Grange address. Apparently he kept faith with all who answered that one. But the stock offered in a second ad two weeks later was not so easy to supply. When a Chicago florist dropped in at The Review office and remarked that he had been at La Grange to buy some of the advertised stock and couldn't locate the advertiser, it was enough to arouse suspicion. There doubtless are many honest florists whose places of business are not easily found, but if they are not known in their home towns they have to show The Review before they can use its advertising columns. Consequently, the ad never appeared a second time.

Pajonk Moves On.

An investigator from the office of The Review went to La Grange. The postmaster had received no complaints. There was not the slightest evidence that anything was wrong; only no August Miller could be found. The postoffice inspector was asked to keep an eye open, and in a few days reported that the mail was no longer being taken from lock box 54 at La Grange. "Miller" had skipped.

Then a complaint came that afforded a basis for action. A florist wrote that he had sent an order for geranium cuttings, accompanied by a postoffice money order; a typewritten acknowledgment had been received, stating that the stock would be shipped in a few days, but it hadn't arrived. Investigation showed that the money order had been cashed. But the man had vanished.

Enter Albert Frei.

Having had a taste of easy money Pajonk wanted more of it, and tried for it. This time the name used was Albert Frei and the address was 2509 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh. Although written with a typewriter and signed on the machine, the communications of Miller and Frei were so similar in appearance as to leave no doubt they were written by the same man. Consequently, The Review did not print the Frei advertisement. Although the advertisement promptly appeared in another paper, The Review turned its order over to the postoffice inspectors. Right on the heels of it there came another advertising order, this time signed Fred Klein, Colona, Pa. The Klein letter was so like the others in appearance that the postoffice inspectors started at once for Pittsburgh. The arrest followed in due course. The Fred Klein advertisement appeared in another trade paper, even after "Klein" was in jail on The Review's complaint.

EASY MONEY LEADS THIS MAN TO HARD LIFE

Investigation showed that Pajonk was widely known among florists in western Pennsylvania, where he had worked for a number of them before removing to Chicago. He is well informed on the trade. What was most surprising was the evidence found in his room that he also was operating a swindle, using the names Miss Anna Klein and Miss E. Schwartz. These fictitious persons advertised in various German papers, for husbands. When a nibble was received a photograph of a good looking young woman was sent. If the game worked, money was asked so that the lady could come on to be married. Because of the vigilance of The Review, and the promptness of the postoffice authorities, Pajonk's operations were cut short.

The Review does not undertake to decide the merits of controversies between reputable florists who disagree as to the quality or value of the stock they buy or sell, but it is keenly watchful to see that all those who use its advertising columns conduct their business with its subscribers in such a manner as to be above suspicion.

FACTS ABOUT BULB BUYING.

A Holland Grower Addresses Britishers.

Writing to a horticultural trade paper published in England, a Holland bulb grower makes certain comments that will be of interest if not of value to American buyers:

"The complaint is often made that Dutch bulb growers, who solicit orders from the trade, do not fulfill their obligations properly, particularly with regard to quality, and that they often send out something much inferior to that promised to the buyer.

"To those who know the bulb district, the reason for this procedure is quite plain. Although bulbs nowadays are sold in ever-increasing quantities all over the civilized world, and comparatively little is left over at the end of the seasons in Holland, competition among growers is keen, and the number of exporting firms in comparison with the size of the trade far too great. As a result, English buyers receive visits from Dutch bulb growers every day during the spring months, and in order to gain an advantage over their competitors these salesmen hold out all sorts of inducements to tempt the buyer. For instance, one man grows a specially fine stock of a certain article, which often means that he does not grow it at all, but speculates in it because he expects the price to come down; another quotes a very low price for mammoth bulbs, etc., etc.

"Through all this the English seedsmen and florists are inclined to believe that there is a constant overproduction of bulbs in Holland, or that the cost of producing bulbs is next to nothing, and that by placing orders with several Dutch growers, selecting the articles which each grower offers cheapest, he is really buying at lowest cost the best produce, because according to their own words the low quotations are made to get rid of large stocks.

"And yet he is in many cases quite wrong. He thinks that he has done his buying in the most economical and sensible way, but the Dutchman is more sensible even; a low price serves as a bait to get orders for better paying articles, and without a substantial order for the latter he will supply a quality in accordance with the low price.

"With the exception of some orders from customers who know conditions in Holland better, or who have been taught by experience that dealing with too many Dutch growers is far from satisfactory, the majority of orders which reach the Dutch bulb growers nowadays from England have been skimmed of all cream, and form a sad contrast with the more general orders received from continental Europe and America, usually at much better prices, because these countries buy their bulbs much earlier in the spring, when competition has not reached the high water mark of May and June, and also because in more distant countries even large buyers do not split up their orders between more than two or three houses they rely upon. Moreover, where cases and packing may seldom be charged in England, it is the rule to charge them elsewhere, and few customers are so ever ready to claim small allowances from accounts for a few bulbs decayed in transit or under-sized as the English buyer, even if the consignment as a whole is satisfactory.

"The consequences are that more and more of the best quality bulbs which Holland produces pass English shores or travel eastward, while English orders are filled with what is left over, always excepting such orders as are given by firms who insist on having the best quality, and who are willing to pay the price it is worth and who do not threaten the Dutch seller not to give an order, or only a small share, if he does not compete with a dozen of his countrymen.

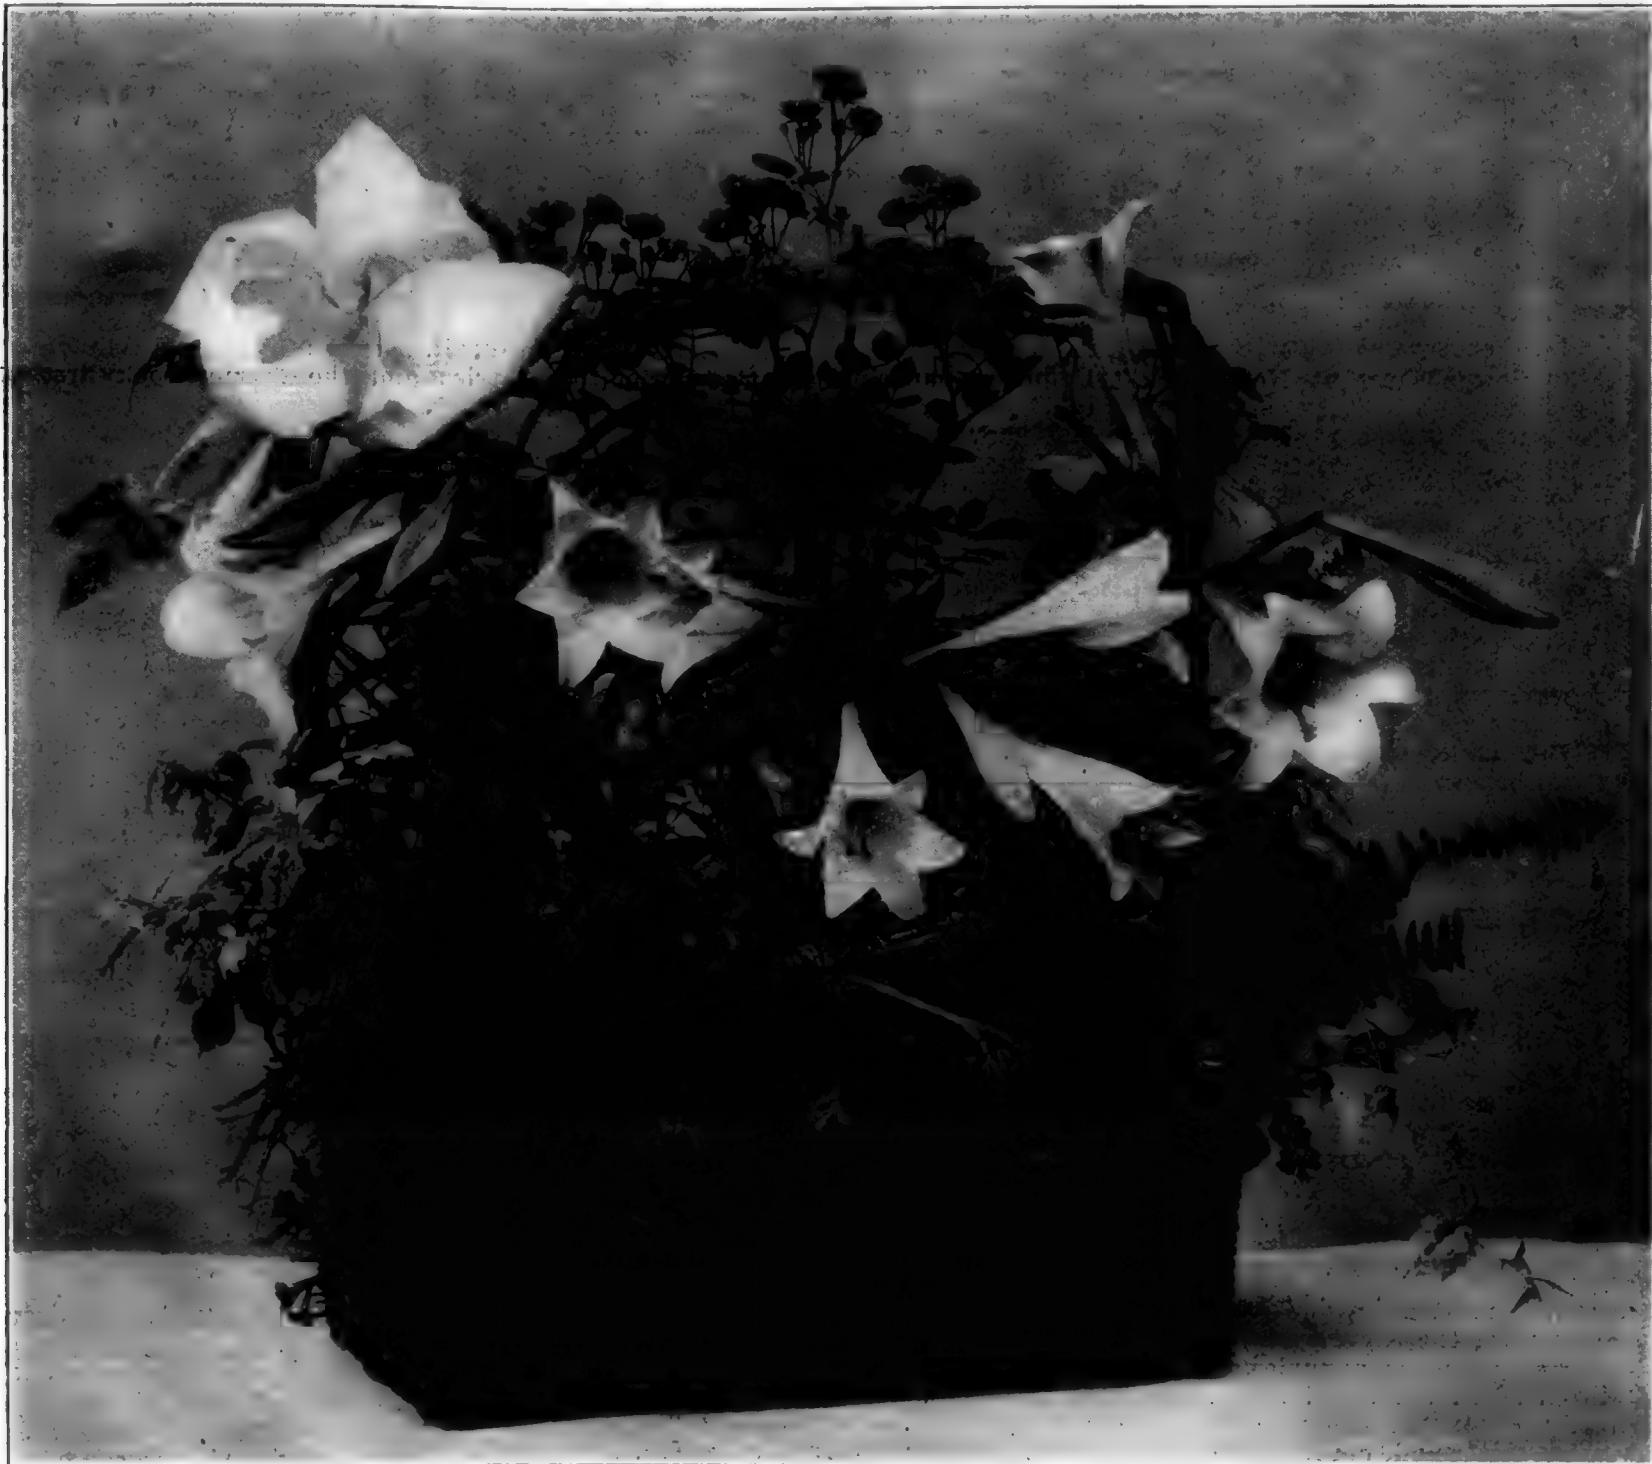

"Now, how is it that some English firms always get excellent bulbs from Holland, and others are often wondering why they get one article good, the next indifferent, and another decidedly poor?

"Dissatisfaction with the English buying methods has been pretty general among Dutch bulb growers, and is growing every year, and it is often incomprehensible how a buyer can claim the best quality, true to name, when he places a skeleton order at minimum prices.

"At the present time, with a growing love for flowers in other countries which have rapidly grown in wealth and population, best quality bulbs find a ready market every year. There sometimes is a surplus in a few lines and always will be, but mostly of an inferior grade, and more often the better grades are not available in sufficient quantities. Moreover, the cost of labor, land and materials has increased considerably in Holland as everywhere else, and the grower is more determined than ever to make a profit on every case of bulbs he sends out."

FRAME FOR CYCLAMENS.

How deep should a frame be to grow cyclamens in during the summer months? I intend to raise the sashes on the frames. What kind of manure or fertilizer should be used to grow cyclamens successfully? A. A. K.

A frame twenty-two to twenty-four inches deep at the back and sixteen to eighteen inches in front will give sufficient headroom for any cyclamens you care to grow. This allows ample headroom when the sashes are closed. If, however, you want to keep the sashes tilted the whole time the plants are out, you need only allow fifteen inches at the back and ten inches at the front.

Do not use any commercial fertilizer in the compost. For a final potting one-half loam, one-fourth leaf-mold, somewhat flaky, and one-fourth old, thoroughly decayed cow manure, with some sharp sand and fine charcoal added, will make an excellent compost. When the plants are well established in flowering pots, an occasional light top-dressing of fertilizer will be found beneficial. C. W.

GROWING FUCHSIAS.

I have some fuchsias which were shifted into 4-inch pots about three weeks ago. They are about ten inches high. Can I get these to bloom about May 1? As I have never grown fuchsias before, will you please tell me how to handle them, including advice as to shading them, the kind of fertilizer and soil to use, their night temperature and whether to keep them wet or dry? L. S.

Keep the plants in a light, sunny house. After the early part of May, but not earlier, some shade is beneficial. You may get some flowers open by May 1, but they will be much better for Memorial day. Fuchsias like a fairly rich soil; one containing some fine bone in addition to old cow manure grows them well. Pot quite firmly. When they are well established in their blooming pots, water them twice a week with liquid cow or sheep manure, or give them a top-dressing of fertilizer once in ten days, at the rate of a teaspoonful to a 6-inch pot. A night temperature of 46 to 50 degrees suffices. The plants must never be allowed to get dry; they need an abundant supply of water. C. W.

SECOND CROP FROM STEVIA.

If stevia which bloomed on the bench for Christmas is left, will it bloom again later in the year; for instance, at Easter or Decoration day? When should stevia cuttings be taken to produce fine plants for Christmas cutting? H. & C.

Any flowers you would get on the stevia would amount to practically nothing. If the plants which flowered for Christmas were cut down, they should yield a good crop of cuttings now, which should be placed in sand at once. If the plants are not cut back, you may have a week or two to secure cuttings of sufficient size. C. W.

A SOD-CUTTER WANTED.

Can any brother florist inform us where we can purchase a sod-cutter to be drawn by a horse, one that will do the work? Horn Flower Co.

THE AFTERMATH OF THE BIG SHOW

PLANS MADE FOR EXHIBITION IN 1915

So successful was the big flower show at New York last week that before it was scarcely half over plans were started for another on the same extensive scale next year. Those who doubted the feasibility of such a large undertaking without the backing of the national body had their apprehensions more than dissipated by the solid success, as an exhibition and as a financial undertaking, that grew more and more apparent as the week advanced. To give the public the full advantage of the exhibition, the show was continued a day, Sunday, March 29.

The show drew a great many trade visitors from the neighboring states and not a few from a distance, and to them the many exhibits of more than ordinary merit had a strong appeal. The retailers' displays had great interest for the general public and the publicity derived from this source should bring no small results. The close of the exhibition did not need to be awaited before the undertaking could be finally pronounced a complete success, as it was at the banquet Thursday night.

The Banquet.

One of the most enjoyable events in connection with the show was the New York Florists' Club's annual banquet, held March 26 at the Hotel Astor. The beautifully decorated dining hall was filled with the usual enthusiastic and happy crowd of the club's members and friends. The menu was thoroughly enjoyable, the speeches brief and practical and nearly every one of the 250 who attended the banquet remained for the dancing.

President Duckham was toastmaster.

Addresses were delivered by Geo. A. Dennison, superintendent of floriculture of the San Francisco exposition; T. A. Havemeyer, for the New York Horticultural Society, and F. R. Pierson, for the exhibition committee, of which he was chairman. Patrick O'Mara spoke for the New York Florists' Club and on behalf of the club presented W. H. Siebrecht, retiring president of the club, with a handsome silver tea service. Mr. Siebrecht eloquently and gratefully responded.

The banquet was a fitting addition to the week's festivities, and Chairman Nugent and his committee are congratulated by all because of its success. F. R. Pierson's address was an enthusiastic appreciation of the show's success and of all who had contributed to it. Especially did he commend the retail florists who had shown their practical interest, and the announcement that the exhibition would be an annual affair and that arrangements had already been made for 1915 met with enthusiastic approval. The president of the Grand Central Palace Co. also spoke eloquently of the show and of his company's cooperation in its behalf in the future.

Flowers for the tables were donated by E. Horan, P. J. Smith, John Young, Walter Sheridan, Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, Guttman & Raynor, Traendly & Schenck, W. Ford, Young & Nugent, H. E. Froment, George Siebrecht, A. L. Young & Co., James McManus, M. C. Ford, Walter Siebrecht & Co., Paul Meconi and William Kessler.

The Rose Groups.

On Thursday the rose groups were set up. From 500 to 1,000 cut blooms were to be used, covering 200 square feet. A. N. Pierson, Inc., and the

F. R. Pierson Co. made the only entries and the former took first place and the latter second place. These groups, staged in the center of the building, on the first floor, were a whole show in themselves. Hadley, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney and American Beauty were the varieties that attracted especial admiration.

The Carnation Groups.

The splendid group of carnations staged by the Cottage Gardens Co., with Matchless, Beacon and Ward, took first prize. Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, won second prize, using Philadelphia, and S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, took third place, with an assortment of new and old varieties. These groups, containing from 1,000 to 1,500 blooms and covering 150 square feet of floor space, were most artistic in arrangement and drew constant admiration from the visitors.

The silver cup for the most artistic vase of 300 or less carnations was won by the J. M. Gasser Co., of Cleveland. The vase was arranged with splendid effect.

In the class for artistic vases of 150 or less carnations arranged by private growers, first place was taken by P. B. Widener, of Ogontz, Pa., with an admirable vase; Geo. Mason, of Tuxedo, N. Y., was second and T. Aitchison, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., won third prize.

The awards in the carnation classes open to private gardeners were:

Twenty-five blooms white—Geo. Mason, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., first, on Alma Ward; Winthrop Sargent, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., second, on Wodenethe.

Twenty-five blooms flesh pink—D. G. Reid, Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., first, on Enchantress; Miss G. A. Bliss, New Canaan, Conn., second, on Enchantress.

Twenty-five blooms light pink—Miss

Twenty-five blooms crimson—Geo. Mason, first, on Harlowarden.

Twenty-five blooms variegated—Geo. Mason, first, on Benora; Miss G. A. Bliss, second, on Benora.

Collection of six varieties, twelve of each—H. M. Tilford, Tuxedo Park, first; John Wanamaker, second.

Sweet Peas.

The sweet pea classes, staged on Wednesday, brought forth some fine blooms. The awards in the classes open to commercial growers were:

One hundred sprays bicolor—A. Harvey & Sons, Brandywine, Summit, Pa., first; John M. Barker, Morristown, N. J., second; H. Manitch, Englewood, N. J., third.

One hundred sprays white—John M. Barker, first; A. Harvey & Sons, second.

One hundred sprays red or crimson—John M. Barker, first; A. Harvey & Sons, second.

One hundred sprays light lavender—A. Harvey & Sons, first; John Barker, second.

One hundred sprays dark lavender—John M. Barker, first; H. Manitch, second.

One hundred sprays pink or salmon—John M. Barker, first.

One hundred sprays orange—A. Harvey & Sons, first.

One hundred sprays any other color—John M. Barker, first.

Fifty sprays orange—A. Harvey & Sons, first.

For the largest and finest display of winter or summer-flowering varieties or both—Wm. Sim, Clifftondale, Mass., first.

Collection of twelve varieties, twenty-five sprays to a vase—Wm. Sim, first.

New varieties of marked improvement over existing varieties—W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., Sweet Pea Society's certificate of merit.

Table Decorations.

There were two classes for table decorations, one in which sweet peas were used exclusively and one in which everything but sweet peas was allowed; both were for private gardeners. There were in all thirteen tables, all well done, and several admirably executed. The prize-winners for the best sweet pea table were Thos. Aitchison, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Martin Fitzgerald, of Greystone, N. Y. In the other table decoration class first place was taken by John Canning, gardener for A. Lewisohn, of Ardsley, N. Y., and second prize was won by Thos. Aitchison.

Gardeners Bowl and Banquet.

The National Association of Gardeners held its reunion Tuesday, March 24, and a bowling contest was held at Thumm's alleys, followed by a banquet in the evening. Charles H. Totty was toastmaster at the banquet and James Stuart, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., was chairman of the arrangements committee, and between the two they made it a most enjoyable affair. A number of excellent speeches made it of more than passing interest.

In the bowling contest the prize-winners were C. W. Cooley, E. Barth, T. Aitchison, Siebold, Westlake, Zerk, Brown and Richardson. Their scores were as follows:

Notes Here and There.

Worthy of special mention was the beautifully arranged group of W. B. Thompson, A. M. Johnstone, gardener. An arch of Dorothy Perkins roses filled the center at the back. In the center of the arch was a plant of schizanthus, one also being used on the sides. The group dipped down, and in front were several charming pyramids, the central one of Cattleya Schroedera and Phalaenopsis Schilleriana surmounted by a palm. At the sides were individual plants of Acacia armata pendula, with pink stocks below, and a base of crotons. At the extreme ends were clumps of Primula malacoides with a cocos as a centerpiece. This group was charmingly conceived and well merited the praise bestowed upon it.

On the opening day the antirrhinums were shown in great numbers, of grand quality. Buxton's Killarney Pink and Nelrose were noteworthy, as were also those from Percy Chubb; Mrs. E. D. W. Griswold, A. J. Loveless, gardener, and H. M. Telford.

A group of the bright pink show pelargonium, Clorinda, from O. H. Kahn, James Fraser, gardener, was quite attractive.

Of the many new French hydrangeas it is safe to say that Radiant had more admirers than any others. It is of deep pink color, and beautiful under artificial light.

Frank J. Dolansky's gardenias were so fine that they opened the eyes of even the New York growers.

The trained ivy specimens of Bobbink & Atkins were immense and made a whole show in themselves.

The California Giant carnation, shown by P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., attracted a great deal of attention, with its blooms six to eight inches in diameter.

sometimes caused by using too much sulphur to prevent mildew, but the most frequent cause of this is alkali in the water. In the latter case the discoloration is usually worst on the south edge of the benches and in any other place where the plants are liable to get too dry. The trouble in this case is usually overcome by being careful in watering, never allowing the plants to suffer from want of moisture in the soil, especially along the edge of the benches and over hot steam pipes.

HYBRID TEAS IN THE GARDEN.

[Extracts from a paper by George H. Peterson, of Fair Lawn, N. J., read before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.]

From time immemorial the rose has been the favored flower of mankind, and today its hold is stronger than ever. It was not so long ago that the hybrid tea rose was practically unknown, and in those days, in this country, we could enjoy roses outdoors practically only in June, with the exception of the more or less tender teas, which needed much care. Because of this many people became discouraged in their attempts at roses. The bulk of their plants gave flowers only in June, and often the rose bug got more of the flowers than did the grower. With the advent of the hybrid tea, however, outdoor rose growing has greatly changed, and now one may have an abundance of the most glorious roses imaginable from June to October. Fortunately, the rose bug or rose chafer is not with us after June, and in autumn one can have hybrid tea roses in his garden of even finer quality than in June, as then we have the moister weather and less hot sun, and the rose delights in a damp atmosphere.

OUTDOOR ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

The following inquiry recently appeared in The Review, over the signature of H. A. C.: "I want to plant out 100 roses for cut flowers during the summer, here in central Alabama. Will you please tell me what size of plants to purchase for quick results? Would stock from 4-inch pots be large enough? Give me the names of a few good red, white, pink and yellow varieties. What kinds would do best in our soil, which is a heavy clay loam?"

As I, like H. A. C., am located in central Alabama, my experience may possibly be of some value to him. For quick and satisfactory results I would prefer 4-inch stock to any other in the heavy soil referred to, but I would advise a good mulching of decayed cow manure during the hot summer months, and that the plants be given plenty of water.

The following varieties I have found to be the best for cut flower purposes: White—Kaiserin, White Cochet and Bride; pink—Mme. Lambard, Pink Cochet, Radiance, Wm. Shean, Wm. R. Smith, Countess of Gosford and Jonkheer J. L. Mock; red—Helen Gould, Red Kaiserin and Etoile de France; yellow—Lady Hillingdon, Etoile de Lyon and Blumenschmidt; faucy—Wellesley, Sunburst, Marie Van Houtte, Antoine Rivoire and Mrs. Dudley Cross.

FOLIAGE BROWN ON EDGES.

I am sending to you under separate cover some leaves from Double Pink Killarney plants. The leaves were burned on the edges, or sometimes just a spot on the leaves would be burned and then they would fall off while they were still green except the one burned spot. We are certain that the burning was not caused by syringing, as we have not syringed them lately. We have been feeding them with liquid manure. We shall be thankful if you can help us to solve the problem.

W. F. & S.

The browning of the edges of the leaves and the dropping of the leaves while they were still green might be due to at least three different causes or a combination of them. The falling of the leaves while they are green is usually caused by an overdose of ammonia, in the form of nitrate of soda, blood, sheep manure, or any other fertilizer containing a large percentage of ammonia. The browning of the edges of the leaves is dicates, they are originated by the crossing or hybridizing of a tea rose with one of another class; or, at least, this was the method when the hybrid tea first appeared. At that time the strong growing and hardy hybrid perpetual or remontant rose was used in crossing with the tea. By hybridizing the tea rose with the hybrid perpetual, the constant blooming qualities of the former were retained, and in addition we secured, in a large measure, the size and vigor of the hybrid perpetual class as well. Of more recent years other classes have been used; for instance, the yellow briars, and this has given us what was formerly lacking in the hybrid tea class—magnificent shades of yellow.

Strictly speaking, the hybrid tea made its advent nearly a half century ago, but of the efforts at that time practically only one variety is left us, viz., La France, a rose which is still favored because of its almost unequalled fragrance. At first, this variety was generally classed as a hybrid perpetual, and some of the Holland growers class it as such even to this day, but there is no question as to the proper class in which it should be placed.

European Growers Develop Class.

There seems to have been little done in this line until about twenty years later, when Bennett sent out some varieties, two of which, both blush varieties, Grace Darling and Viscountess Folkestone, are still largely grown. In 1891 Lambert & Reiter, a German firm, sent out Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, a lemon-white rose, which to this day in its color has not been surpassed. Unfortunately this variety is not so strong a grower as many or most of the hybrid tea class, but in quality of flower nothing more could be asked for.

About fifteen to twenty years ago two European growers took up the development of the hybrid tea in earnest; I refer to Alexander Dickson & Sons, in Ireland, and J. Pernet-Ducher, in France, and up to this time these two firms have probably sent out more new, fine varieties of hybrid teas than all other raisers combined. During the last five or six years, however, S. McGredy & Son, of Ireland, have been sending out some uncommonly fine varieties, and if they keep on as they have been doing, I predict that they will soon carry away the laurels.

New Varieties Come Fast.

At the present time new varieties are coming so thick and fast that it is practically impossible to keep track of them all. Of course, many of these will not stand the test of time, and as we already have so many known good varieties I would advise the average planter to confine himself largely to the tried varieties. The hybrid tea rose is particularly strong in the various shades of pink, and of recent years various shades of yellow and red have become abundant, but in white we are less fortunate.

In any given list there must be some varieties omitted which succeed in some soils and climates, and in the following abbreviated list I shall endeavor to give only such as are most generally successful under the most varying conditions and covering a wide extent of country.

Pink—Belle Siebrecht, Dean Hole, Jonkheer J. L. Mock, Killarney, Lady Alice Stanley, Lady Ashtown, La France, Lyon, Mme. Caroline Testout, Mme. Jules Grolez, Mme. Second Weber, Marquise de Canay, My Maryland, Radiance.

A Well Flowered Rose is the Aristocrat of Easter Pot Plants.

Red—Chateau de Clos Vougeot, Etoile de France, General MacArthur, Gruss an Teplitz, Laurent Carle, Richmond.

Yellow—Duchess of Wellington, Mme. Ravary, Marquise de Sinety, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. A. R. Waddell, Sunburst.

White and blush—Bessie Brown, Florence Pemberton, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Pharisaer, Souvenir du President Carnot, White Killarney.

In addition to the above, several of the newer varieties will no doubt be found equally desirable as soon as they are thoroughly tested.

[To be concluded.]

South Berwick, Me.—Chas. H. Monroe has added one more greenhouse to his plant.

Sewickley, Pa.—W. H. Rosenbauer has opened a branch store at Coraopolis, Pa. He will shortly add to his equipment an automobile truck for quick delivery.

WHY WE GROW.

The Review is under deep obligation to its readers, who are responsible for the steady increase in its business. Many a new advertiser comes because of the word spoken by a well pleased reader, and the circulation mounts steadily, like this:

We enclose 50 cents for a trial subscription to The Review. We are young people and have been taking the —, but —, of —, told us your Review is much better.—Ryerse Bros., Simcoe, Ont., March 25, 1914.

Honeoye Falls, N. Y.—Charles Fowler has his new Moninger house well filled with a fine line of flowering and bedding plants, and some good early vegetable plants. He is growing asters, petunias, pansies, zinnias, cosmos and all kinds of seedlings for bedding.

SOILS AND ## PLANT FOOD

BEST SOILS FOR FLORISTS.

Composition and Properties.

The various kinds of soils, although differing in different localities in their chemical and physical properties and in their mechanical condition, yet for our purpose may be classified into three groups: Clay soils, sandy soils and loams.

It is not my intention to speak of the chemical composition of soils, but rather of their physical properties, for these are the properties with which the cultivators of the soil have most to do and in which they are the most interested. The chief physical properties of soils are their absorbing power, both for water and the fertilizing ingredients of manures, their capillary power, evaporative power, and temperature under different conditions. The greater part of all mineral soils consists of sand, clay and lime. As the proportions of clay and sand vary in a soil, so the character and mechanical conditions of a soil vary.

A fertile soil always contains organic matter or humus. Sandy soils—that is, soils in which sand largely predominates—are poor moisture-holders. They have little power of holding fertilizing matters. Sand is insoluble in water or the weak acids of the soils, and so a sandy soil supplies no food to plants. But a sandy soil is easy to work. A clay soil, on the other hand, holds much water and has power to hold fertilizing matter. Much of the soil is available for plant food, but it is expensive to work.

Sandy, Clay and Loam Soils.

Sandy soils are warm soils, because they absorb the sun's heat more readily than clay soils. Great care has to be exercised in applying manures to sandy soils to prevent waste by leaching, and often special manures have to be used.

Clay soils, or soils containing much clay, are cold on account of the amount of water held in suspension, and often are benefited by draining. Clay soils have the power of holding, both mechanically and chemically, many of the fertilizing ingredients of manures. Hence there is little fear of loss of fertilizing matter from such soils.

Clay soils often contain what are termed double silicates of alumina, consisting of a combination of silica and alumina with either soda, lime, potash or ammonia. These double silicates not only act as holders of fertilizing matters, but are capable, under certain conditions, of supplying plants with food.

When a soil contains about equal parts of sand and clay it is generally of a fertile character, and known as a loam soil. It is not so hot and dry as a sandy soil, or so wet and cold as a clay soil. It has the power, too, of holding fertilizers and is suitable for growing any crop. If twenty per cent of lime is present in a loam soil it is known as a calcareous loam.

If a soil contains much lime, it is usually dry and warm, free of drainage and capable of producing good crops, especially of grass and the legumes, which include peas, beans, clover and alfalfa. Such a soil produces good root crops and good crops of vegetables in general.

Action of Moisture in Soil.

Some soils possess, in a marked degree, the power of absorbing moisture from the air. After a hot day the soil has become hot and dry. During the night this heat is given off, and the air in contact with the cooled soil becomes cool also, and gives up its vapor. This vapor is absorbed by the soil, and such soils may often bear, through a hot season, rich, green herbage, while upon other soils not possessing this power the grass and crops fail. Sandy soils possess this absorbing property least; clay absorbs much more, and peaty soils, or soils with much humus, still more. The following are the quantities of water absorbed in twelve hours by 1,000 pounds of different kinds of soil: Sand, one and one-half pounds of water; loam, twenty pounds; clay, thirty-five pounds; peaty soil, forty pounds.

Soils have also the power of absorbing oxygen and other gases from the air.

If a number of small, clean tubes be placed in colored water, the liquid will be seen to rise in them; the smaller the tube, the higher it rises. This phenomenon is called capillary attraction. By the same property water rises from a saucer in which is a plant, and through the soil to the plant's roots. A similar action takes place in the soil. If the particles of soil be large, then the passages or tubes are large. Consequently the water will not rise so high as when the particles of soil are small. Vegetable matter or humus assists the capillary attraction of a soil. Peaty soils may even hold too much, by being a perfect sponge. Clay soils possess this property in a greater degree than sandy soils. This capillary power of a soil assists in a marked degree in supplying moisture to plants, and food in solution, during long periods of drought. Subsoiling and deep cultivation help considerably this capillary action.

Evaporation from the Soil.

Some soils lose water by evaporation much sooner than others; the greater the amount of sand in the soil, the more rapidly the moisture evaporates. Sandy soils, besides having small capillary action, rapidly lose the little water they gain that way. Grass and plants, in dry, hot seasons, are soon burned up. On the other hand, during a wet season better results are obtained than on a heavy, clay soil. Frequent cultivation of the soil encourages absorption of moisture and prevents rapid evaporation. Mulching the ground assists in preventing evaporation.

All soils that retain water are said to be cold, because the sun's heat, instead of warming the soil, is used up in evaporating the water. All soils are not raised to the same temperature when exposed to the sun the same length of time. Dark soils absorb more heat than light colored soils.

The productive power of a soil depends upon that plant food which it contains, in available form, in the least proportion. A soil may be rich in lime, phosphates and nitrogen, but if it lack potash, the plant will not be healthy and may not mature. That is, any crop or plant may be partly or wholly a failure because of the lack of one prime constituent of fertility.

Constituents of Fertile Soil.

Analysis of a fertile soil showed the following amounts of the prime constituents of fertility: Potash, a little over one per cent; lime, over four per cent; soda, nearly two per cent; peroxide of iron, eight and one-half per cent; phosphoric acid, one per cent; sulphuric acid, one per cent; carbonic acid, five and one-half per cent; alumina, one and one-half per cent; ammonia, .006 per cent; organic matter or humus, twelve per cent.

A clay soil would show quite different results, having twice the amount of potash and lime, less phosphoric acid and organic matter and no carbonic acid.

The organic matter, or humus, of a soil is highly important. For a decomposition it yields nitrogenous compounds of ammonia, to be used as plant food. It also yields carbonic acid, which acts as a solvent upon the insoluble or dormant constituents of a soil, besides giving it looseness, so that air and water may pass freely through the soil, performing their fertilizing work.

A fertile soil must have not only the right proportions of plant food, but the plant food must be in such a state as to be soluble in water or weak acid. A fertile soil must have the power of holding or fixing fertilizing matters until the plants require it. The double silicates of the loam and clay soils have the power to do this. Deep cultivation, to enable the air to act upon dormant inorganic matter, adds much to a soil's fertility.

Mineral Constituents.

Iron, magnesia and sulphuric acid are necessary constituents of the soil, but if present in large quantities are injurious to plant life.

Although the inorganic or mineral constituents of the soil are so important to plant life, yet it is remarkable what a small portion is actually used to build up the plant. A cord of wood may require a team to draw it; yet, when burned—that is, when the organic matter is burned up—all that remains is the mineral, which amounts to about a bushel, that could be carried on a man's back.

One thousand pounds of dry grass or hay burned would leave ninety pounds of ash, or mineral matter. Yet, to produce two tons of clover hay there must be in the soil and available for the clover plant fifty-two pounds of potash, seven pounds of soda, thirty-five pounds of magnesia, eleven pounds of lime, twenty pounds of phosphate and eight pounds of salt.

The brassica species of plants, including turnips, kohlrabi, cabbage and cauliflower, all use up large quantities of potash, lime, soda, phosphoric acid and common salt. An acre of turnips would use over 200 pounds of potash, 100 pounds of lime, seven pounds of common salt and sixty pounds of phosphoric acid.

Peas, beans and all legumes, which include clover, vetches and alfalfa, are classed as lime-loving plants, while potatoes, beets, mangels and turnips are classed as potash plants.

Exhausted and Barren Soils.

If the same class of plants is grown continually on the same ground, it is evident the fertility of the soil is liable to be deficient in one or more important elements, and will no longer produce that species of plant. The land is said to be sick of the crop.

This condition of the soil may be remedied by thorough autumn cultivation and adding the inorganic elements taken out, or by changing the species of plant and putting back part of the inorganic matter taken out.

There is a great difference between a barren soil and an exhausted soil. An exhausted soil may be only exhausted or tired of one particular crop, and yet capable of producing good crops of some totally different plant. The problem for the gardener and farmer is to supply the balance of plant food for the growing crop, enlisting in his service the unseen forces of bacteria and gases and liquids of the soil and air.

SOIL FOR BENCHES.

We would greatly appreciate some information on preparing soil to be used for carnations and chrysanthemums when they are benched this summer. We have plenty of manure now piled, to be worked over and rotted, and we also have an abundance of good loam, but we have difficulty in obtaining good sod. Can we grow any crop in the garden that would make good sod for use in the carnation benches this summer? G. E. Y.

It is not essential that you have sod in which to plant your carnations. If you have a good, rich loam it will do well. Mix in what half rotted manure you think is needed to bring the fertility up to standard and let it lie a couple of months, when it will be ready for use.

There is no crop that would make a good sod by the time you would have to turn it under to be used for benching this summer. Oats would make enough top to make a good green manure, but the roots would not amount to much. For a sod you want to sow bluegrass and let it stand a couple of years. Clover will also improve your soil wonderfully, if you can let it stand two seasons. A. F. J. B.

WAS IT CAUSED BY GAS?

I wish you would publish the following question in The Review at your earliest convenience: What makes carnations go sound asleep? I had this trouble at two different times this winter, and it happened, in each case, a day or two after the only two cold snaps we had this winter. The first time it happened I had several hundreds of cut blooms in the jars, and when I shipped these to my commission man they were apparently all right. About three hours after shipping them, however, I received a telegram from him stating that my carnations were all sound asleep. Then I went over my houses and saw that all the flowers that were open or partly open were closing up tightly. This happened January 15 and in the next three or four days or a week I had to pick off about every bud that had shown color and some that were just coming through the calyx. I left just a few of those buds on, however, to see what they would do, and found that those few outside petals would stick together as if they had been glued, but the center seemed to be full of life, as one or two petals would grow out about two or three inches above the bud, but the bud never opened out any farther. There was not one flower or partly opened bud that escaped, from one end of the houses to the other. The trouble was not caused by fumigating, as I do not use smoke any more; I spray only. And it was not due to gas from my boilers, as I was up all night and could have detected the odor.

My plants are large, vigorous and healthy and were just recovering from this attack when they were struck a second time, while I, it might be said, was looking right at them. This happened Saturday, February 14, immediately after about three days of cold weather; then it got warmer outside. I filled my orders on Saturday morning and delivered them about 8 a. m., and every flower was crisp and bright. I came back about 9 o'clock and I saw that the flowers were beginning to have a kind of dull look. By 10 a. m. all the open flowers were asleep again. The Mrs. Ward blooms showed the first signs of harm; the outside petals became almost white, but White Perfection seemed to suffer the most. I waited a week this time before writing, to see what the buds would do, and I found that they all were lost, just as they were the other time.

Some of the neighboring growers came to see me and said that they never saw healthier plants and had never seen a case like this one of mine. I have been in the business for twenty-two years and never before saw anything like it. It does not affect the plants in the least.

There is just one question that I want to ask with reference to a possible cause of the trouble: Could you detect artificial gas by the odor, if it should happen to penetrate underground into the houses? There is a gas main that runs along the front of the houses, about eight feet from the ends of both houses. In soft weather the passer-by can smell this gas at any time. Last summer the gas company put a drip pipe right in front of my place, to drip the oil from the main, and it has leaked ever since. Of course I do not smell the gas inside the houses, but it seems strange that in both cases when my carnations were struck, it happened when the ground had been frozen hard outside. Any information you can give me on this trouble will be greatly appreciated. G. W. R.

In view of your statement of the case, I think there should not be the least doubt as to why your carnations went to sleep. As long as the ground remained in a soft state the gas escaped without getting into your houses, but when the ground was crusted over with frost the gas seeped along until it came to soft earth, which was inside your houses. I have heard of a number of similar experiences. I knew of one instance which occurred in my own city. The gas company, in making repairs, allowed a quantity of gas to escape from a small main. The wind blew the gas into the greenhouses, which contained carnations, and inside of a few hours there were thousands of open and half opened carnation blooms going to sleep. In this case the grower got a settlement with the gas company without any trouble. You should have little trouble in collecting from the gas company and in compelling them to move that "bleed" away from your houses.

As to whether you would detect the gas by the odor inside your greenhouses, that would depend on circumstances. If you are compelled to breathe a good part of the time the fumes which you say are escaping from that main, you would not be likely to detect the gas in the houses unless it were quite strong. One who is accustomed to breathing fresh air might detect it right away. The fact that your carnations are going to sleep, connected with the circumstances as you describe them, is positive proof of the presence of the gas. If the trouble came from some cause inside the place, the sleepiness would be continuous. A. F. J. B.

GERANIUM LEAVES DYING.

Will you kindly tell me what is the matter with my geraniums? I am sending you a few of the leaves. Some insect seems to have attacked them, after which they shrivel up in a few days. The plants have never looked any healthier than at present, and I can see no insects on them. G. H.

I failed to find any signs of injury from insects. Your plants may have been attacked by a fungous growth, which is often found on geraniums, both under glass and outdoors. Pick off the affected leaves. Be sure the plants get full sun and plenty of fresh air. Do not spray them overhead. Give the plants a fresh stand, so that they will not be crowded. If they are suffering at all from starvation at the roots, feed them moderately. A weak dose of nitrate of soda, or a top-dressing of fertilizer, will help to tone them up. Do not continue this feeding, or it will cause a rank, soft growth at the expense of flowers. C. W.

POTBOUND GERANIUMS.

Several hundreds of my geraniums, in 4-inch pots, have grown tall and leggy. They were pinched out about two months ago, but this did not hold them back. What can I do to induce them to throw out side shoots and to make them more symmetrical? Will pinching out at this time prevent the formation of blooms by Memorial day? How can geraniums be kept in healthy, growing condition when they are pot-bound? I ask this question because, owing to lack of room, I shall have to keep several hundred in 3½-inch pots for at least six to eight weeks. These plants are potbound at present.

H. A. K.

If you pinch the plants back at this late date they will not flower satisfactorily for Memorial day. If they had been properly pinched two months ago and not kept too crowded on the benches, they should now be in good condition. I think most of your trouble has arisen from growing your plants too close together. This has given them a legginess which will not be easy to overcome. Give the plants more space, so that they will not crowd each other, and, as they develop, give an occasional fresh stand. Keep any decaying leaves and weeds carefully removed, give full sunshine and an abundance of fresh air, and keep a somewhat dry atmosphere, with a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. In order to keep the plants in a healthy condition, some feeding will be necessary. Use liquid manure once a week. If some black soot, from soft coal, is added, it will help to keep the foliage a dark color.

C. W.

A RARE SHRUB.

It seems remarkable that the Chinese fringe tree, Chinese white fringe or Chionanthus retusa, a handsome specimen of which is shown in the illustration, is still a rare plant in European and American parks and gardens, though it was introduced to cultivation from China by Robert Fortune in 1850. At that time Mr. Fortune found it growing in a garden at Foochow, but he never saw it in a wild state. So far as I am able to ascertain, it practically disappeared from cultivation. It was introduced again from China about twenty-five years ago by Maries, the collector for James Veitch & Sons, of London, England, and the plants in cultivation today in Europe and America have been mostly distributed by this firm. The species has been found growing by later collectors and botanists in the neighborhood of Pekin and in central and southern China.

In the spring of 1892 we, the officers of the park system of Rochester, N. Y., received three plants from James Veitch & Sons, and they were placed in the nursery. Two years later, when arranging the collections of trees and shrubs, I moved two of them to the positions where they properly belonged; but it occurred to me, as this species was a rare subject and nothing was known about its sensitiveness to root disturbances in transplanting when it had attained considerable size, that it might be a wise precaution to leave one of the three where it stood in the nursery row, which I did. The two plants which were moved eventually died, but the one that was left undisturbed is now a spreading shrub, eleven feet high, fifteen feet in its greatest spread of branches and thirteen feet in its narrowest spread. The main stem is five to six inches in diameter at the base, and it branches nine inches above the ground into three stout stems. The branching habit is thin, irregular and dichotomous. The bark is dull chestnut brown, and on the older stems, toward the base, the old bark hangs loosely, somewhat after the habit of a red birch. It is this one surviving specimen that is shown in the illustration.

In the normal or average season it is in bloom about May 30, and it flowers about a week ahead of the American variety, Chionanthus Virginica. The pure white blossoms, in panicles of ten to twenty-five flowers, are produced from all the axillary and terminal buds of the preceding year's wood, and the petals are from one inch to one and one-fourth inches long. The petals are not nearly so long as they are in the flowers of the American species, but they are produced in such extraordinary profusion that the half-unfolded leaves are almost entirely hidden, as may be observed in the illustration, and the shrub is an object of great beauty when in bloom. It receives no special protection, but is growing at the foot of a gentle slope, in warm and naturally well-drained, light soil, facing south.

E. H. Wilson, the distinguished Chinese explorer and botanist, who spent two days with me here on the eve of his departure on one of his expeditions, was much surprised on seeing this specimen of the Chinese fringe tree in Highland park. Mr. Wilson said it was much larger than any he had seen in a wild state in China, or in cultivation. If any readers of The Review are growing this rare and noteworthy shrub, it would be interesting if they would state what size the specimens have attained and how they have succeeded generally. From such information as I have already secured, I infer that it is difficult to start the plant into growth, and I am of the opinion that it is a lover of limestone soil.

John Dunbar.

SWEET PEA FOLIAGE SCORCHED.

I am enclosing some sweet pea and other leaves, and some insects with which they are infested, and would like to know the cause of the drying out of the leaves. If the insect is causing this trouble, please tell me the habits of the insect and how to destroy it. I have used carbon bisulphide for fumigating, and thought perhaps this might have caused the injury.

H. F.

The sweet pea and other foliage had a scorched appearance, such as might have come from a too heavy fumigation. The insects forwarded would not cause it; they do no great amount of damage. Liming the soil freely after this crop is cleared will clean most of them out. Was the carbon bisulphide evaporated in the house or in the ground? It can be used in either way. As the fumes descend, it is necessary in fumigating a house to have the receptacles, into which the liquid is to be poured, well elevated. Half a teaspoonful poured into holes four to six inches deep, a foot apart each way, will kill soil pests and will not harm the plants. Of course, an overdose would prove harmful.

C. W.

SWEET PEA VINES DYING.

My sweet peas are all dying. They grow three feet, begin to bloom, and then the roots rot off. What can I do? The ground was changed last June, and I wonder whether it is the fault of the seed. Having ground beds, I always change the soil down to the clay, which is porous and drains well. This bed has been used about ten years and the top soil has been changed every year, but it seems to turn red, like red paint oozing out. Is it possible that this is caused by nitrates rising from the subsoil? I have used lime, but without effect.

G. O. K.

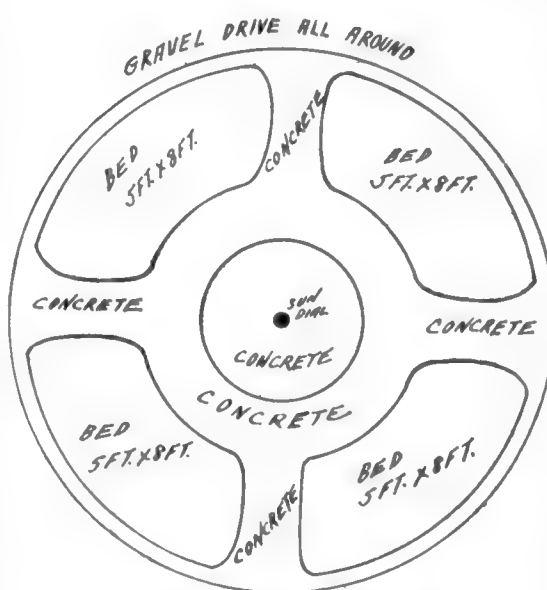

The soil is evidently sour and unsuited to sweet pea culture when they die in the manner described. Lime applied after the trouble had once started would be of no value. If you have used these beds for sweet peas for as long as ten years, and have merely changed the top soil, it is not surprising that trouble has started, for sweet peas do not, as a rule, succeed in the same soil year after year unless some other crop is grown there part of the year. One or two successful sweet pea growers who have big, wide, lofty houses never change their soil, but either grow violets in midwinter, following with tomatoes and then sweet peas for a winter crop, or merely run sweet peas and follow with tomatoes. The ground should be deeply spaded each year, and a liberal application of well rotted cow or horse manure should be applied. In your case, if the crop is a failure, I would suggest that you lime well, turn the ground over roughly, and then leave it uncropped until planting time for the peas in the early fall, unless you may wish to use the house for tomatoes or some other vegetable crop, which would give the soil a needed change and would put it in much better condition for sweet peas next season.

C. W.

SWEET PEAS BRANCHING OUT.

I would like to know the reason for my sweet peas branching out so much instead of running up strings. They are about twelve inches high and one inch apart in the rows. The temperature is from 50 to 55 degrees at night. I also have some Spencer varieties, which are about three inches apart. The soil is fairly rich.

Beds Around a Sun Dial.

H. C. B.

Your sweet peas are doing all right, and you have no cause to worry over them. It would have been better if your plants had been four or five inches, instead of one inch, apart. Plants which branch near the ground are sure to give you a wealth of flowers later. The soil must be tolerably rich for sweet peas, and just as soon as your plants show any signs of a lack of plant food, apply it either in the form of liquid manure or as top dressings of sheep manure, cow manure or bone. Do not let the night temperature go over 50 degrees; 55 degrees is too high and will make the growths weak.

C. W.

PLANTS FOR A SHADY BED.

I have a flower bed situated in an angle of the greenhouse, which is shady

I have tried pansies in it, but they did not do well. Will you suggest some annuals that will succeed there?

D. C. L.

There are no annuals which you can sow in such a bed and depend upon to flower through the summer. Pansies are, of course, only good in late spring and early summer. To keep them alive they must have plenty of water. Fibrous-rooted begonias of the Vernon and Erfordii types are persistent bloomers and succeed well in either sunshine or shade; tuberous-rooted begonias are also excellent in a shaded position. If they can have a mulch of well decayed manure and an occasional soaking of water they will do all the better.

C. W.

PLANTS FOR FORMAL BEDS.

I enclose a rough sketch of four small beds, each 5x8, around a sundial. Will you suggest how to plant these so they will look attractive all summer? We have hot, dry weather here, in central Alabama, but can water freely. The beds are now planted with hyacinths and I will plant pansies next week. I want to follow the pansies with something that will stand our hot summers. In making your suggestions, please state the number of plants, as I shall have to buy them.

F. B.

Your diagram is reproduced herewith, so that the beds may be referred to by number. Geraniums would make a good showing in your beds, but your climate would be a little too hot for them. Cannas would be the most satisfactory flowering plants you could have, as they are perpetual bloomers. They need a deep, rich soil. If beds No. 1 and No. 3 were planted with Canna King Humbert, orange scarlet with bronze foliage, and if No. 2 and No. 4 were planted with Canna Gladiator or Richard Wallace, yellow with green foliage, you would have an attractive arrangement. You could use a border of Coleus Golden Bedder around the red cannas and Coleus Verschaffeltii or Hero for the yellow beds. Use twenty-five cannas and forty coleus in each bed. The cannas will grow four and one-half to five feet high.

If lower growing plants are preferred, plant No. 1 and No. 3 with Acalypha Macaefana, forty plants in a bed, with a border of Alternanthera aurea nana, fifty plants. Plant No. 2 and No. 4 with Lyons coleus bordered with Alternanthera brilliantissima, using the same numbers of plants as in No. 1 and No. 3.

Still another combination could be had by using Vinca alba in No. 1 and No. 3 and Vinca rosea in No. 2 and No. 4, using sixty plants in each bed, with borders of Alternanthera aurea nana for the rose-colored bed and A. amœna rosea for the white one.

A NEW BRUNSWICK PLANT.

It was only about a year and a half ago, September 7, 1912, to be exact, that William Pedersen dissolved partnership with his brother and discontinued the firm so long known as W. & K. Pedersen, at St. John, New Brunswick. Shortly afterward he opened a large store at the corner of Charlotte and Princess streets, in the same city. This is said now to be the largest flower store in eastern Canada.

Range Which Supplies the Stock for W. Pedersen's Store at St. John, One of the Largest in Eastern Canada.

Last April Mr. Pedersen built two greenhouses shown in one of the illustrations, which, for individual size, are not far from being leaders in this section. One is 52x285 and the other 52x300 feet; both were built by the A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., of Boston, Mass. When he first opened his store Mr. Pedersen shipped in all his flowers from Boston; now he is able to supply all the stock from his own greenhouses. One of the houses, an interior view of which is shown in one of the illustrations, is devoted entirely to roses; the other is used for flowers and plants of all kinds. The boiler house, 40x52 feet, contains two 150-horse-power boilers. The location, as may be seen from the illustration showing the two houses, is a well protected one, and the greenhouses are sheltered from the north-west and northeast winds. With this and other advantages, it is, Mr. Pedersen asserts, the best location in the province for such a plant.

The Gateway to the South.

The last week proved a good one, so far as wholesale and retail business in this city is concerned. There was a large supply of practically everything seasonable and an active demand served to take up most of the offerings at some price.

With the warmer weather the cut of roses has increased materially and includes some fine Killarney and White Killarney, Sunburst, Ward and Richmond. Carnation receipts, too, are much heavier. Easter lilies are again in adequate supply; the cut for Palm Sunday and Easter promises to be easily sufficient for requirements. The calla market is crowded. The call for sweet peas seems to have let up somewhat in the last few days, so that even some of the best go begging. Orchids are enjoying a good call. Murillo tulips, jonquils and hyacinths are the best in the bulbous line. Quite a few small jonquils are offered. Valley is in good supply. The violet market is still poor. Other offerings include snapdragon, forget-me-not, rubrum lilies, primroses and mignonette. The green goods dealers are enjoying an active call that covers ferns, plumosus, Sprengeri and boxwood. Smilax still is rather short of needs.

The Market.

The long looked for change from a hard winter to spring has finally come to us, and the first week of warmer weather has been a welcome relief to grower and retailer. The demand for flowers and plants has kept up well during the week. The strongest seller has been the daffodil, cut and in pots, it being the color and flower for spring display week. Carnations of good grade are coming in quantity and keep pace with the demand, the best selling at $2.50 to $3 per hundred. There has been a decided increase this season in the sale of potted plants, such as the French hydrangeas, baby and hybrid roses and azaleas.

Various Notes.

Two of our florists, P. R. Quinlan and W. E. Day Co., decorated their windows especially for display week. In Quinlan's window was a large urn entirely covered with daffodils and filled with American Beauties and Easter lilies, the balance of the window being trimmed with daffodils and ferns. In Day's window was a solid background of Radiance roses, surmounted with yellow daisies and the base finished with light Murillo tulips. Upon the green flooring of the window were several baskets of various roses, altogether making a decidedly attractive display.

The flower department of the Hunter & Tuppen Co. reports handling about 10,000 daffodils during the week. They held a special sale of American Beauties for Saturday.

Your scribe made a hurried trip to Auburn one day this week and found the trade there in good shape for Easter, everyone making plans for handling a heavy trade.

Mr. Morgan, on Clark street, is cutting fine peas in quantity. He is trying some of the winter-flowering orchid varieties, with which he is greatly pleased.

W. G. Dobbs reports that he is ready for the reërection of his greenhouse, which will be accomplished as soon as possible. He is well prepared for the Easter trade.

The Pierce-Christian Co. has purchased the store, stock and good will of the flower shop known as Burt's, which is one of the oldest flower businesses in the city. Mrs. Robinson will maintain the store for the Pierce-Christian Co. for the present.

John Bronnor has accepted a position as superintendent for Bard & Davis.

The Baker Floral Co. reports trade as being good. Pot roses, French hydrangeas and spiræas have sold well for Easter. This plant is operated entirely as a wholesale establishment and this year they are handling about 8,000 lilies and other plants and bulbs in large quantities.

Recent visitors in town have been C. V. Hike, of Cortland; G. C. Perkins, of Newark, and Mr. Blankman, of Canton. L. S. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The usual glut of flowers is with us and, if anything, is worse than it was in 1913. The market is badly overcrowded with everything. While a few of the specialties are bringing fair prices, in many instances the popular flowers can be bought at whatever the buyer wishes to offer. However, there is little business, even at the low prices, and in many of the retail stores a falling off of twenty-five per cent and more was noted over the previous week's business.

Although the temperature climbed to the 75-degree mark last week, Easter lilies did not come into the market in large enough quantities to break the price and they have been holding out well since Christmas at $12.50 per hundred. On the other hand, the warm weather is pushing narcissi, hyacinths and other bulbous stock hard, with the result that Easter will find the stock sorely depleted. Their place will be taken by the outdoor stock, which has already made its appearance. Outdoor jonquils of fine quality were offered last week at $10 per thousand, but the price is dropping as the supply increases. It requires but little in the way of roses and carnations to fill the demand and these flowers are moving slowly. Sweet peas are so largely grown by gardeners and farmers, who place their sale in the hands of the street men, as to make it almost impossible to move them at a profit. The same statement applies to pansies and arbutus. Lupines are plentiful and good and meet with a ready sale. Snapdragons were never better and take precedence over other flowers where something fine is wanted.

The outlook for Easter, from the growers' standpoint, is exceptionally good. There seems to be enough local stock in promise to meet all demands and a majority of the growers will hit Easter just right with lilies, of which there seems to be no limit. It is expected that roses in 5-inch pots and larger will be extra good at the appointed time. Spiræas, azaleas and rhododendrons will be as good as anyone could desire.

Various Notes.

Geo. H. Cooke, the Gudes, H. Pritchard, J. H. Small, Jr., Fred H. Kramer, Henry Pfister and Z. D. Blackstone were among the Washingtonians who attended the New York show and they all express themselves as well pleased with the exhibition. Wm. F. Gude states that he believes this year's show eclipsed the previous one and that it was gratifying to note the increased interest being taken by the retailers. They brought back with them a number of prizes.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh,

Md., delivered a lecture April 2 at the First Baptist church in Hyattsville, Md., on "Dahlias and Other Flowers." His lecture was illustrated with stereopticon views.

Mr. Leapley, of the firm of Leapley & Meyer, met with the sad loss of a younger brother last week. C. L. L.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was fairly good last week. Funeral work was light, but counter trade was brisk. The weather continues cloudy, which does not help the outlook for Easter. Stock is none too plentiful and is cleaned up daily. Home-grown roses are of fair quality. Beauties are scarce and not of the best quality. Carnations are in fair supply. Easter lilies are more plentiful and there is a good supply of callas. Sweet peas are finding a ready market. Valley, lilacs, orchids, snapdragons, freesias, mignonne and forget-me-nots are also finding a ready sale. A number of local florists have had considerable trouble with the bulbous stock coming blind this year, and this has created a better market for this class of flowers.

The recent cloudy weather will shorten the Easter crop of blooms. We have had almost continuously cloudy weather for the last ten days, which is extremely hard on those florists who are behind with the lilies. The indications are that the lilies will be a trifle behind the demand this year and that the stems will be short. However, there will be numerous other plants to take their place. Some fine rhododendrons and azaleas are to be had, as well as numerous varieties of pot roses, such as crimson and baby ramblers, Dorothy Perkins, Erna Teschendorff, Mrs. Cutbush and Baby Tausendschon. There will also be plenty of hydrangeas, lilacs, genistas, spiræas, daisies and bulbous stock.

Various Notes.

W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, was in this city last week, attending the ceremonial of the Shriners.

Adolph Baur attended the flower show in New York.

E. A. Nelson has his usual lot of good spiræas for Easter. He is repainting his office and will have things in tiptop shape for Easter.

The Pahud Floral Co. gave an opening at the new store last week and presented roses to the many callers. This firm has added a new Ford auto to the delivery service.

Elmer Schrader, of Wiegand's, surprised his friends by slipping off and getting married last week. He has the best wishes of his friends.

A. W. Harrie, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade here last week.

Fred Hukreide has announced himself as candidate for county commissioner on the Democratic ticket. He has our best wishes.

The Smith & Young Co. will have a good cut of roses for Easter.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. will have a good lot of blooming plants for Easter. H. L. W.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

With Easter only two weeks off and the March weather the most changeable and unfavorable the local florists have experienced in many years, it can be stated that some of the Easter stock, such as lilies and Spiræa Alexandra, will be about a week too late with some growers. Hydrangeas and rhododendrons are fair and enough to fill the demand, especially white and pink. Several growers have had success with some of the new French varieties of the former and are sure the public will take a liking to those large-flowering novelties. Our orchid and rose specialists have some extra fine stock on hand, which is bound to find ready buyers among the wealthier class of people. There is an abundance of flowering bedding plants, and although the prices are much lower than in former years, the large quantities disposed of help to make a satisfactory profit. Although we now have a night temperature of 60 degrees and above, what the majority of florists wish for are sunny days, which would help a great deal to bring some of the backward stock in bloom for Easter. The preparations made are as great as ever and all are looking forward to fair weather and the customary big business for that day.

Various Notes.

Chas. Eble has a pretty stock of seasonable plants and is doing his customary good business, both at his store and the nursery.

H. Doescher's place is packed with all kinds of flowering and foliage plants and his ferns will soon be ready for the wholesale market; everything looks fine.

Peter Kaul, growing big lots of plants for the retail market, disposes of them as fast as they are ready for sale.

J. A. Newsham's place is ready for the coming Easter rush. Most of his giganteums will be in time and the orchids are the finest ever seen here for that occasion.

Mrs. Carrie Rehm's nursery and store look always neat and trim. She reported a most satisfactory business during the season.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. has an immense stock of all kinds of flowering plants, especially fine Louisiana lilies, hydrangeas and pot roses, ready for Easter. The entire place looks as fine as ever and the business reports are gratifying.

Verlinde & Vander Ecken, specialists in Ficus elastica, Citrus sinensis and Arucaria excelsa, will soon have another big shipment of their fine stock ready. R. E.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The usual depression in the cut flower market that invariably precedes Easter was much in evidence last week, and a rainy Saturday and consequent disappointing clean-up made the week end far from satisfactory. Prices receded all along the line and no variety of flower escaped the inevitable fall. The publicity evolved by the flower show had no appreciable effect on the retail business, but its influence will undoubtedly be apparent in a larger Easter trade than usual.

Roses of all varieties are arriving in larger quantities daily. American Beauties are arriving in larger numbers and prices are gradually declining. No especial increase for any of the roses is anticipated for Easter. The rose novelties will, however, harden and advance for the holiday, especially those so much in favor at and so widely emphasized by the flower show.

Carnations, the best of them, sold as low as $2 per hundred and under Friday and Saturday. In fact, on large quantities as low a quotation as $10 per thousand was demanded. For the poorer grades many sales were made as low as 50 cents per hundred. But in these bargains there were no Ward, Matchless, Laura Weber or Philadelphia.

The long-stemmed longiflorum lilies are bringing Easter prices. The bulk of the stock remains at the usual quotations of the last few weeks. There will be no shortage and no high prices. Valley is abundant and lower in price; the best of it last week was offered at $2 per hundred. Orchids, in many varieties, are bringing discouraging prices. There are too many Schroederae for the market to digest. Gigas will bring good prices at Easter, doubtless, and also some of the fancy varieties.

Gardenias seldom sell above $2 per dozen. For the selected stock at Easter $3 will be top figure. There are plenty of callas now for all demands, and lower prices. Violets are despised and neglected. The singles are better appreciated, and the retail stores absorb them. Of tulips, daffodils and other bulbous stock there is no end. Daisies, pansies, sweet peas and spring flowers of every kind are abundant. There seems to be a strong similarity to the prices of a year ago. The southern daffodils are here. Soon there will be lilac and forsythia.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, April 13. This will be flower show night, when full particulars of the big exhibition will be given. There will be a stereopticon lecture and spring exhibits.

THE MEN YOU MEET

JAMES DEAN.

WOULD you think for a moment that the hobby of this silver-haired gentleman is the collection of firearms? But it is—antiques—and he has gathered them at home and abroad, until his collection is celebrated far and near. Mr. Dean is a native of Wigtonshire, Scotland, born in 1845. He came to America in young manhood and made an enviable record in the Civil War—which may account for present day interest in ancient blunderbusses. Laying aside the sword, he took up the pursuits of peace at Bay Ridge, N. Y., and was a pioneer in developing the Easter plant business. He made a notable success, accumulated a competence, retired, and now lives quietly in Brooklyn, but frequently attends trade gatherings. Mr. Dean was the seventh president of the S. A. F., and occupied the chair at the first Washington convention in 1892.

mediately for the coast. Mr. Plumb is a native of Huntingdon, England, and has held many important positions in this country.

John Donaldson was a sufferer from grip last week, and as misfortunes never come singly, gas escaping in his greenhouse ruined many thousands of his lily stock for Easter.

The entire fern exhibit of the F. R. Pierson Co. at the flower show was purchased by Woodrow & Marketos.

Business is booming with all the seedsmen. Three shifts of help, eight hours each, is the daily rule and will be for some weeks to come.

A combination of the Greek fraternity has been formed, with over 150 members, with the object of putting an end to the unreasonable cutting in the retail prices of flowers. It is said by one of its leading members that the scheme includes the opening of stores close to those where the slaughtering of values is usual, even if at a loss, and to continue the system until the retail cut flower business is put upon a profitable foundation. It will be more than interesting to watch the development of this method. Already, it is said, one store has been opened on upper Broadway, and many more are to follow.

Walter Mott, of Newburgh, N. Y., was in New York all last week, representing B. F. Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y. Mr. Mott's daughter was a visitor Saturday and Sunday, March 28 and 29.

Heber J. Ware, of Oradell, N. J., was in town March 25, bringing twenty-four of his fellow townsmen to the show.

Among the men of note from a distance who were in town during flower show week were: Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis; W. N. Craig, of Boston; John Welsh Young, of Philadelphia; M. H. Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass.; R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md.; E. A. Seidewitz, of Baltimore; Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass.; August Poehlmann, of Chicago; A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn.; W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo; J. J. Hess, of Omaha; Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa.; A. Farenwald, of Roslyn, Pa.; W. H. Elliott, of Boston; Geo. A. Dennison, of San Francisco; W. A. Gude, of Washington, D. C.; Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit; George Asmus, of Chicago, and Prof. A. C. Beall, of Ithaca, N. Y.

OBITUARY

Chas. M. Newman.

Chas. M. Newman, for many years in the trade at Charleston, S. C., committed suicide March 18 by shooting himself in the temple with a revolver. In a letter which he left to his wife and children he gave business reverses as the cause of his act.

Mr. Newman for a number of years conducted the Carolina Floral Store, at 339 King street, and greenhouses at Meeting and Romney streets. He is reported to have made a big success of this business and about two years ago sold out and returned with his family to Germany, where he was born. He recently came back to Charleston and then went to Tampa, Fla., where he engaged in business. This venture did not prove a success and he returned to Charleston with his family the first part of March. It is said that he was considering two offers at the time of his death. One was at Columbus, Ga., and the other was to take charge of the proposed Accabee cemetery at Charleston.

Mr. Newman is survived by a widow and two children, a son and a daughter. He was about 50 years old. He was a member of several orders, including the German Turnverein, the German Friendly Society and Franklin Lodge of Masons.

C. F. Christensen.

C. F. Christensen, in business at Eggertsville, N. Y., died March 27 at his home in Williamsville, N. Y. He was one of the pioneer florists of Buffalo, having begun business many years ago with the late N. J. Palmer and William Scott. He had a greenhouse on Delaware avenue, Buffalo, for a long time and then removed to Eggertsville, where he went into business extensively as a grower. He leaves one son, Charles F. Christensen, who will carry on the business. His loss is greatly felt by all who knew him.

Francis Walker.

The Rev. Francis Walker, one of the oldest ministers in the Indiana Methodist Episcopal Conference, for thirty-nine years at the head of the nursery and florists' business of Francis Walker & Co., in Louisville and New Albany, died March 25 at his home on the Charlestown road, a mile from New Albany, Ind. He had been ill for ten days of an ulceration of the stomach. Up to the time of his last illness he had been in excellent health and continued the supervision of his business up to the time that he was compelled to take his bed.

The Rev. Mr. Walker was 83 years of age. He was a native of New Richmond, O., where he was born October 23, 1831. His father died while he was young and with his mother and brother he moved to Illinois, where he remained a few years, returning to New Richmond to attend Clermont Academy, at that time a noted institution. Later he attended Ohio Wesleyan University. He removed to New Albany in early manhood with his mother and in 1853 was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Graham, a member of a pioneer New Albany family. He joined the Indiana Methodist Episcopal Conference in 1858 and began his ministerial work in Paoli. His total ministerial work covered a period of twenty-two years.

The Rev. Mr. Walker is survived by his wife and nine children. The family has had a remarkable record for health, there having been no deaths in a group of eleven members in forty-five years. The children are Herbert Walker, of Louisville, who has for many years been the retail manager of the florists' business; Ferdinand, Clarence, the Rev. Dr. John M. Walker and Earl Walker, of New Albany; Ernest Walker, of Auburn, Ala.; Francis Walker, of Wilmette, Ill., and Misses Abbie and Harriet Walker, who have made their home with their parents.

August Kunkel.

After an illness of six months, August Kunkel died March 31, at his home in Chicago. Mr. Kunkel was representative of the great body of the trade in any large city—quiet, unassuming, but doing a considerable business in the section of the town contiguous to his retail flower store, which for a dozen years had been located at 1058 West Chicago avenue. Mr. Kunkel was 66 years of age. He leaves a widow and six grown children, the family assisting in the management of the store.

Charles J. Precht.

Chas. J. Precht, 46 years of age, son of Theodore and the late Marie Precht, died suddenly Wednesday, March 25, at Baltimore, Md. He was buried Friday, March 27, at 3 p. m. in Western cemetery. Mr. Precht resided with his father, at 2001 Slingluff avenue, where they were engaged in business together. His father is one of the oldest florists of Baltimore, having been in business over forty years. Besides his father, the deceased is survived by his wife and one son, who are grief stricken over their loss.

Mt. Clemens, Mich.—August Von Boeselager has ordered material for two new greenhouses.

Conneaut, O.—The Cummins Canning Co. is planning to erect a greenhouse, 28x150 feet, in which to grow tomato plants for farmers near by, and vegetables for market.

Nashville, Tenn.—In connection with his new establishment on Church street, M. H. Skalowski will erect greenhouses here to grow his own stock. He has not yet definitely decided on the location of the range.

Ardmore, Pa.—Bids have been asked for the erection of a store, greenhouse, offices and apartments for the Primrose Flower Shop. The building will consist of three stories and basement and will be of brick and frame construction, containing two office suites and three apartments.

Cleveland, O.—H. P. Merrick is in charge of the office recently opened by Lord & Burnham Co. in the Swetland building. Through this office the company expects, by keeping more closely in touch with the florists, to increase its business in this section. The company is erecting a third factory, at St. Catharines, Ont.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Clarence D. Lennon has sold his interest in the Broadway greenhouse to his brother, M. E. Lennon, and purchased ten acres on Maiden Lane, on which he will erect about 70,000 feet of glass for growing vegetables. Harris Bros., of Chicago, have the contract for the heating plant, and the John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago, has the contract for the construction of the houses.

Brockton, Mass.—Elmer E. Blood has made application for a permit to build a greenhouse at 310 Grove street.

Norfolk, Va.—W. J. Newton, proprietor of the Norfolk Floral Gardens, has obtained a permit for a new greenhouse.

Sterling, Colo.—B. C. Johnson, of the Sterling Greenhouse & Gardens, has received the material for another greenhouse, which will be erected at once. It will be devoted to roses.

Putnam, Conn.—C. S. Andem is planning for the construction of another greenhouse, 200 feet long, at his range on the east side. His business has been steadily growing, and he now has a market for more than he can supply with his present glass.

Mankato, Minn.—Neil Neilsen is preparing to add two houses to his plant on Marshall street, doubling the size of his range. The houses will be each 34x240 feet. The contract for the concrete and masonry work, including the boiler room and the smokestack, has been let to a local concern, which will begin at once.

Marshalltown, Ia.—James L. Denmead, cashier of the First National bank, is taking up the florists' business as a side line. On seven and one-half acres at Railroad and Ninth streets he is erecting three houses, two 28x100 and one 28x120; a display house, 18x56; an office building and a service building. The whole investment, including the land, amounts to about $12,000. The plant is expected to be ready July 1. W. S. Bell, of Lexington, Ky., has been engaged as grower, and Mr. Denmead will give some time to the business.

...NEWS NOTES...

Shenandoah, Pa.—The sympathy of the trade is with Wallace Payne, who recently lost his wife.

Glenwood, Mich.—N. M. Hitchcock is now managing the business of E. H. Hitchcock in the latter's absence and expects to take over the business soon.

Cleveland, O.—Bramley & Son, of 1181 East Seventy-first street, will open a new store in the Leader-News building, at 1876 East Sixth street, April 6.

Medina, N. Y.—Lee O. Smith, formerly manager and grower for White Bros., has moved to Gasport, N. Y., where he is starting in business for himself.

Thief River Falls, Minn.—A fire which broke out at 2 a. m. February 28 destroyed a number of buildings, among them the one occupied by the Lang Floral Co.

Westboro, Mass.—At the recent exhibition of the industries of Westboro, Paul Brigham had a display of wreaths, carnations and roses, and Arthur George had a large exhibit of violets.

Mansfield, O.—Lee E. Berno, manager of the Berno Flower Shop, has just returned from a month's trip to Florida. The store has been in the charge of Mrs. Berno, who reports a heavy business.

Iron River, Mich.—The new greenhouse built by Llewellyn Phillips was formally opened to the public March 24, and souvenirs were presented to the visitors. Potted plants, roses and other flowers have already been started.

Raleigh, N. C.—A record winter, with eight heavy snowfalls to date, has made this city seem far from the "sunny south" of other years. In spite of the unusual weather, however, J. L. O'Quinn & Co. report cut flower business good. The prospects for Easter are quite promising.

Medina, O.—Hammerschmidt & Clark declare that system and printed matter count, and their order blanks, announcement cards and suggestion cards enclosed with orders bear out this assertion. Since their start in 1901 they have kept daily notes of every cutting taken, potted, repotted, etc., with full details, and find them of great value in the daily work in the greenhouse.

Duluth, Minn.—A telephone call purporting to be from the pastor of a church, asking for $4 worth of flowers and change for a $20 bill, cost Eischen Bros. the flowers and the $16. The flowers were received at the church by a stranger, who gave the messenger a $20 check, bearing the signature of "Charles B. Hanson," on a Minneapolis bank. It turned out to be bogus.

Erie, Pa.—During the flower show here a week ago the Erie Floral Co. put up in its exhibit a vase of a strain of Double Pink Killarney that was originated in its houses a year or two ago. This is a quite double, well shaped flower, of good lasting qualities and large size. It has been propagated largely during the winter and will probably be heard from next season.

This Is No Joke.

We florists are hustlers;
We wish to progress,
And this we must do
If we'd meet with success.
To be most successful,
As you all well know,
We must first grow the stock,
Then sell what we grow.
So the next step is selling
The stock that we grew,
And we place a small ad
In the Florists' Review.
Then in come the orders,
From here and from there,
For the Florists' Review
Is read everywhere.
Your surplus is moved,
And you feel well repaid
For your ad in the paper
And its welcome aid.
So here's wishing you well,
For you know what to do;
Just advertise stock
In the Florists' Review.

The Wish is Father of the Dream.

(From the Providence Tribune—with alterations.)
Last evening I was talking with a florist aged and gray.
When he told me of a dream he had—I think 'twas Christmas day.
While snoozing in his office, this vision came to view:
He saw a radiant angel, dressed in garments white and new.
Said the angel: "I'm from heaven; the Lord just sent me down,
To bring you up to glory, and put on your golden crown.
You've been a friend to everyone, and worked hard night and day;
You've made happy many thousands, and from few received your pay.
Lo, we want you up in glory, for you have labored hard,
And the good Lord is preparing your eternal, just reward."
Then the angel and the florist started up toward glory's gate.
But, when passing close to hades, the angel murmured: "Wait:
I've a place I wish to show you, it's the hottest place in hell,
Where the ones who never paid you in eternal torment dwell."
And, behold! The florist saw there his old patrons by the score;
And, grabbing up a chair and fan, he wished for nothing more.
He desired to sit and watch them as they'd sizzle, singe and burn,
And his eyes would rest on debtors whichever way they'd turn.
Said the angel: "Come on, florist; there are pearly gates to see."
But the florist only muttered, "This is heaven enough for me."

IN WHICH MR. ELLIS SCATTERS PEACHES AND MELONS ALL OVER THE PLACE.

(From the Windsor, Ont., Record.)

R. H. Ellis, of greenhouse notoriety, very royally entertained the bowlers and the ladies who accompanied them. At 8:30 Tuesday morning, with a large number of automobiles, he took the bowlers to his greenhouses and had them visit the peach orchards in the vicinity. He gave them a very pleasant auto trip and treated them to all the luscious peaches and melons they wished. In the afternoon he took the ladies in a number of automobiles to his greenhouses and to many of the peach orchards and melon fields about and treated them to a delightful motor ride through the most beautiful part of the country. On their return he entertained them at the restaurant to peaches, melons, and ice cream.

...NEWS NOTES...

Manhattan, N. Y.—The United Cut Flower Co. was incorporated March 24 with a capital stock of $15,000 by J. T. Ryford, N. J. Lales and Demetrius J. Pappas.

North Milwaukee, Wis.—Albert Grunwaldt, formerly in the employ of Bassett & Washburn at their greenhouses, has gone into business here with his brother under the firm name of Grunwaldt Bros.

Hartford, Conn.—Theodore Wirth gave a fine illustrated lecture March 19 at Jewell hall on "The Gardens at the Convention of the S. A. F." Mr. Wirth was for ten years superintendent of the parks of the city.

Rochester, Minn.—D. M. Wigle, who started in business here a short time ago, plans to open a store in the American Express Co. building soon. The success he has had so far leads him to believe the field can be further developed by means of a store.

Toronto, Can.—Dunlop's Easter price list, which is issued to patrons at this time annually, is a neat and attractive little booklet, containing prices of flowers and plants for Easter, as well as suggestions in regard to delivery abroad, on board steamers, etc.

Princeton, Ill.—March 23 the employees of the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co. and thirty-one of his personal friends here gave a surprise party in honor of the thirty-first birthday of George Jennings, the company's foreman. Music, cards and dancing whiled away a pleasant evening.

Wenona, Ill.—The Wenona Greenhouses, of which William Metzger is the proprietor, were damaged by the hail storm Thursday morning, March 26. Besides the breakage of about 2,000 feet of glass, there was a good deal of damage done to the plants by the rain, wind and falling glass.

Dixon, Ill.—The Dixon Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000, to deal in flowers, seeds and plants at wholesale and retail. The incorporators are Charles H. Fallstrom, Louis Kniel and John E. Erwin. The first two have been conducting a good business under the name of the Dixon Flower Shop.

Birmingham, Ala.—In connection with the movement to beautify the city, for which the city has engaged Warren H. Manning, of Boston, Mass, the florists have organized and elected W. H. Kessler president and D. P. Durban secretary. A committee composed of John Colmant, H. C. Wood and W. H. Luther has been appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws.

Sioux City, Ia.—Rocklin & Lehman have obtained a long time lease on the property at 402 Fourth street, where they will open a retail store, to be in charge of Daniel Sullivan. The store at 405 Douglas street will be used exclusively for wholesale trade and will be in the charge of William Newton, of New York. The branch in the Martin hotel will be retained. Michael E. Rocklin expects business in the new store to be well started by the arrival of Easter.

THE high fragrance of the new rose, Hadley, promises to be as much of a factor as its distinct color in bringing it into quick popularity.

THE season is approaching when there will be a fine demand for ferns of the Boston type, and a scarcity of the right kind of stock. It is so every spring.

If it interests anyone except the publisher, the white paper necessary to print this issue of The Review weighed a little over seven tons; to be exact, 14,374 pounds—and it isn't a sample copy edition either.

It always was a shock to William Scott's sense of fitness to hear anyone speak of the "dirt" used in connection with the growing of stock. "Dirt," he would exclaim, "is what a few florists have back of their ears; soil is what they use on their benches!"

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., has 20,000 Killarney Queen in its houses this season and is so well pleased with the way the variety is doing that the number will not be reduced next season. It is not a rose that could be sold in unlimited quantity, but the extra price obtainable for a moderate number of extra fine flowers fully makes up for some slowness of the plants. When roses can be sold regularly for 20 to 25 cents each it does not take many blooms per plant to make a variety profitable.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Nor a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

PROMPT collections are more necessary today than at any other time in the history of the trade. In the boom days of old almost any florist could make money and was safe, but as competition sharpens and margins of profit grow less and less, it takes good management to succeed and the best way a florist can make himself secure is by collecting his bills and paying his debts.

In a certain town there is a man with so fine a business that every now and then someone opens near by for the evident purpose of chipping off a piece of the old man's trade. But it never seems to work. The reason is that for years and years this florist has sold only good stock at fair prices. He never has scrambled for the cut-price trade, but it has been his constant care that every customer received full value on every purchase. He has made himself practically immune from competition.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against James F. Larkin, dealer in florists' gold letters at 291 Mercer street, by Albert Hubner Nachfigr, of Berlin, Germany, a creditor for $1,077. Judge Hough appointed Wm. Henkel, Jr., receiver, bond $500. It was stated that Mr. Larkin locked up the store two months ago and abandoned the premises. The assets are estimated at $750, most of which were purchased from the petitioning creditor. Mr. Larkin began business June 1, 1913.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Have a plan. The man who is satisfied with what comes to him unsolicited answers few knocks at the door. The stay-at-home misses daily opportunities that pass at the next corner. Get away from the desk—get out of the chair-tilting class. Opportunities are in perpetual motion. Get after them. Lay out a plan, a campaign for new business—then go after it. Exhaust every source, swing every prospect into line. Don't be satisfied with the business that you have. Get more.—System.

ENGLISH CARNATION YEAR BOOK.

J. S. Brunton, chairman of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, of Great Britain, has sent to The Review a copy of the organization's year book for 1914. The book is edited by Mr. Brunton and consists of eighty pages, aside from the advertisements, which occupy eighteen pages more. Besides the annual report, with the addresses delivered at the annual dinner and the names of the officers and members, the book contains the society's by-laws, its rules for the registration of new varieties of carnations, a list of carnations registered from 1907 to 1913, inclusive, and other such information. Among the illustrations, which are numerous, are portraits of a few of the English notables in the trade and pictures of some of the newer varieties of carnations.

THE DATE OF EASTER.

Not for four years does the date of Easter again fall in March, on the last day of the month in 1918, and only once in the next seven times does Easter fall on a date earlier than April 4. The dates of the next ten Easters are as follows:

1915.....	April 4
1916.....	April 23
1917.....	April 8
1918.....	March 31
1919.....	April 20
1920.....	April 4
1921.....	March 27
1922.....	April 16
1923.....	April 1

WHAT IS DISTANCE?

A thousand miles is a long way to go after business if you have to walk. But several times this distance cuts no figure to advertisers in The Review. The orders come from across the continent as well as from near by. The paper may be printed a thousand miles from the advertiser and read another thousand or two farther away, but the orders come just the same. There may be more than one way for advertisers to reach the trade in their own town, but for those who want to reach those far away as well as those near by, to take in the trade in every part of the country, there is nothing like The Review. For instance:

The business coming from the display advertisements of our square paper pots and dirt bands in The Review is taxing our capacity. Inquiries have come from Calgary, Indian Head, St. Albert and Medicine Hat, showing that The Review draws business even from the borders of civilization. Orders and inquiries are coming from all through Canada, the Pacific slope, Texas, the Gulf states and all states between.—F. W. Rochelle & Sons, Chester, N. J., March 18, 1914.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The demand has been somewhat erratic, but on the whole business has been good. As always is the case at this season of the year, the cuts have been large, so that clearances only could be secured with the aid of a large demand. Prices have not been high, but the quantity of stock marketed has run into a good aggregate money value. Three days' rain, March 28 to 30, disturbed conditions, causing a bad accumulation of stock.

Roses have been the most abundant item on the list and it has been impossible to keep the receipts cleaned up. The market offers everything any buyer could ask. Of course Killarney is much more in evidence than any other rose, white being, in most houses, decidedly less plentiful than pink. Most of the cut is in the medium lengths; there is no large supply of extremely short roses and not any special quantity of the extra long grade. Killarney Queen, however, is received in sufficient quantity to supply every demand for the special grade of roses. Sunburst is more abundant than Ward and shows longer stems, but is not of such deep color. Richmond is much more abundant than Milady, and the latter is of varying quality. Bulgarie is received in moderate quantities from one or two growers. Other sorts are in light supply. Cecile Brunner, the baby pink rose, is not in so heavy demand as before the sweet peas were offered for corsage work. A handful of Bon Silene is seen now and then, but no large quantity would be salable. Beauties are improving, moderate quan-

FOR EASTER—A BIG SUPPLY FINE STOCK...

IN BUILDING UP our large supply of cut flowers, quality has been our first care; we have sought quality first always. It means satisfaction. In the crisp days of winter low grade flowers may sometimes ship safely, but nothing except the best can be relied on in the soft days of spring. With this late Easter it is specially important to order where QUALITY always is high.

FANCY LILIES

Really good Lilies will not be plentiful this Easter—some that were too early and cannot be held till Easter, and more that are late and will be overforced and soft, but our lilies will be fine—none better. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for.

FANCY ROSES

We never have had finer roses than right now. Our specialty is a little better grade of roses than can be had elsewhere in quantity.

MILADY	KILLARNEY	RICHMOND
WARD	SUNBURST	BULGARIE

CARNATIONS

Almost all our stock will meet the needs of the most exacting buyer. It not only is good stock when it leaves us, but it is good stock when it reaches the out-of-town retailer—and it pleases HIS customers.

DOUBLE—VIOLETS—SINGLE

We always are headquarters for Sweet Peas, but from the way the buds are dropping in the dark weather we are having it looks as though there will be a light supply for Easter. We can, however, furnish good Violets in larger quantities than at any previous Easter. Fragrant home-grown singles; fancy home-grown (Glencoe) doubles, and the cream of the Hudson River crop. Use these for your Easter corsage work.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

There is no more dependable or satisfactory source of supply.

FANCY CATTLEYA ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are home-grown and will give better satisfaction than the lower priced stock that is reconsigned by Eastern commission houses.

FANCY VALLEY

You always can get fine Valley here. We handle the Chicago Market brand exclusively.

tities of first-class stock now being available.

The carnation market was really strong up to March 27. There was a demand sufficient to take up everything of first-class quality at what should be extremely satisfactory prices for the season. Growers whose principal cut is Rose-pink Enchantress will not concur, nor will all the growers of Enchantress. At this season of the year these two varieties give a cut that may be notable for size, but which surely is not for quality. March 28, with rain, the prices of even the best carnations weakened along with the prices of everything else, stock accumulating.

It has not proved easy to advance the price of sweet peas. The reduction in the pick of the winter blooming Spencers has resulted in considerable improvement in the average prices because job lot sales have not usually been necessary, but the stores have declined to pay big prices, even for fine peas, when other flowers were to be had so cheaply. Except for one or two warm days the weather has continued cool, considerably to the advantage of the growers of single violets, who are making up for their light pick early in the season. Prices continue low.

Bulbous stock is less abundant; the season is approaching its end, and Easter will see its finish, or practically so. Many of the growers already have cut the last of their daffodils and tulips, but jonquils continue to arrive in moderate quantities, all that the market needs. Last week saw greatly increased receipts of the southern bulbous stock, both from Virginia and less distant southern fields. The Saturday rain knocked its sale flat. Spanish iris is beginning to arrive from many growers; it looks as though the supply this season will be larger than ever before. Snapdragon also is more plentiful, but only a little of it shows the superior quality that buyers have come to look for. A few stocks come in; doubles sell quickly, but hardly anybody will buy the singles, which predominate. It looks as though the popularity of peas were responsible for the light demand for the few cattleyas that come in. Valley is not selling at all well.

The Florida shippers of asparagus bunches are busy again, and the supply is large. Asparagus strings are not plentiful, but they are little called for. Smilax is more abundant. The price of ferns was advanced 50 cents a thousand April 1, following a similar advance by the Massachusetts shippers.

The Easter Prospect.

Curiously the heavy oversupply of roses now on the market is holding buyers and sellers apart on Easter. There has been little Easter cut flower business booked up to the present time—considerably less than usual prior to the appearance of The Review's Easter Number, which is the signal for getting busy. The buyers assert that there will be an abundance of stock of practically all kinds. Perhaps it is no more than natural that sellers should voice the opposite view, but they appear to do it with conviction, pointing to the present heavy crop of roses as an indication that the supply will be much lighter a week hence. The wholesalers assert that it is only the oversupply of roses that makes carnations appear plentiful and that really carnations are in less than the usual supply. In spite of the fact that they cannot now clean out, they predict a stiff market for Easter. One thing is certain: that any grower who holds back his stock, putting overripe flowers on the market for Easter, will pay the penalty. Nothing but fresh flowers will realize anything like quotations at Easter.

The Lily Situation.

The lily situation appears rather mixed this season and it is difficult to forecast the outcome. Practically all the Formosas have been cut; the Easter crop is giganteum. There is a great deal of difference in the quality, but a large percentage of the plants are short, too short to sell as cut lilies in first-class stores. If the Hibernianism may be permitted, it seems certain that short lilies will be long this Easter, and probable that long lilies will be sort. Realizing that their lilies are too short to bring much cut, many growers, including some large ones, are trying to sell the plants locally, in pots. What effect this will have on the call for cut lilies is a question; while it reduces the supply it also will reduce the demand. Curiously, with so late an Easter some growers will not have their lilies ready, while others are too early. Also, several growers did not go in so heavily on lilies as usual, but there are one or two who have followed mums with unusually large lots.

Bohannon's New Store.

The Bohannon Floral Co., which has outgrown the store in the University Club, made record time in fitting up and opening the new store across the street, at 57 East Monroe. The fixtures are Circassian walnut, marble and plate glass, of excellent quality and modest color tone that not only gives the place an air of solid worth but

LILIES FOR EASTER

THE BEST--THE BEST

READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDER

Randall's Easter crop of Lilies is famous—everybody who ever has tried them knows that there never are any finer and seldom any as good. For years and years Randall's Lilies have been the Standard by which all other Lilies have been judged. Some years one grower and some years another will claim to have Lilies "as good as Randall's," but Randall's Lilies always have been acknowledged as the leader. These are true Giganteums—the best bulbs money would buy, forced by the best grower we know. Naturally, we have the best flowers. Those who have had them before will want them again; those who use them this year for the first time will become regular customers. They will be packed at the greenhouses in wooden boxes of 100 flowers each.

which heightens the attractive appearance of the stock. The ice-box and cashier's cage, with a door between them, partition the store from the workroom at the rear. There is a good basement for storage. The store is a step or two above the sidewalk and a novelty in flower store arrangement is having the floor of the show windows on the level of the store floor, merely fenced off by a heavy carved rail to keep the customers from walking into the display. The store in the University Club will be closed after a time. Mrs. N. I. Stewart is Mr. Bohannon's partner and Mr. Stewart frequently is found in charge of the new store, although he has other interests; he likes the place and the business.

Carrying Stock.

A certain retail florist has a competitor who is not strong enough to command credit. "Do you know," said the florist, "I can tell any time from my transient trade how that fellow is fixed! When he has funds he carries a good stock and when he is out of funds he buys only to fill orders, and my transient trade shows it right away."

Our Candidates.

Two retail florists are running for alderman at the election April 7, Jean E. Franke in the Seventeenth ward and W. F. Schofield in the Twenty-first. The Municipal Voters' League, which each year investigates the qualifications of all candidates for city offices, thus appraised these florists in a report given out March 31:

Jean E. Franke, Rep.; lives 760 Milwaukee avenue; florist same address; born Chemnitz, Saxony, Germany, fifty-one years ago; public school education; in Chicago thirty-eight and in ward nine years; flower business at same address for twenty-nine years; signed league platform.

W. F. Schofield, Dem.; lives 734 North State street; florist same address; born in ward thirty-five years ago; public and parochial school education; after nine months' service as messenger boy opened flower shop at Wells and Erie streets when 18 years old; since 1903 at present number; good business repu-

With the turning of the wheels still six weeks away, Carl Ickes, of the Ickes-Braun Mill Co., reports that the first order for greenhouse material was booked this week. It will go on record that the new concern's first customer also is a new firm, Neumann & Thomas, who are just starting at Richmond, Ind. They have just bought eight acres of land and the order calls for material for two houses each 150 feet long.

The Burlington's Overland express was wrecked just east of Hinsdale March 30. On the train following was C. L. Washburn and a big wagon-load of roses. The wreck blocked the line for two hours, with the result that Bassett & Washburn's early shipments missed their trains that day.

Apparently it will be necessary to change the date of Easter in order to have good Beauties for the holiday. At least P. C. Schupp, in comparing J. A. Budlong's advices to customers for the last several years, notes that each season, regardless of whether Easter was early or late, buyers have been told that good Beauties were scarce, practically unobtainable.

A. L. Randall and Mrs. Randall returned March 30 from a fortnight's stay at West Baden. Miss Grace Randall, who was with them there, returned to her studies at the University of Illinois.

The Western Art Flower Co., at Fifty-fifth and State streets, having retired from business, Poehlmann Bros. Co. has secured the services of Edward Dellachies to take charge of its dyeing and perpetuated foliage departments.

According to C. W. McKellar there is no complaint as to business. He says he has been kept on the jump for the last week. The only fault he finds is with the southern bulbous stock; if shipments do not arrive early in the morning it is impossible to clean them out.

Indiana Harbor, said to be the only city of its size without a florist, now has a flower store. The opening took place April 1. The proprietor is D. T. Matchen, for several years sales manager for Peter Reinberg. Mr. Matchen thought a city of 20,000 population without a florist offered an excellent opportunity. He was able to secure a well located store at 3707 Cedar street, with good basement beneath it and a nice suite of living rooms on the second floor, and moved his family there is in search of property in Maywood or vicinity, where five acres of good soil can be found, with switching facilities for coal supply. He has been fortunate in getting unusual keeping quality and strength of stem in his carnations and would reserve for them at least a part of his attention, whatever new range he may acquire.

Even though Easter fell in March in 1913, the gross sales for last month exceeded those of a year ago with the Fleischman Floral Co., says George Wienhoeber. Several big funeral orders, including expensive casket covers, were a factor in the showing.

Last season Spanish iris was one of O. A. Tonner's best sellers and an increased demand is expected during the next few weeks. Ten weeks' stocks are reported as giving too large a percentage of singles, which are not wanted.

Carnation cuttings never sold better than this year, according to N. J. Wietor, who comments that Mrs. Lawson has been in demand and was one of the first varieties sold out.

The spring blooming Spencer peas will be along in another week, before the winter blooming varieties are gone, according to report from the Des Plaines plant of Hoerber Bros.

An excellent crop of Beauties is being cut by Wellworth Farm, the Kidwell place at Downers Grove. Killarney Queen also is excellent there, but Milady does not seem to be so much at home.

Lilies and rambler roses in pots occupy considerable space in the store of Erne & Klingel, but no attempt is being made to sell outside the city, because of the difficulty in packing for safe delivery.

As buyer on the market, W. J. Smyth now has Mike Lynch, a former San Franciscan who has been a member of his staff for some time.

McCray Refrigerators

FOR FLORISTS

Flowers are probably the most perishable of all merchandise. The choice of a refrigerator often means the whole difference between success and failure.

McCray Refrigerators are built to preserve and display your flowers. They can be arranged for either ice or mechanical refrigeration; stock or built-to-order sizes.

We've been improving and perfecting McCrays for thirty years, until they are now the recognized favorites of the world's greatest florists.

We make Refrigerators, Coolers and Display Cases of all sizes and for every purpose.

have produced more than his retail business could dispose of during the recent relapse of the demand in Wood-lawn.

As an annex to his flower store at 917 Blue Island avenue, B. Abrahamson has built an attractive conservatory.

When he opened his retail establishment at 1210 West Eighteenth street less than a year ago, James Bilek was new at the business, and the management was vested in an experienced assistant. Now he is his own manager, with his brother as assistant, and is doing a good trade in design work.

Nothing this season has pleased Emil Buettner more than his success with the Sunburst rose. He asserts that his have been "as good as anybody's," which is as strong a claim as he ever has been known to make.

It has become the custom of A. T. Pyfer to spend Tuesday and Saturday afternoons at the plant of Pyfer & Olsem, at Wilmette. He plans to take up his residence there in the early summer.

After spending the winter on the selling floor of the A. L. Randall Co., Carl N. Thomas has gone to his farm at West Springfield, Pa., for the summer.

sale as pot plants and four houses for cutting next week. They began cutting about March 25, but will have the bulk of the lilies on time for Easter. Originally there were 34,000 bulbs. John Kruchten is their sales agent.

After a fortnight's illness John Sinner reappeared at the store March 28.

A 4-story building on South Water street, which chanced to be vacant, has been leased by Winterson's Seed Store for the storage of hardy stock during the spring season.

This will be John Zech's twentieth Easter in wholesale cut flowers. There have been a lot of changes, but he says the greatest has been in the quantity of flowers handled in the Chicago market.

March 31 C. L. Washburn and the Bassett & Washburn store staff sent telegraphic felicitations to O. P. Bassett, at Pasadena, it being his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary.

As showing how far spring has advanced, Spaulding & Son, at Villa Ridge, Ill., now are shipping jonquils in quantity. They report to E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., that the peony prospect never was better.

A. L. Vaughan is planning a trip to California at an early date.

A visitor last week was J. K. Andrews, Elgin, Ill., manufacturer of lawn and cemetery vases. He still carries his left arm in a sling, as the result of a fall on the ice.

The last of Adam Zender's present batch of Sunburst rooted cuttings were potted last week, while this pioneer was suffering from an attack of lumbago. For nearly thirty-two years he has been a grower in his present neighborhood, first as a truck gardener, and with roses his specialty for the last twenty-two years.

H. N. Bruns is one of those who cannot be comfortable unless everything about him is in apple-pie order, but he has been fairly well content since he opened his rebuilt store. His azaleas are excellent this Easter.

The George Wittbold Co. has three ranges of glass in operation this Easter, including rented houses at Des Plaines, but Louis Wittbold says he is sure the spring trade will take it all and call for more.

Media, Pa.—Alfred Broadbelt, superintendent at the Media cemetery, has a fine line of Easter stock and his sweet peas are looking well.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The cut of carnations for Easter promises to be heavy and of good quality. Roses are in good supply now and will be in full crop in the next ten days. There will also be a good quantity of bulbous stock, such as tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, etc. Some extra fancy snapdragons, Spanish iris, calendulas, lupines and mignonette will be on the market in limited quantities. Large lots of valley are being grown specially for Easter and they promise well. Lilies, both in pots and cut, will be less abundant than in other years. Pot roses, hydrangeas, spiraeas, azaleas, heather, etc., are fine. The best average lot of plants that Cleveland has ever had will be seen this year for Easter.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Club entertained the Cleveland Florists' Club March 30 at the club rooms, 2610 Detroit street. Music, bowling, cards, refreshments and a talk on the San Francisco exposition in 1915 were features of the evening. Those who stayed away will never know how much they missed. There was fun enough for all.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, O., have the finest lot of potted roses they have ever had.

The James Eadie Co. is cutting heavily on Spanish iris, the first in this market. This company's Easter pot stock is coming along nicely.

George Bate, Charles Gibson and Fred Brown, who attended the flower show at New York, are home again and report a wonderful exhibition.

The J. M. Gasser Co. has a fine lot of Perkins and Hiawatha roses for Easter.

The best quality in Ferns and you will find our prices lower than they can be bought for elsewhere.

Plenty, too, of fine Green Leucothoes.
Long sprays.....1000, $7.00
Medium sprays.....1000, 3.50

Beauties

They will be one of our strong points for this week. Will have plenty of them, mostly long Beauties, with a fair supply of the medium.

Killarney Brilliant

We offer you the only supply of this new rose. If you buy Killarney Brilliant for your Easter business, you have the satisfaction of getting quality that's bound to please you and your customers.

Snapdragon

In any quantity at $1.00-$1.50 per dozen. Several shades of pink; also white and yellow. It will make a better showing at the price than most anything you can buy.

Easter Lilies

Exceptionally well grown stock. We know the quality will more than please you and we pack them with special care to insure their arrival in good condition.

Daisies

Plenty of the yellow and white, good stock at $1.50 to $2.00 per 100.

The Eastern Market.

The volume of business is excellent; greater, some of the wholesalers assert, than during midwinter, but the supply of flowers is so large that the market is not in satisfactory condition. The average prices are low and much of the stock has to be jobbed off after the best has been selected. Still, everything considered, the market is in as good shape as usual ten days before Easter. Good flowers of all kinds are in demand on most days. Shipping has been excellent, at times heavy. The local demand was marred by a rainy Saturday, always a serious disadvantage.

Easter Prospects.

Last week the plant situation was carefully summarized. There is no change excepting that the supply of lilies in pots that will be in time promises to be large. Today the cut flower situation is briefly given.

There will be an abundant supply of every variety of staple flower usually seen in this market at Easter. Lilies promise well; the ruling price, the wholesalers think, will be 12½ cents for each bud a finger length in bloom, with select long-stem lots in small quantities at 15 cents and ordinary stock at $10 per hundred, short stems at $8 per hundred.

Beauties will be more abundant than they have been since Christmas. Indications point to a good supply in all grades. It is thought that really fancy sweet peas will not be overabundant and that there will be plenty of the ordinary grade. Violets have been so unsatisfactory that the wholesalers fear the doubles only will be handled in quantity; not many singles. Valley will be abundant. Roses and carnations of all kinds will, it is believed, be in heavy supply; so, too, snapdragon.

Lilac.

"There are three grades of lilac on the market; they sell at 50 cents, $1 and $1.25 per bunch. The two last named grades are those used on shipping orders, the first being hardly good enough. Most of this lilac is white, a small quantity purple. The purple lilac is more expensive than the white, because it must be kept in the forcing houses longer to color it. Purple lilac always outlasts white. With favorable weather the supply of lilac will continue for several weeks after Easter, probably until the outdoor flowers arrive."

This brief talk is by John W. McIntyre, who, as the representative of Rimbault & Bruzeaud, of Buena, N. J., is a recognized authority on lilac in this city.

Edward Reid returned from a short business trip this week.

The Henry F. Michell Co. held an impromptu flower show March 28, the prize-winning lilies, azaleas, spiræas, daffodils, tulips and hyacinths from the spring show of the P. H. S. being on exhibition that day. Dahlia orders have been coming in heavily.

John N. Kulp will erect three houses, each 24x150 feet, on his farm at Fort Washington, Pa., to be used for growing carnations and other stock.

H. Bayersdorfer received an order for six pitchers and two bottles; they were made of cocoa fiber and were five feet high, with breadth in proportion. The order was shipped the day received. It took six men to make the stock.

Frank R. Hastings underwent an operation in the Germantown hospital last week. His friends will be glad to know he is doing well and hope he soon will be out again.

Paul Berkowitz attended the banquet in New York March 26 and greatly enjoyed it. He stayed over to see the show the next day.

Walter Mott complains that, although he waded through snow knee-deep to call on Phil, no mention was made of his recent visit to our city. There is absolutely no excuse.

Myers & Samtman have completed a propagating house, 15x150 feet, of Lord & Burnham material, and have graded the land for one house 55x300 feet.

Aschmann Bros. have completed a propagating house, 11x50 feet, and have filled it with hyacinths for Easter.

Edgar Bayley, with S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I., was in town March 27.

The name of T. Nelson Geiger, the well-known Thirteenth street retailer, was inadvertently omitted from the gathering of March 19.

George Craig completed thirty-nine years of successful business life at 211

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

J. W. DUNFORD has bought out the Whiting Nursery Co. and will specialize in landscape work in Sioux City, Ia.

ALVIN BROWN, a landscape architect of Beloit, Wis., is starting the Beloit Nursery. He purchased land last fall and is now setting out stock.

THE Carlton Nursery Co., at Carlton, Ore., is enjoying a good run of business at present and shipments to neighboring states are heavy, especially of fruit trees.

THE season in the southwest is giving the nurseries in that section a good spring business. Orders may not average so large as in some other years, but there are more buyers each succeeding season.

A DEMONSTRATION of the various kinds of grafting was given by S. Imura, of the Alvin Japanese Nursery Co., of Alvin, Tex., at the March meeting of the Mobile Floral and Horticultural Society. He said little grafting is being done now in that section.

THERE is little doubt that the nursery interests will have a large and profitable spring season, but it is open to question if there ever again will be the big orchard plantings that created the wonderful demand for fruit trees in the last ten years.

THE Delaware Orchard & Nursery Co., of Delaware, O., has been organized, and papers for $10,000 capitalization are being taken out. The officers are: President, J. C. Vergon; secretary, C. O. Allen, Jr.; treasurer, A. Ward Smith; directors, R. L. Hudson, C. C. Cowgill, John Davis, J. F. Dodd and W. S. Patten.

SPRING business is booming with the Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards Co., of Louisiana, Mo. A gain of over 1,000 orders in one week was recorded in the last issue of Stark Tree Talk, the house organ. In one mail 694 were received. Eugene Duncan, treasurer, who has been sales manager for almost seventeen years, is more than pleased at this selling feat.

THE Maine Agricultural Experiment Station has issued, as bulletin No. 220, a pamphlet on "Woolly Aphids of the Elm," which treats of the elm aphids of the eastern United States and gives a list of aphids recorded from all parts of the world on other plants as well as the elm. It is by Edith M. Patch and includes a full bibliography and six pages of illustrations.

We have always found The Review a top notcher as to results received from wholesale advertising of nursery stock.—Atlantic Nursery Co., per D. W. Babcock, Mgr., Berlin, Md., January 16, 1914.

THE Turlock Nursery, of Turlock, Cal., is the successor of the Hughson-Turlock Nursery Co. J. A. Lind is the proprietor and George H. Starr the manager of the concern.

FROM the position as gardener on the N. W. Harris estate, at Lake Geneva, Wis., Theodor Styrpejko has gone to Glenview, Ill., where he will be employed by Swain Nelson & Sons Co., at the nurseries.

PART of the Parker Whitney estate near Loomis, Cal., has been leased to a nursery company, and it is reported that one of the largest citrus nurseries in the country will be located here, as the soil is well adapted to this kind of stock.

If automobile trucks may be taken as signs of prosperity, business is good in Painesville, O., where W. B. Cole, of the Mentor Avenue Nurseries, and Julius Kohankie, of the Ornamental Nurseries, have both added motor trucks to their equipment.

DAMAGES FOR DELAYED TREES.

The liability of a railway company for delaying fruit trees in transit was involved in the recent case of Peeples vs. Yazoo & Mississippi Railroad Co., 64 Southern Reporter 262, which was passed upon by the Mississippi Supreme Court. Mr. Peeples, having contracted to fill several orders for fruit trees at Grenada, Miss., ordered a shipment from a nursery at Concord, Ga. Although the shipment was made November 18, it did not arrive at its destination until December 19. When the trees were unpacked, it was found that many of them had perished in transit and were unfit for use. Mr. Peeples received the trees, sold them for $250 and sued for the net amount of his loss, $225.

The railway company relied on the defense that the shippers at Concord, Ga., contracted with the other railway company, which received the shipment for transportation and delivered it to the defendant as a connecting carrier, for shipment of the trees at a reduced rate (about one-half of the regular rate) upon condition that the liability should be limited to a certain valuation per hundred pounds, which in this instance would amount to a total valuation of $66. The defendant railway company also contended that plaintiff was not entitled to recover for the reason that he had sold part of the trees for more than the entire shipment had cost him, and that the damages which he could recover were to be limited by the initial cost of the trees and not by the selling price. No evidence was introduced at the trial to establish the market value of the trees at their destination other than the prices at which he had contracted to sell them there to his customers.

The Supreme Court, in affirming judgment in the plaintiff's favor, decided that, without specific proof, it was to be found that there was negligent delay in delivering the shipment, since thirty-one days were consumed in the transportation. It was also held that, since the evidence did not disclose that the lower freight rate, granted plaintiff because of the valuation placed by the shippers upon the trees, was based upon a schedule of rates filed with and approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, plaintiff was entitled to recover the full value of the trees. On the question of computing the amount of his loss, it was decided that the price at which he contracted to sell the trees at Grenada must be taken as the measure of the value of the shipment to him, in the absence of evidence showing that the trees had a lower market value at that point.

FIGHTING POSTAGE INCREASE.

Representing the mailing plant houses of Springfield, O., Roy McGregor, president of the Springfield Florists' Club, was sent to Washington on first news of the doubling of the postage on small parcels. He spent a week seeking to advance the repeal of the law that imposed the burden on the trade. Mr. McGregor presented the plantmen's story, as follows:

"For more than twenty-five years prior to the enactment of the postoffice appropriation bill approved March 9, 1914, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants were distributed through the mails as fourth-class matter at a flat rate of one-half cent per ounce up to four pounds.

"In an effort to extend the benefit of the parcel post system and the rates, the postoffice appropriation bill, in its last clause, provides as follows:

That seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants shall hereafter be embraced in and carried as fourth-class matter, and for the same rates of postage: Provided, That the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, by order, fix the time within which all parcels of the fourth class shall be delivered.

"This clause, in so far as it affects the first few ounces of mailable matter, doubles the rate of postage as compared with the rate which has been in force for more than twenty-five years.

"1. The seed and plant industry has distributed millions of catalogues under a long standing published rate of one-half cent per ounce to eight ounces. The fourth-class rate of 1 cent to four ounces, as carried by the last clause of the appropriation bill, doubles the cost of the distribution of the seeds ordered through these catalogues.

"2. The enactment of the law March 9, 1914, the beginning of the season, affects ninety to ninety-five per cent of the mailing expenses resulting from the distribution of the millions of catalogues. This action, taken without notice to any of the interested parties, is far-reaching and is daily affecting the seed and plant industry. The advertising brings hundreds of thousands of trial orders for single sample packages, or collections of sample packages, prepared and offered at small prices from which no profit is expected by the seedsmen or plantmen. The double postage rates will result in an added expense of thousands of dollars on the business.

"3. In conducting the seed and plant industry, it is absolutely necessary to have published advertising in existence for more than thirty years, or since the carrying of packages by mail commenced. In volume the orders are received in the proportions of 100,000 or more small, to 1,000 or less large. We are now well started into the planting season and all orders must be filled promptly; otherwise, the business methods of houses of high standing will be brought in question, and complaints and loss of business will follow. There is no way, therefore, by which the seedsmen and plantsmen may temporarily protect themselves against the burdens which the present law has cast upon them.

"4. There are approximately 10,000 seedsmen and plantsmen in the United States, who annually distribute the seeds and plants to gardeners and farmers, who supply markets with the vegetable products which are consumed on every table of every house in the land. The distribution of the seeds and plants at a low cost through the advertising by these seedsmen and plantsmen is doing more to reduce the high cost of living than any other known agency."

RIDGE—The ridge is in two pieces and so milled that the cap has an absolutely even overhang on both sides. The cap is angled out to take the top edge of the sash, making it weather tight. The purlin cross tie is supported by the steel ridge rod which goes through the ridge and is bolted on the outside. The roof bars are not toe-nailed to the ridge, but screwed to it by a steel ridge bracket. The ridge is shipped with these brackets all spaced and screwed in place.

VENT HEADER—The vent header is not cut in short lengths and placed between the bars—it is in long lengths and cut out to fit accurately over the bars.

EAVE PLATE—This plate is our Patented Ice Clearing Angle Iron, one which the Government has given us the sole privilege of using. The wrought iron post is securely bolted to it by a specially fitted fitting.

SILL—The sill is securely fastened to the wrought iron post by steel angle knees. The post has an ample sized base at the bottom to form a good solid grip for the concrete.

Next to Our Iron Frame— Best Buy fore

It will be to your advantage to go over this description carefully and prove to yourself that next to our Iron Frame House, this Pipe Frame House is the one for you to buy.

In place of supporting the roof with steel rafters, running, as they do in our Iron Frame House, from the eave plate to the ridge, and tying each rafter together with angle iron purlins for the support of the roof bars, we use for the main support our Giant Arch, with its V-shaped bracing and ridge rod support.

This arch is made of pipe columns set in adjustable cast iron foot pieces; the columns being clamped to the purlins, which every 8 feet 4 inches, are tied by a cross pipe tie. This cross tie is both braced and supported by pipe braces running diagonally from the center of the cross tie to the pipe purlins placed midway between the ridge and main pipe purlin.

As a still further tie and brace, a solid steel rod extends from the center of the cross tie right through the ridge and is bolted on the top of the ridge outside.

The main purlin is secured to the gable rafter by a specially strong is bolted through the rafter. Not screwed to it, mind you, but it's plain to see that this Giant Arch forms "a tower of strength" in holding the house up and keeping the house down. It also ties the structure securely together, making a framework of great strength, rigidity and safety. Up to a certain width this Pipe Frame House of ours cannot be beat for the money. No house built, which anything like approaches it for safety, is any lighter. No house built is as safe that is built any lighter. Next to our Iron Frame House, its erection cost is lowest—lower even than an all wood house.

For either connected or separate houses, the L. & B. Pipe Frame Construction is thoroughly practical and a mighty good buy.

When you compare our estimates with others, you may find that our house, built as we know it is best to build it, costs somewhat more. But the only reason it does cost more is because there is more material in it to cost. At the same time, however, it is well to remember that there is no more material in it than is necessary to make it a rigid, enduring house, such as you can absolutely depend upon. No matter what kind of construction you are thinking of buying—make sure you know all there is to know about our Pipe Frame. After that it is time enough to decide which you will buy.

We will be only too glad to take the matter up with you. Write us.

GIANT ARCH CLASPS—A single bolted split clasp secures the column to the purlin. A double bolted split clasp grips together the column and cross tie. The purlin is firmly secured to the gable rafter by a special fitting bolted (not screwed) to the rafter.

V-SHAPED BRACING—The cross tie to the Giant Arch, with its V-shaped bracings extending to the purlins, is supported by an iron rod which goes through the ridge and is bolted on the outside.

COLUMN BASE—The bases are cast in one piece and the column secured with a set screw, giving a four-inch adjustment up and down.

All these firms are advertising telegraph and out-of-town orders for Easter, and surely the exchange of orders for Easter week will be a record breaker.

Compare dues from $1.00 to $5.00 annually with other methods of obtaining results. Can you afford not to receive orders from the above whose Telegraph business is estimated over $500,000 annually? Guarantee orders to your customers. It will bring results.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

ST. LOUIS, MO. January 11, 1913.

Florists' Publishing Co.,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1912, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders .....	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders.....	113.20
Net value of orders.....	$452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The local wholesale market has been loaded down with everything that is seasonable and the condition bids fair to continue during the present week. From the reports of our wholesalers, business was light last week, although on some days there was a strong demand, but hardly enough to make an impression on the large consignments that came in. The retailers, too, say that had it not been for funeral work the week would have been extremely dull. From these reports it looks as though Lent this year has hurt more than in previous years.

The bulk of the stock that is seen daily at the wholesale houses is of fine quality. The glut has been mainly of violets, sweet peas and carnations. With Easter two weeks off, it looks as though violets will be through by that time, especially if the warm weather continues. Sweet peas no doubt will continue plentiful right up to Easter. These have been selling at low prices all week and special sales prices were posted on these in all the stores downtown. Carnations also suffered somewhat all week and seem to be right in their prime now. Valley sold at $3 per hundred, as the demand was slow and the supply large. Easter lilies are not any too plentiful, as they are being held back for next week. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are not in oversupply, but there are enough for the demand. Southern jonquils flooded the market last week. Roses also are in heavy supply at all of the markets, with Killarney leading. Long, fancy Beauties are not any too plentiful, but shorts are in big supply.

city. All orders given prompt attention.

Everything in greens is plentiful, with asparagus in good demand, as also are ferns. Other greens are somewhat slow sale.

According to reports from the local plant growers, all Easter blooming plants will be plentiful.

Various Notes.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, April 15 will start shipping advance orders of his new yellow canna, Queen Helen.
The sale promises to be quite large.

Thomas Carr opened his big stands at Union market last week and reports trade in plants, seeds and bulbs as starting heavily. Other plant stands are advertised to open this week.

George E. Kessler, landscape architect for the park department, delivered an address at the City Club, March 27, on "City Plantings as a Commercial Asset."

Alex. Geranios, head of the Metropolitan Floral Co., says business has been good of late. Artistic window displays help greatly with transient trade.

Dr. George T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanic Garden, will lecture at Washington University, April 13, on "Edible and Poisonous Mushrooms."

A visit to the store of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. found all hands busy as bees. C. B. Mundt tells us that late hours are needed to fill orders. Other seed houses all have their hands full at present. The St. Louis Seed Co. expects to open the new stand at 406-408 North Broadway this week.

George Pring, who has charge of the orchid houses at the Missouri Botanic Garden, lectured at the Washington University March 11, and again March 18, on "Evolution of the Chrysanthemum" and "Pollination of Plants." His talks were illustrated with lantern slides and were extremely interesting.

The trade was glad to see Julius Dilloff back on the job. Representing Schloss Bros., of New York, he paid the trade a visit last week.

Ostertag Bros. report a great season in store decorations for spring openings.

The floral departments of Vandervoort's and the Grand Leader have had a busy week selling trees, plants and shrubs. Bargain sales of cut violets and sweet peas, too, gave them plenty of work daily.

C. C. Sanders, head of the Sanders Nursery, says that they will be well supplied with extra fine Easter lilies this year. The nursery department is busy.

The Riessen Floral Co., on South Broadway, has put in a busy week with funeral work. The reopening of the old Southern hotel across the way will help business greatly.

The Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., on Delmar avenue, has an attractive display of blooming plants. Preparations are being made to handle a large Easter trade.

Young's Olive street store and their uptown branch on Waterman avenue put in a busy week with shipping orders. William Young, at the branch, says they are in for a rushing spring plant trade.

The Market.

Business has slackened up a bit and appears to be quiet all around, but from appearances, this is only temporary. Some stores have been busy with small decorations for spring openings, but in general the Lenten season has been felt more during the last week than at any time yet. The market is overstocked with some flowers, which have to be cleared at almost any figure. Carnations arrive in large consignments. They are quite brittle in stem. American Beauties are in fair demand and of good quality. Cecile Brunner has been used extensively of late in corsage and basket work.

Pansies and daisies sell well. There are great quantities of tulips on the market, but not so many daffodils and jonquils. However, the stock will be plentiful at Easter. Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities and sell well, especially the lavender shades. Violets are plentiful and have to be almost given away toward the end of each week. Single California violets, however, sell well at fair prices. Green goods are fairly plentiful, except smilax. This has been terribly scarce for some weeks.

Various Notes.

The Lamberton conservatories, at Highland park, are displaying a beautiful show of blooming shrubs, Dutch bulbs, acacias, etc. The public in general is much interested in the orchids and cactus displays.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fischer, of Chicago, have been visiting relatives in the city during the last few days.

QUALITY FLOWERS

JOHN A. KELLER

125 E. 5th Street

Member F. T. D.

Philadelphia, was in town last week, receiving several orders for immediate shipment. He reports business good, with an especially good outlook for the spring trade.

H. E. Wilson has just received a large shipment of baskets for Easter and a good selection of art-craft ware. Business with this firm is extremely good, including a large out-of-town trade.

There were many large funeral designs sent to the funeral of William H. Underwood, assistant traffic manager of the New York Central lines. A large number of pieces were shipped from Chicago.

Harry Merritt's carnations are bringing him compliments from many sources. The greenhouse is in fine condition and he is expecting to make large cuts for the Easter trade.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., is growing extremely good carnations. His house of sweet peas are already showing blooms and he hopes to have them in good supply for Easter week. He expects to have some Martha Washington geraniums in bloom at that time.

James Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., is shipping some extra fine sweet peas into the Rochester market.

John Dunbar gave an interesting lecture entitled "Trees and Their Growth" Friday, March 27, to one of the largest girls' departments of this city.

H. J. H.

Washington, Ia.—Joseph P. Melinsky, who sold his greenhouses to A. J. Peterson, of Cedar Rapids, is retiring from business on account of ill health and will take treatment at Excelsior Springs, Mo., for a time.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

One thing after another happens to enable florists to keep busy. Consequently, thus far the Lenten season has not been so dull this year as it has been known to be before. The weather, however, has been nothing to boast of, as we have had but a small percentage of favorable days for the Easter lily crop; thus the complaint of the local growers is that the stems will not be nearly so long as usual this season and some fear that only a small percentage will be in bloom. If the weather during the next week proves to be bright and warm, Easter returns on lilies will be much better than what they are at present expected to be. Other bulbous stock for Easter is showing up fine, and present indications promise an abundant supply. At the present time, stock of all kinds is equal to all demands.

Various Notes.

Another little sunbeam, in the form of a baby daughter, has come to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Schaefer. Last week Mr. Schaefer had a special sale on baskets arranged with flowers at $1 each, which he reports took well. James Ewing and Clifford Bittner, of the Miami Floral Co., visited the greenhouses of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., last week.

Mrs. J. W. Rodgers has recently returned from a two weeks' visit with relatives in Middletown, O.

Mrs. B. Haschke says she is counting on a big business for Easter and is making preparations to have a full line of all kinds of stock.

It is just a year ago that Dayton was visited by that disastrous flood, and there was positively nothing doing in any line of business. Today everything has resumed its old appearance except that in many cases great improvements have been made. All of our florists are in their former places of business and congratulate themselves that the flood did not scare them out, as everything is progressing nicely with them.

Herbert Bartholomew is suffering with a badly wrenched leg, as the result of playing baseball March 29.

J. W. Rodgers, manager of the Miami Floral Co., risked his life and wrecked the company's auto truck March 26 in an effort to avoid running over a 7-year-old boy who dropped from the back of a wagon, on which he was stealing a ride, directly in front of the machine, which was heavily loaded with plants for shipment. The auto was less than its length from the boy when he was first observed. Mr. Rodgers threw on the emergency brake and turned the car as far as he could to the right; it plunged over the curb and crashed into the windows of the People's Railway office, but as it went the fender struck the lad, badly cutting his face and rendering him unconscious.

I. Bayersdorfer, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, made his regular spring visit to the Dayton florists last week. R. A. L.

Short Hills, N. J.—Thomas Jones received a verdict of $3,200 in the Circuit court at Newark March 26 in his suit against the Public Service Gas Co. for $6,000 damage to his plants from gas escaping from a broken main of the company. The jury took three and one-half hours to reach this verdict.

The Market.

Business during the last week has been an improvement over the preceding one. Funeral work has taken up a large quantity of otherwise surplus stock. Retail trade is picking up and many orders are being received for Easter trade. Roses and carnations are to be had in quantity and are moving fairly well, but at a low price, considering the quality. Violets are in good demand, with the supply generous, but it is doubtful if the crop will hold out until Easter. Locally grown jonquils are in good demand, and good prices are realized on first-class stock. The southern supply of jonquils is now at its height and they are to be had at a low price, being sold at retail on the street corners as low as 2½ cents a dozen. Sweet peas are being used as fast as they accumulate. Prices are not good. The weather has been mild and springlike, which no doubt helped to increase business. The green goods supply is still unequal to the demand, with no prospect of improvement.

Various Notes.

Wm. Feast and George Pierce were visitors at the New York show during the last week.

To promote the backyards beautifying cause, one of the local newspapers is offering a line of flower seed at the rate of 1 cent a packet, and is to be commended for its efforts, although it is doubtful if the cause will be greatly benefited thereby, as germinating flower seed outdoors under unfavorable conditions is a task a professional florist would hesitate at. It remains to be seen if the plan is successful.

J. M. Rider, of Brooklyn, Md., is sending some fine flowers of an undissemated seedling light pink carnation to the Leo Niessen Co. This variety is a seedling from Enchantress and was originated by Chas. Seigwart. It is of a pleasing shade of flesh pink and, unlike its parent, does not fade, holding its color the entire season. Its ready sale is insured by this feature, and it is safe to predict a good future for this carnation. It no doubt will supplant its parent as soon as it is sent out. All those who have seen it have expressed the opinion that it is better than Enchantress in many ways.

James Hamilton, of Mt. Washington, is cutting a heavy crop of Double White Killarney at the present time. Killarney and Radiance are also showing up well. Anyone who is interested will be well repaid for a visit to these greenhouses to view two large houses of roses literally covered with flowers. Azaleas and lilies for Easter are also looking well.

Notice of the death of Charles J. Precht will be found in this week's obituary column.

C. M. Wagner, who has been on the sick list, is able to be about again, although far from well.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was in New York last week attending the show. W. F. E.

Fergus Falls, Minn.—Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Mehlin, who recently sold their greenhouse business here, are spending the winter in the south. They are now at Mobile, Ala., where they will stay for at least two months.

Album OF Designs

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear

75c PER COPY POSTPAID
$6.00 PER DOZEN BY EXPRESS

The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-second annual convention, Washington, D. C., June 23 to 25, 1914.

WILLIAM F. LANGE, of Appleton, Wis., has moved his seed business from Meade street to 786 Appleton street.

THE prices on onion sets at Nashville, Tenn., seem to be on the rise at present, while certain varieties of beans are practically off the market.

GOVERNMENT records show that March 1, 1913, there were seeds to the value of $31,191 in bonded warehouses at the port of New York. One year later the valuation was $25,700.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has directed the Southern Pacific railroad to refund $76 to Northrup, King & Co., on account of unreasonable rates on seed shipped from Coyote, Cal., to Minneapolis, Minn.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture is urging farmers to be more attentive to the matter of good seed potatoes, pointing out that the use of high grade seed would easily add ten per cent to the crop, or 34,000,000 bushels, easily worth $20,000,000.

IF the development of cold storage had done nothing else for florists it would have been worth a great deal simply for having made the Easter lily an all-the-year-round flower. The cold storage lily bulb business has become one of the important branches of the trade.

THE amendment of the New York agricultural law in regard to the inspection and sale of seeds, recently introduced by Mr. Tallett, has passed the legislature and received the approval of the governor. It changes the method of testing samples from "by count" to "by weight." In all other respects the law is unchanged.

THE officials of the St. Louis Seed Co. have been absolved from blame for the loss of seven lives, which occurred March 17 in their store when the building was crushed by the collapse of a wall of the burned building next door. The coroner's jury censured the building commissioner for permitting the opening of adjoining places of business while the insecure walls were standing.

IN general March was an excellent month for the mail-order seedsmen. Most of the houses did as much as usual, while in certain sections, notably the middle west, the increase was large. Counter trade did not open up as early as expected, because of the late spring, but conditions are fairly satisfactory. The best season, however, is one in which spring comes early and not too suddenly. It looks as though this year many sections would have but a few days for the spring gardening fever to run its course.

NOT SO FAST.

The bill to restore the two-ounces-for-a-cent rate of postage on parcels of seeds and plants weighing eight ounces or less made wonderful progress up to March 25, but there it stuck. As reported exclusively in The Review last week, the bill introduced in the Senate March 20 was passed March 23. It reached the House next day, was in committee only a few hours, and was favorably reported March 25. Since then nothing has been doing. The attention of the House has been wholly occupied with the Panama canal tolls question, which was decided March 31, so that action may now be taken on the postage bill unless the interval has been sufficient to allow the people who want low rates for something else to get in their work.

THE SALE OF INFERIOR SEED.

Damages Recoverable by Buyer.

This article sets forth the general rules of law applicable to a suit for damages for breach of an express or implied warranty of the quality of seeds sold, without direct reference to the rules specially applicable where seeds prove to be of a different variety from that contracted for, or where they are without germinating power, or contain noxious weed seed, foreign substances, etc.

When a purchaser of seed acquires knowledge of the inferior character of seed before he sows the same, the seller is not liable for damages resulting to either the crop or the land in consequence of the use of such inferior seed. (Robert W. Oliver & Co. vs. Hawley, 5 Nebraska Supreme Court Reports 439.) This was a flax seed case. But only such damages as appear to be a direct and natural result of the breach of warranty are recoverable. (Florida Supreme Court, Vaughan's Seed Store vs. Stringfellow, 48 Southern Reporter 410.)

Estimating the Damages.

The measure of damages recoverable for a breach of warranty in a sale of seed is the difference between the value of the crop raised from it and the greater value the crop would have possessed if the seed had been of the kind represented. This principle applies whether the seed proves to be merely inferior or wholly worthless. In determining the value of the crop which should have been raised, the season, the character of the land, the manner in which it was cultivated, and the crops which were grown in the neighborhood from the same kind of seed as that which was contracted for, are facts properly taken into consideration. (Kentucky Court of Appeals, Crutcher & Co. vs. Elliott, 13 Kentucky Law Reporter 592.)

In the case of Phillips vs. Vermilion, 91 Illinois Appellate Court Reports 133, it was decided that the fact that a purchaser of seeds was a tenant on shares and sowed them on the leased land did not affect his right to recover, as damages for breach of warranty, the full indemnity which it was the object of the contract to secure. Such a contract, the court held, inures to the benefit of the landlord as well as of the tenant. In a recent case on this same point, it was held by the Washington Supreme Court that the landlord may join his tenant in bringing the suit. (Fuhrman vs. Interior Warehouse Co., 116 Pacific Reporter 666.)

Before the Seed is Sown.

When the purchaser discovers the inferior quality of the seed before sowing the same, but elects to retain it, his remedy, according to the Nebraska Supreme Court, is a claim for any excess of the contract price over the market value of the seed received. (Dunn vs. Bushnell, 88 Northwestern Reporter 693.) This same rule has been applied by the Georgia Supreme Court in the case of Americus Grocery Co. vs. Brackett, 46 Southeastern Reporter 657.)

Applying the principle that a seller is not liable for consequences of a breach of warranty which he could not have foreseen, it has been held by the New York Supreme Court that if a seller of seed did not know that the buyer intended to mix them with other seed, the value of such other seed could not be taken into consideration in fixing the amount of damages recoverable by the purchaser for any breach of warranty on the seller's part. (Fox vs. Everson, 27 Hun. 355.) S.

WHAT THE CONGRESSMAN SAID.

In reporting to the House, March 25, the Senate bill to restore the rate of postage on small parcels of seeds and plants, Representative Finley, of South Carolina, said:

"When the parcel post was under consideration the question as to whether parcel-post rates should be applied to seeds, bulbs, etc., had not been determined. There was considerable opposition to the inclusion of seeds, for most of the seeds sent by mail were contained in small packages sold for 2, 3, 4 and 5 cents.

"The old law provided that—

The postage on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants shall be charged at the rate of one cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, subject in all respects to the existing law.

"Under the parcel-post rates the postage would have been doubled on all packages under four ounces in weight, and on packages over four ounces the pound rate and the zone system would have applied. This would have been an increase not desired by anybody on all small packages. In order to work out a system that would be fair, and to afford nals, and it was finally agreed by all interested that seeds, etc., exceeding eight ounces in weight should be given parcel-post rates, but that packages under eight ounces should be sent at the old rate of 1 cent for two ounces. Several bills were introduced in the House and were under consideration by this committee fixing such rates. It was thought best by the committee that the question should be submitted in a separate bill, and action would have to be taken on the bills pending after consideration.

"However, after the House had passed H. R. 11338, being the general appropriation bill for the postal service, the Senate attached the following as an amendment:

That seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants shall hereafter be embraced in and carried as fourth-class matter, and for the same rates of postage, which would have included seeds, etc., at parcel-post rates.

"This amendment was agreed to by the House and is now the law.

"It was soon discovered that this was a mistake, as it increased rather than diminished the rates of nine-tenths of the seeds sent through the mail.

"The senator who had introduced the amendment hastened to correct the error and introduced the bill under consideration (S. 4980), which was passed by the Senate without opposition March 23, and is now before the House. It is approved by the department, by the seedsmen, and by the farmers and gardeners, and no objections to the bill have been presented to the committee, which recommends that the Senate bill 4980 be passed.

"The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants shall hereafter be embraced in and carried as fourth-class matter and for the same rates of postage: Provided, That all packages thereof containing eight ounces or less shall be charged for at the rate of 1 cent for two ounces or fraction thereof: Provided further, That the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, by order, fix the time within which all parcels of the fourth class shall be delivered.

FROM WASHINGTON STATE.

I have an item of interest for The Review's seed department. Seven years ago I sent to Washington, D. C., for some clover seed that had just been imported from the province of Orel, Russia. I sowed ten pounds, with oats, on newly cleared stump land, for hay. I have had a perfect stand ever since, with no dead plants showing. I shall sow more seed this season, in rows eighteen inches apart, and every other row will be the common red clover. I shall cultivate and fertilize all the rows with a view to increase the seed production of the Orel clover, which is a shy producer of seed. The Orel is a clean-stemmed variety and always free from the fuzzy growth of the common red clover.

My crocuses commenced blooming February 10 and are now about gone. My 2, 3, 4 and 5-year-old Washington-grown hyacinths are in full bloom and some of the 5-year-olds compare well with imported first sizes.

In the month of December, 1913, there was not a single cold day here, and there was no snow. The month of February, 1914, was mild and moist, with not a cold day. In February there was only one day when the mercury dropped as low as 14 degrees above zero, and at noon on that day the recorded temperature was 61 degrees is the leading American Seed Catalogue, the Silent Salesman of The House of Burpee, and is the Plain Truth About Seeds That Grow. It will be found to contain more information of genuine value to the planter—professional or amateur—than is found in any other book of its kind.

Burpee's Seeds Grow!

Extraordinary care and the methods of The House of Burpee make it possible for us to maintain the truthfulness of this slogan.

should write for our BLUE LIST. This is our Wholesale Price List for those who plant for profit. The Business of Market Growing does not warrant the use of seeds of unknown quality any more than the use of haphazard methods.

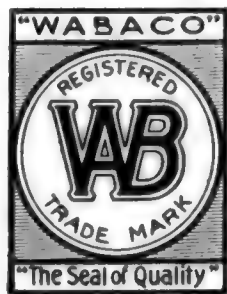

We will gladly mail both our ANNUAL, which is a descriptive catalogue, and our BLUE LIST, which contains the right prices for florists and market gardeners. Our Blue List contains the whole list of desirable florists' seeds.

Burpee's Flower Seeds for Florists

At Fordhook Farms (in Pennsylvania), Sunnybrook Farm (in New Jersey), and our Floradale Farm (in California) we are growing acres of flower seeds, especially those varieties that do best in the different localities. Other flower seeds are produced on contract by careful growers both at home and abroad—subject to personal inspection. The same care is used in testing and proving the excellence of our flower seeds that has made Burpee's vegetable seeds famous. Superior quality cannot be secured from any source.

SOME SEED USED HERE.

Beginning with small amounts sent out by express a few years ago, California cantaloupe shipments have gradually grown until last year they reached 3,500 cars. An estimate by J. W. McClymonds, general manager of the Pacific Fruit Express, places this year's shipments at over 5,000 cars, which will begin to move about May 20. The acreage in Imperial valley set out in cantaloupes is figured at 8,203, as against 5,834 last year.

IMPORTS.

During the week ending March 21, 1914, the imports of seeds through the port of New York were as follows:

A SHORT STORY

Occasionally you hear a "KNOCK" regarding our Cannas, but when you trace and run it down, you will find that the "hammer is out" from the fellow who has Cannas to sell.

During the past ten years we have sold over 5,000,000 Cannas and our trade for this stock is increasing every year; doesn't look as if our Cannas were poor or untrue, does it?

This year our growing stock was inspected by Mr. Boddington personally. No, we don't grow them ourselves in New York city; they are contracted and grown for us by—
(To be continued in our next).

Also, we were the first to popularize the Canna and to put King Humbert within the reach of all. We put the "Can" in Cannas and we are going to keep it there.

TOMATOES DOING POORLY.

I am having trouble with my tomato plants in the greenhouse. It is the second crop this winter, but before setting this time I sterilized the soil. The plants are now about twenty inches high, with flowers and fruit. They are beginning to wilt quite fast, and when I pull them I find them like the sample I am sending. Is there any remedy now, or do you think the disease was in the seed? What would you advise?

J. F. J.

Sterilizing the soil should not be any reason for the tomatoes doing poorly, but rather the running of successive crops in the same soil. Some plants will stand this, but tomatoes most decidedly will not. If you used some other crop, such as lettuce or sweet peas, to follow tomatoes, and then ran tomatoes to succeed them, you would hardly have any trouble. I think the soil has been somewhat tomato sick, to use a common phrase, and I would strongly advise a rotation of crops. Large market growers who do this rarely have any trouble. I do not think the seed has been at all to blame.

GREEN APHIS ON LETTUCE.

What shall I do to get rid of the little green bugs on my lettuce? I have sprayed with cold water, but this does no good. Will an insecticide, such as Lemon Oil, damage the lettuce?

H. L. S.

You cannot get rid of green fly on lettuce by syringing with cold water or with any insecticide. Cold water, to be effective, must be used with force, which is out of the question with lettuce. Insecticides might kill a large proportion of the pests if carefully applied, but these aphides are hard to reach even with spray materials, particularly when the lettuce has started to head up. Fumigation, therefore, is the best remedy. Most of the large lettuce growers now use hydrocyanic acid gas. This is a deadly gas, and the greatest care is necessary when using it. Formulas for this have frequently been given in The Review. Other fumigants, such as evaporated nicotine extracts or one of the tobacco papers, can be used with perfect safety. To keep lettuces clean you must fumigate them regularly. Once the plants get badly infested they are, to a large extent, crippled, and two fumigations given one or two nights apart may be necessary to clean them.

The Market.

There has been an oversupply of practically all flowers in the market this week. While this applies more particularly to the cheaper grades, it is also true to some extent of the better ones. As usual before Easter, quite a number of Easter lilies are making their appearance, both cut and in pots. While many of the plants will not make it, there still will be an abundant supply on time. Lilium giganteum is the variety most grown here. Azaleas are likely to be scarce, most of the later flowering varieties being over. There will be a good supply of rhododendrons, spiræas and other flowering plants, but good ferns are likely to be in short supply. Imported wistarias are beautiful now and make a fine show in the windows. Bulbous stock is at its best, practically all the varieties now being in. A few pot lilacs and pots of lily of the valley are attractive. The business has run largely to funeral work, all the stores being busy in the mornings.

C. E. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, returned from Imperial Valley looking much better for the trip. Fred Sperry is also back on the job again and ready for the Easter rush.

Business is keeping up well at the wholesale store of Murata & Co., where orders for Easter stock are coming in freely. Miss Parsons, of Fresno, was a recent visitor here, and Mr. Murata informs me that she has a magnificent new store 30x100 feet, splendidly equipped, one of the best west of the Mississippi.

Staiger & Mundwiler are in fine shape for Easter, lily of the valley and all other seasonable stock looking fine. Mr. Staiger made a flying visit to San Diego recently and was well satisfied with the business done.

Frank Lichtenberg, who has been under the weather for some time with neuritis, is back at the store, looking much better. The business in the meantime has been well taken care of by his able lieutenants, Messrs. Bateman and Brose. Mr. Lichtenberg has reason to be pleased with the excellent business done at the store since his removal from Fifth street.

George Eischen is back in town, looking up old friends and acquaintances. I was sorry to hear of his father's sickness at his home in Montebello. Fred Westrom also has returned and is going to take up his old position at Wright's Flower Shop.

Gus Swenson is sending in magnificent tulips and other bulbous stock.

Howard & Smith have a splendid show in their store this week. The large room lends itself admirably to this kind of display, large banks of rhododendrons, azaleas and the beautiful varieties of hippeastrum for which this firm has become famous, lending color to the scheme, while the splendid kentias and other palms give a graceful finish that would be quite impossible in a smaller room.

Henry Turner is again to be seen on the roads around Montebello in his Stoddard-Dayton, the latter resplendent in a new body and every up-to-date equipment.

The Redondo Floral Co. reports business good, especially in funeral work.

The H. N. Gage Co. reports good sales, both in wholesale flowers and nursery stock.

John Gordon, manager for Wolf-skill's and Morris Goldenson, says that his orders and inquiries for Easter are away beyond those of last year. Funeral work has also been active.

Large consignments of plants from the north are being received at Darling's Flower Shop in preparation for Easter business.

Charles Shaw, of the Dorman-Shaw Seed Co., Pasadena, was in town recently and reports business as picking up finely.

Ray Ward, of the shipping department of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., was injured March 24 in a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile.

Five acres of land are to be added to the Germain holdings for nursery stock.

Emil Woelfel has purchased the Roserie from the previous proprietors and took charge March 10.

look bright for a good business, with an abundance of stock. Lilies are coming on in good time, as there is not the quantity of diseased stock seen some years. Outdoor bulbous stock is in full bloom, three weeks ahead of former years.

Various Notes.

The Seattle bowlers were over for a game March 25. I have not heard the score, but a good time was reported.

The Smith Floral Co. has purchased a new delivery car to take care of the increased business of the company.

Mr. Scott, of the Pacific Stoneware Co., was in Tacoma last week. Mr. Scott has lately taken unto himself a wife. J. L. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

In retail circles the general trade has kept up remarkably, considering the season and the volume of outside stock to compete with. Funeral work has been the redeeming feature, keeping all surplus moving. Carnations are in large supply, with a slight decline in wholesale prices. Roses, while improving, are far from an overproduction; there is a good call from out of town. Single violets are almost off the market; the doubles are holding out nicely. There are grave doubts of there being many violets for Easter. Callas and Easter lilies have been plentiful and have moved well. Sweet peas are improving in quality and increasing in quantity. Daffodils are a drug on the market and are hard to move at any price. Orchids, Cecile Brunner roses and valley are equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

Louis Scott, representing the Pacific Stoneware Co., left March 23, presumably on a business trip, but it developed later it was his honeymoon as well. After swearing a few friends to secrecy, he and Miss Anna Mitchell were quietly married.

It is rumored that August Zitzewitz, who recently returned from Seattle, will enter business here.

Frank Chervenka left for Islip, L. I., having been called home on account of the death of his father.

Julius Broetje, of Oak Grove, had a big supply of cherry and prune blossoms, for which he has found ready sales.

W. L. Crissey has had phenomenal success in the growing of gladiolus bulbs. He started in a small way as an experiment, but the growth of the business was beyond his expectations.

E. J. Steele, of the Mastodon Pansy Gardens, reports that sales have exceeded his best hopes since moving to his new place. The daily sales exceed 1,200 plants, in addition to the seed trade.

The Rose Festival Association has decided to hold the rose show in the new Library hall. As usual, the show will be open to all amateurs. In addition to this, about twenty sections of the city will compete for the best display of roses. Booths will be erected on one of the streets, to be chosen later.

Zimmerman Bros., of Tigard, Ore., are bringing in a nice lot of doronicums.

The department stores are selling plants at prohibitively low prices. Two-year-old rose bushes are being sold for

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The Market.

The French shared the honors with the Irish March 17, the presence of a French battleship in the harbor on St. Patrick's day accounting for this. Business has been fair, but not rushing, and the supply of flowers is about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

At Lanier's I noted an exceptionally fine assortment of outdoor flowers, especially single and double annual chrysanthemums, phloxes and other annuals, grown on the ranch at Chula Vista. A visit to the ranch with Fortune Lanier showed everything in fine order. Mr. Lanier prides himself, and justly, upon the clean condition of the place. The houses planted to Asparagus plumosus looked fine and the whole place is a credit to the growers.

Boyle & Darnaud showed a typical Irish table decoration for St. Patrick's day, which was much admired. Some excellent stock in cut flowers and plants, including especially good azaleas, is being shown, and a look through the growing place at Sutter street showed everything in fine shape. Valley is grown in considerable quantity and a varied and healthy collection of orchids can also be seen here. Plants of Cattleya Mossiae and Dendrobium formosum are in flower.

Miss A. M. Rainford has moved to a larger store next door to her old address, on Fourth street.

Chas. E. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, and Mrs. Morton visited here en route to Brawley.

A spin through the parks with Superintendent John Morley showed a marvelous change in their appearance. The expense of planting in the way Mr. Morley is doing is heavy, but the results amply justify the means, for the trees, shrubs and other plants are already making a magnificent growth. A large rose and flower garden is being made near the entrance to the exposition grounds, which will be most attractive to visitors, but what strikes one most is the wonderful transition from bare, rocky hillside to beautiful parking, drives and flower beds in so short a space of time. In the propagating houses large quantities of young nursery stock have been raised and the quality in all cases is good. I was glad to find Mrs. Morley much improved in health. H. B. Richards.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Dull times in the flower business is still the complaint of grower and retailer. Stock is too plentiful for the demand, and probably there will not be a revival till after Lent is over, when everyone is looking for better business. Roses and carnations are plentiful and bulbous stock is hardly moving. Locally grown violets are nearly over, and sweet peas are more in evidence. Pot plants move slowly and altogether there is a depressed feeling among those in the trade.

Various Notes.

H. B. Slausson commenced to cut Ulrich Brunner roses at his place last week. This is the third season of these plants under glass, and though the crop is not so heavy as last year, the blooms and stems are, if anything, superior to former cuttings. He grows them in solid benches and commences to fire for them about Christmas.

By the fire which destroyed the pavilion at Madison park last week, Carl Melby, whose greenhouses are within a few feet of the building, suffered considerably, losing one house of giganteums that were in fine condition for Easter. The wonder is that his whole plant was not obliterated, considering the close proximity of the building and the fierce blaze that so quickly destroyed it.

John Holze, Joseph Stuber and Sidney Tomlin were the only representatives of the Florists' Club who mustered up courage enough to go to Tacoma last week to play the local bowlers on their home alleys. After the crushing defeat administered by Seattle at the last match, it was partly expected that the Tacoma bowlers would try to retrieve their lost laurels, but even this forlorn hope was too much for the Tacoma warriors, and they were defeated by fourteen pins. The Tacoma florists were lavish in their entertainment and the boys had a fine evening.

We have recently had extremely warm weather, which has brought all kinds of spring flowers into bloom much earlier than usual, but last week March showed us a change to his old habits, with cold winds, hail storms and flurries of snow.

The Easter lilies are far on for the season, and several growers are resorting to various plans to retard the expansion of the blooms. The cooler treatment should prove beneficial to the customer.

The Arcadian Florists have closed their doors after a brief period in the business.

H. B. Burdett, who is nothing if not artistic, has erected an elaborate roof garden in the rear of his greenhouses, making an otherwise unsightly potting and packing shed into a thing of beauty and a joy as long as it lasts.

Mr. Troth, of the Western National Show Gardens, at Centralia, was visiting among the trade last week.

that the bulbs are or have flowered less well than usual, but the weight of evidence is against them. The Guernsey correspondent of one of the British trade papers throws some light on the subject, as follows:

"Forced bulbs have flowered poorly and varieties in bloom in the fields also are doing poorly. That, however, is all the effect of weather conditions, and has nothing whatever to do with the quality of the bulbs, nor with the cultivation. None of our bulbs had a proper chance of getting the usual ripening during 1913. Just the bare record of last year's deficiency of sunshine will plainly show that. Guernsey's average number of hours of sunshine, during some forty years, totals out at 1,925 hours. We have had over 2,100 hours in a year. Last year gave us only 1,671 hours, or over 230 hours less than the average. It was the gloomiest and least sunny year Guernsey has ever known since meteorological records have been kept. That fact alone accounts fully for the late flowering of the bulbs this season, and for their poor floriferousness. Some of the buyers of our bulbs are complaining against the sellers; but how, in the face of such facts, can anyone expect different results?"

DON'T LIKE HATCHERI.

"With reference to Asparagus Hatcheri," says a British trade journal, "this American novelty has been in this country for the last two years, and as a market commodity it has failed to catch on. Florists consider it too heavy, while its color, so far as I have seen, is too dark. It is a vigorous grower, and yields a big crop, but a grower of my acquaintance who imported a quantity when it first came out, finds it unsuitable for the reasons mentioned."

RESTING PERIOD OF CALLAS.

We have a few callas growing in solid beds, from bulbs planted last fall. They have made a splendid growth, standing fully four and one-half feet high, and have bloomed for two months, but we think they are nearly over. We want to know how to handle the bulbs when they are through blooming. As we need the room, we can not well leave them in the ground where they now are. We also have an order of 4-inch Godfrey callas coming in and wish to know whether they should be potted or planted in the ground, and whether we can expect any blooms this year.

C. D. O.

Callas, if kept well fed and watered, should bloom profitably for at least five months. In pots they do not grow so strongly as in benches, but bloom more abundantly. As you need the space where your callas are now growing, it would be necessary to lift and store the plants in boxes for some time. The natural resting time does not come until the end of May. It will not do to dry the plants off thus early.

Godfrey callas in 4-inch pots will not flower this year. If you will take the advice of one who has grown these successfully, do not plant them out; keep in pots all the time and they will flower with wonderful profusion, out-blooming the old Calla Æthiopica about three to one.

C. W.

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you
for sale to the trade?
Is it moving as it should?
No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast
Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem,
Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.
—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion.
Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.
